Events Leading to Injury of Los Angeles Student Related to Police

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 16.—Description of how Charles Nicholas Kessler, University of Pennsylvania student from Los Angeles, drank a water glass full of whisky at one drink during the New Year's party at which his back was dislocated was given to the police today by Margaret Pedrick, pretty stenographer. With young Kessler in the hospital, his father is here from Los Angeles insisting upon a rigid investigation of the entire affair. The injured student has been unable to make a statement.

Miss Pedrick and Miriam Marshall, with two men escorts, met Kessler at the Sigma Chi fraternity house New Year's morning, and went from there to an apartment rented by a friend of the Los Angeles youth.

"Nick Kessler had a quart of whisky," Miss Pedrick said, "and bet one of the boys he could drink a glassful of it at one drink. I thought it would kill him but he did it. He kept insisting that Stuart Smith, one of the boys, get two other fellows whom I did not know so that he could beat them in a drinking contest.

"When he left the apartment, Nick seemed to be intoxicated, but his mind was pretty clear. That was the last I saw of him."

Later on New Year's Day young Kessler was found unconscious in the apartment with his back dislocated.

Pageant Fairy Burns to Death as Robes Blaze

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Nearly 1000 parents and children saw little Lillian Roberts, 13 years of age, the "Butterfly Queen" in a fairy pageant in a Newport hall, dash upon the stage her gauze-like robe aflame.

The children in the pantomime act were thrown into a panic. The "Butterfly Queen," shrieking, leaped into the audience. Mothers and fathers threw coats about her. But even as the audience was proceeding to the street word came that the "Butterfly Queen" was no more—she had died of her burns on the way to the hospital.

KING FACES DEPOSITION

Plans Made for Rumanian Coup

Immediate Establishment of Regency for Carol's Son Aim of Maneuvers

Princess Helene Determined to Obtain Divorce in Face of Opposition

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The following dispatch, which passed the Rumanian censors, is the first news reaching the outside world revealing the fact that the stage is being set in Bucharest to depose old King Ferdinand—a Hohenzollern ruler—from the throne.

From the correspondent's reference to the fact that a certain coterie in the capital wants the King to reign on the insistence that he is well enough and not too old, it is evident that arrangements are being made for the immediate establishment of a regency. The fact that Prince Carol has sold his property and is depositing the proceeds in foreign banks also indicates that he is aware of the plot, which will be sprung when the conspirators are ready to force King Ferdinand out and wish to become regents for the infant son of Prince Carol.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 16.—A royal family row is going on behind locked doors in King Ferdinand's palace. The bone of contention seems to be whether the family can stand the stigma of a divorce.

Princess Helene is determined to sever her marriage ties legally on the grounds of Prince Carol's desertion, while the King, Queen and ministers are bending every effort to prevent this. Thus far the beautiful young Greek Princess who is rapidly going blind, is stubborn and there is little hope of avoiding the divorce, if she is permitted to have her own way.

Princess Helene is reported to be softening toward Prince Carol since the return yesterday of Queen Marie from Belgrade, where she went to confer on the abdication of her son, as the Queen's influence on her daughter-in-law is said to be stronger than any other.

LEAVES FOR PARIS

The Rumanian Minister to France, M. Vintila Bratiano, a brother of the Premier, left last night for Paris, ostensibly to meet M. Nicholas Titulesco, the Minister at London, who has been in Washington discussing the settlement of the Rumanian debt, but it is rumored here that his real object is to get in touch with Prince Carol in Italy.

Though the common version of the renunciation of the throne stresses Prince Carol's past gallantries and attributes the action to erotic motives, there is substantial theory prevalent that the affair is more than a mere petticoat escapade.

Prince Carol is known to hold political views which are opposed to the Bratiano brothers, who incline toward a dictatorship idea as the elections draw near and who are strongly backed by Queen Marie.

The growing strength of the peasant party is evident everywhere and coalition of the peasants and Nationalist party is threatening to develop. The Crown Prince's absence complicates the situation seriously.

The present regime is split three ways on the question of succession. One faction favors a regency, another insists King Ferdinand is not too old and feeble and can continue to reign and a third, which is small, backs Carol and wants him to return.

STILL ANOTHER PAWN

His 7-year-old son by his morganatic marriage with Mme. Zizi Lambrino is beginning to be considered as still another pawn in the game. Mme. Zizi's boy, who also is named Carol, has the blood of the old Moldavian Soutzo dukes, the greatest family in Rumania before the German dynasty, from which Mme. Lambrino descended.

The government has allowed Mme. Zizi and her son three months to clean up their affairs and leave the country and the former Crown Prince and his former wife, who are reported to be plentifully supplied with money, must live abroad. Before he left Bucharest Prince Carol liquidated a number of his estates through his agents, depositing the proceeds in foreign banks so that he can be independent of his royal allowance.

THREE MAKE MILLION IN RUM DEALS

Partners Sell Whisky in Government Warehouses in Legitimate Way

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BARDSTOWN (Ky.) Jan. 16.—Lambert Willett, Garfield Barnes and W. O. Stiles of Bardstown, are asserted today to have made a profit of a million dollars out of whisky since prohibition began. The deals made by the three partners have been wholly legitimate, however, as the whisky they have sold has all been stored in United States government concentration warehouses.

Their latest transaction is the sale of 3200 barrels of old whiskey to Emil Schwarzhaupt of Chicago, Willett, Barnes and Stiles's original investment was $20,000.

When prohibition became effective, J. B. Beam, owner of Clear Springs Distillery, felt there was no future to the whisky business. The three partners then united their small capital and bought the distillery with the whisky stored there. The whisky has since been sold at a clear profit to the three men of a million dollars, according to the figures available here today. The 3200 barrels sold to Schwarzhaupt brought $400,000, it was said.

RUSSIA'S IRON MAN OUSTS LENIN'S HEIRS TO MANTLE

Stalin Installed as Absolute Boss Rapidly Veering to New Reign of Imperialistic Rule

BY EUGENE J. YOUNG
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]
(Copyright, 1926, by Eugene J. Young.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—When the Communist Congress met in Moscow at the end of 1924 it had to choose whether Leon Trotzky or Joseph V. Stalin should take the leadership left vacant by the death of Lenin. Stalin won. He isolated Trotzky, took the command of the army away from him, turned the powerful political bureau against him and sent him away to exile until he repented and became humble.

In this task he was aided by two other men, Leon Kameneff and Gregory Zinovieff. Each was ambitious to be the leader, Kameneff, the oldest disciple and companion of Lenin, was the head of the Political Bureau of Seven, the inner dictatorship. Zinovieff was head of the Third Internationale, the propaganda organization which was to set the whole world afire for Communism and make Zinovieff the world leader. Each wanted Trotzky removed out of his way and they played the game of Stalin.

After this victory Kameneff and Zinovieff were permitted to believe for a time that they were part of a "ruling triumvirate," composed of themselves and Stalin. I wrote at the time, however, that "Stalin emerges as the new boss of Russia." Results of the recent Communist Congress in Moscow vindicate that judgment. Stalin, whom Lenin called "the man of steel," smashed Kameneff and Zinovieff and Mrs. Lenin with them, at that party council. He is now the undisputed boss, for he has disposed of every formidable challenger.

RETAINED MASTERY

Here are some of the conclusions drawn by writers on the spot:

"In the midst of the fiery debate and party turmoil the most striking figure is Stalin," said the Associated Press correspondent. "He has retained complete mastery of the situation, dominating the convention by dynamic driving power."

"Stalin, who was re-elected general secretary of the party, emerged from the convention battle as a recognized leader, more powerful than ever before," said the New York Times correspondent.

"The Congress ends with Commissar Stalin and the central committee majority completely victorious," was the United Press verdict.

"All the ne wmembers of the political bureau were strongly solidarized with Mr. Stalin during the Congress, so Mr. Zinovieff appears quite isolated in the new bureau," was the view of the Christian Science Monitor's observer. "The victory for the Stalin viewpoint during the Congress is also reflected in the composition of the party secretariat and other bodies, where close political associates of Mr. Stalin predominate more than formerly."

These conclusions agree with

ENVOY'S WORRIES ONE LESS

Sheffield Happy When Daring Rancher Quits "Garden Spot in No Man's Land"

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 16.—George Camp, American college graduate, electrical engineer by profession, self-appointed manager of the ranch of the late Mrs. Rosalie Evans, American-born British widow, has resigned his position and taken up an offer made him on the staff of the Mexico City Light and Power Company.

With his disappearance from the scene of the turbulent wheat fields of the Evans property in the State of Pueblo, the United States Embassy here breathes a sigh of relief, for what was a perpetual worry to Ambassador James R. Sheffield has gone.

Camp's real motive in remaining on the property after Mrs. Evans was assassinated in August, 1924, has never been known. Urged repeatedly by his friends here and by the members of the United States Embassy that the danger he was running was not worth "whatever ideal he sustained," Camp, young and a crack rifle shot, preferred to retain his lonesome job in what has been classed as "a garden spot in no man's land."

It is property over which Mexican agrarians have fought and Great Britain broke relations with Mexico. England's diplomatic representative, H. A. Cunard Cummins, was expelled by Mexico, Mrs. Evans gave her life, and the United States inherited the issue when her sister, Mrs. W. E. Pettus, an

STUDENTS' HOUSE RAZED IN SPECTACULAR BLAZE

Fighters Trapped by Rapid Spread of West Adams Conflagration Battle Way Through Flames

Two firemen suffered burns and injuries and the Zeta Kappa Epsilon fraternity house of the University of Southern California was destroyed yesterday morning in a spectacular fire in the heart of the fashionable West Adams district.

The mansion at 24 St. James Park, which was burned, was owned by Oliver McCoy of 1809 Court street, Pasadena.

R. E. Stever, president of the fraternity, and twenty students were in the house when the blaze was discovered. The fire started on the roof from sparks coming from a chimney, according to fire department investigators. The flames spread so quickly that the entire top floor of the mansion was ablaze when fire apparatus arrived on the scene.

Lieut. Fred L. Brush, 43 years of age, of 1042 West Seventy-third street, attached to Engine Company, No. 15, and Frank Lanhan, 30, of 1615 South Hill street, an operator for Battalion Chief Lewis, suffered burns and injuries while endeavoring to salvage expensive furnishings on the second floor of the blazing structure.

Lieut. Brush suffered first and second-degree burns about the face and neck, in addition to bruises and lacerations. Operator Lanhan suffered several fractured ribs and superficial burns. Both men were taken to the Receiving Hospital for first-aid treatment.

The firemen were caught beneath a pile of debris when the ceiling collapsed and were forced to fight their way through a wall of flames to safety.

The interior of the mansion, a two and one-half-story structure of brick and stone, was gutted and pronounced a total loss. It was impossible to save many valuable pieces of furniture and art works, so rapidly did the flames spread throughout the fraternity house.

Several thousand persons were attracted to the fire. It was necessary to establish fire lines to prevent the spectators from trampling over the lawns and flower beds of exclusive homes near-by.

Santa Ana Men Start for Monterey to Grill Him on Santa Fe Case

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Jan. 16.—Efforts by Orange and Los Angeles county authorities and private detectives to link the name of Lieut. Clarence K. Aikin, former army officer, with the plunmering of a Santa Fe mail car last August, during which Elmer E. Campbell, veteran express messenger, was killed, were launched here today.

Detective-Sergeant George Cooley of this vity, and Special Agent C. L. Applegate of the American Railway Express left early this morning for Monterey, where Lieut. Aikin and Supply Sergeant Charles Barnes are awaiting trial on charges of attempted safe robbery. Barnes, while in jail at Pacific Grove is said to have confessed to City Marshal Ryan that Lieut. Aikin told him he killed Campbell and rifled the mail car.

"He boasted of it to show how easy it would be to get away with the Monterey safe-cracking job," Marshal Ryan quoted Barnes as saying.

Lieut. Aikin was commanding officer of Troop G, Eleventh Cavalry. Steel hooks forming part of the rope ladder by which Campbell's murderer lowered himself from the roof of the mail car were stamped: "Rock Island Arsenal, U.S.A., Issued to Troop G, Eleventh Cavalry." FUNDAMENTALISTS UNITE

Kentucky Methodists to Campaign Against Science Teaching in Public Schools of Nation

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WILMORE (Ky.) Jan. 16.—Announcement is made here of the formation of the Fundamentalists' Association, the object of which is to engage in a nation-wide campaign against modernism and not alone the theory of Darwinism that man is descended from lower animals, but to combat the idea of evolution as a fact.

Trained workers are to be put in various strategic States, the South and Central West being the first territory to be entered, but the fight will gradually cover the whole country, according to Rev. Andrew Johnson, first vice-president.

A bill will be fostered before the present session of the Kentucky Legislature to prevent the teaching, in schools supported by public money, of the evolution theory concerning man.

The officers of the organization, headquarters for which will be at Wilmore, are: President, Dr. H. C. Morrison, president of Asbury College Wilmore, a noted institution of the Methodist faith; Dr. Andrew Johnson, a leader at Asbury, first vice-president; Rev. O. P. Seevers, second vice-president; Rev. L. L. Pickett, of Asbury College, third vice-president; Rev. E. P. Carns, secretary; Rev. W. E. Harrison, corresponding secretary, and Rev. T. L. Moore, treasurer.

Mr. Pickett was the nominee of the American Party for President in 1923. All the officers are Methodist churchmen.

Mr. Johnson said the body was formed because the modernists had organized so strongly throughout the country and because fundamentalists in other parts of the country had formed against modernism. The actual organization was effected by Mr. Johnson, who has been speaking in this and other States against the evolution idea and fact.

The Fundamentalists' Association would outlaw the teaching of evolution in all educational institutions supported by the taxpayers' money, wholly or in part. This would, of course, hit State universities wherever biology, zoology and kindred courses are given. The campaign to spread the fight on evolution will begin at once, Mr. Johnson said, while a mass meeting will be called at Wilmore in the spring. A general conference on the drive and its objects will be held just before the Methodist General Conference at Memphis, Tenn., in May, he said.

From the reports generally current, the feeling is that if an antievolution measure is introduced in the Kentucky General Assembly at the present session it will probably carry because most of the Legislature members are from the rural districts where the antievolution idea is strong, residents believing the Darwinian theory hits at the teachings of the Bible.

Four years ago an antievolution measure was killed in the Legislature by a bare majority.

SIX-YEAR TEST FAILS TO HALT FIGHT ON LIQUOR

Prohibition Exponents and Foes of Law Clash in Statements of Results During Period

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The sixth anniversary of the prohibition amendment, which went into effect January 16, 1920—finds the subject of prohibition almost as bitterly contested an issue in the national capital as it was in the days when it was being fought out to a final decision.

The militant wets, particularly in the Senate, led by Senators Edge of New Jersey and Bruce of Maryland, are prepared to fight it all over again in an effort to modify the Volstead Act, their premise being that prohibition is responsible for an appalling increase in crime and other troubles. The drys, however, have plenty of ammunition.

FINDS ADVANCES

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, in his survey of the period, found greater advance in every field of activity, a greatly reduced consumption of intoxicants and cited late Census Bureau reports to substantiate his assertions that under Volsteadism drunkenness has decreased 55 per cent, while the improved national health is indicated by a reduction in the death rate.

"I haven't time to analyze Mr. Wheeler's statement as I would like to," commented Senator Edge, "but there is one paragraph that specially attracts my attention, where he refers to the Census Bureau's report of a reduced death rate which, he, of course, credits to the Volstead Act. Mr. Wheeler and his associates, whenever all else fails them, fall back on statistics. I have never felt the present situation necessitates this type of defense—what is happening is too plainly evident on every hand.

"However, here are some statistics, which may interest Mr. Wheeler and which he can't question, because they also come from the Census Bureau, which he quoted. Here is a record of the deaths from alcoholism and cirrhosis of the liver during the last fifteen years which I shall read into the record of the Senate.

INCREASE IN DEATHS

"There is always an opportunity to question the reports of arrests for drunkenness but you can not, no matter how you try, argue away a dead body. This appalling report, shows that in the years between 1920 and 1924, there was increase in the number of deaths from alcoholism ranging from a low of 25 per cent in one State to more than 800 per cent in another. Equal increases are shown for cirrhosis of the liver."

"Six years ago," said Representative Hill, Republican, Maryland, wet leader in the House, "this nation declared its departure from the principal of local self-government and began the Federal attempt to regulate the beverage liquor traffic. The Eighteenth Amendment passed six years ago today, probably has created more crime and misery than any other social factor and has violated every principle of American Federal government questioned Lieut. Aikin regarding the hooks, but their investigation made little definite progress.

A wire received here this morning from Dist.-Atty. Warth of Monterey stated that Barnes is sticking steadfastly to his original story that Lieut. Aikin confessed to him the Santa Fe hold-up.

Lieut. Aikin is at liberty on $4000 bond furnished by his father-in-law, Guy Carpenter.

A reward of $10,000 offered by the American Railway Express is outstanding for the arrest and conviction of the man or men who killed Campbell and rifled the mail car.

AERIAL POST FOR MEXICO WINS FAVOR

Official Announces Plan for Airplane Service to Principal Cities

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 16.—Aerial postal service is to be established in Mexico between the principal cities of the country, by the Mexican Aerial Navigation Company. The capital of this company will be fully subscribed by Mexicans and the control will be vested in the Ministry of Communications.

Eduardo Ortiz, Undersecretary of Communications, acting secretary, states that there are various companies, both Mexican and foreign, interested in the establishment of the aerial service in Mexico, and that the various projects which have been submitted to the consideration of the department are at present being studied by technical experts.

The undersecretary added that among the projects submitted was that of the Mexican Aerial Navigation Company, and that the proposal of this company already has been examined and approved by the technical board.

He further stated that the company in question desires to establish an aerial postal service between Mexico and Tampico; Guadalajara and Tepic; Puerto, Mex., and Progreso and to later extend the service between other important centers of the country.

POPULARITY OF GOV. HARRISON

At the history conference recently held in Indianapolis Arthur G. Mitten exhibited relics relating to Indiana's first Governor, William Henry Harrison. There were in the collection not less than thirty-five different portraits of him, the greater part of them unfamiliar to this generation. There were "lives" of him, most of them now known only to bookmen of antiquarian tastes and there were campaign books and Harrison almanacs illustrated with wood cuts of log cabins, cider barrels and Tippecanoe battle scenes, and there were bronze medals and coins embossed with his likeness.

These evidences of popularity were largely the output of the presidential campaign of 1840, when "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," was the rallying cry of the Whigs, but Harrison fairly deserved the plaudits of the multitude as a man of unusual parts. As the Governor and first director of the fortunes of Indiana Territory his position, as compared with that of his successors, was unique. As a representative of the United States in a wilderness region far removed from the seat of government, his authority and responsibilities were extraordinary. Gen. Lew Wallace thus wrote of him: "William Henry Harrison was clothed with power more nearly imperial than any ever exercised by one man in the republic. He was authorized to adopt and publish such laws, civil and criminal, as were best adapted to the condition of the territory; he could arbitrarily create townships and counties and appoint civil officers and militia officers under the grade of general. Most extraordinary of all, however, belonged the confirmation of an important class of land grants. In this regard his authority was absolute. Other approval or countersign was not required. The application was to him originally; his signature was the perfect evidence of title. When one thinks of the temptations to which he was subjected and of the fortune which he might have amassed, the fact that he issued from the trial poor and without taint upon his honor must be regarded as creditable to him in the highest degree."

The variety of public business Harrison had on his hands during his twelve years' incumbency is indicated by his messages and letters, published not long ago by the historical commission. These cover land matters in many forms, treaties with the Indians, dealings with hostile Indians, the making of laws, the appointing of officers, the protection of settlers, the adjustment of difficulties of many kinds affecting settlers, etc. These documents show the particulars of his many affairs and his disposition in dealing with them. J. P. Dunn says: "No man in public life ever had so many serious charges preferred against his honesty and came forth from his trials so fully vindicated by the judges and by the people."—[Indianapolis News.

Back to Biblical Prosperity

In the biblical times Iraq and Mesopotamia were the garden spots of the world, rich in vegetation, and since that time for one reason or another the land has been transformed into one of barrenness and desolation to a great extent. It is now proposed to restore the land to its old-time fruitfulness by modern means. These means are not so entirely modern, either, for it is proposed to make use of some of the ancient canals and waterways together with some of modern construction to form a great irrigation system which will restore the land to its former richness and fertility. About $12,000,000 will be spent on this work. The promoters of this proposition are encouraged by the great results of a similar work in Egypt, but is claimed that even greater results will be achieved in Iraq and Mesopotamia, for the Rivers Tigris and Euphrates bring down a much larger amount of rich sediment than the Nile and for this reason it will be possible to raise two or perhaps three crops a year whereas on the irrigated land of Egypt only one crop is possible.

STALIN BLOCKS BOLSHEVIK RULE

Lenin Disciples Thrown Out of Party Council

New Director Veering Toward Imperialistic State

the verdict of careful European observers and we are at last getting full recognition of the mastery of this remarkable man who is grappling with the gigantic task of making Russia over.

There is a deep significance for the world in Stalin's dominance—something much bigger than the rise of another leader in Russia.

He is leading a counter-revolution. He really represents the Russian middle classes, the employers among the peasants, the persons who want to trade and manufacture. He is friendly with the church. He wants to bring outside capital into the country and develop it. He is working to restore the old position of Russia as a nation and deal with other nations as a diplomatic equal. In fact, while he still gives lip service to Communism he has realized it doesn't pay and is getting away from it.

"Bolshevism in Russia will be over before the year is out," was the conviction expressed by Sir Henry Deterning, the Dutch oil king, after the recent congress. As head of the great British Dutch-Shell Oil Company, which has vast properties in Russia, he has been keeping very close tabs on the situation and has seen the transformation Stalin has been working.

The story of what has happened in Russia in the last eight months, culminating in the bitter fight in the Communist Congress, will make plain the reasons for Mr. Deterning's prediction. Stalin has been conducting the nation back to capitalism, not slowly, but swiftly, and he has not so very far to go before Russia will be de-Bolshevised.

CHANGE OF POLICY

It was last April that F. E. Djerjinsky, one of Stalin's chief lieutenants, announced "the great aims before the government force us to admit our previous economic policy was a mistaken one."

He and others made it plain that commerce with the outside world was to be pressed, capital was to be invited to flow into the country, concessions were to be granted to foreigners and private trade was to be permitted among Russians. Trotsky was put in charge of the organization of this new policy and its results have been seen in the grants of large concessions to foreign capital, the movement for trade arrangements with European and other countries and the removal of restrictions on home trade.

The most remarkable change was instituted by the decree permitting the richer peasants to lease lands, hire help and ignore the eight-hour labor law. It was a complete reversal of the Bolshevist policy whereby all land was divided among the individual peasants according to the capacity of themselves and their families to work it, and hiring of labor was not permitted.

These abandonments of Communism almost caused an open breach within the soviet. Kameneff, Zinovieff and others declared the real purpose was to restore capitalism and to set up a new bourgeoisie (or middle class.) They were joined by Mrs. Lenin, who charged that the principles advocated by the dead leader were being abandoned. This element gathered in Petrograd and practically declared themselves independent of Moscow. From that center they tried to stir up a revolt against Stalin.

These efforts were unsuccessful. The peasants fell in behind their own leaders and these leaders backed Stalin. As the peasants constitute 90 per cent of the nation's population it became plain he could not be upset so the majority of the party in the cities stood by him also.

HOW STALIN WON

In the elections of delegates to the Congress Stalin had an immense advantage. After the deposition of Trotzky from command of the army in 1924 he gained control of the military forces and reorganized them. The late Gen. Frunze and Gen. Klementy Voroshiloff, the present commander in chief, saw to it that adherents of other leaders were dismissed or transferred to distant posts and that Stalin men were put at all strategic points. So Stalin was able to have any orders enforced.

As the general-secretary of the party he had the machinery at his command and was able to direct the election of delegates he knew would stand by him. Combined with these two material advantages were his superior political abilities and courage. When the showdown came in the Congress the resolutions of the Petrograd faction — which demanded the return to the old party policies—were defeated by more than five to one. Gen. Voroshiloff appeared as one of the strongest champions of Stalin, serving plain notice that the army was behind him.

As a result of his victory, Stalin conducted a house-cleaning. Supporters of Kameneff and Zinovieff were dropped from the Central Executive Committee and it was made up overwhelmingly of Stalin's partisans. The political bureau, the body of seven leaders which had long been the real source of authority, was similarly shaken up. Kameneff who was made its chief by Lenin, was removed from it entirely. Gen. Voroshiloff was a member. Trotzky, who has thrown in his fortunes with Stalin, was restored. Two more members were added, strong Stalin men. Zinovieff was left on it—probably because he can still be used as head of the Third Internationale—but he is the sole member who has dared to stand against Stalin.

Now he has full power, Stalin undoubtedly will push forward along the lines outlined above and we may expect to see a big advance toward capitalism in the next year. It is true he has continued to use the language of Communism, but his actions have been in the other direction. In the recent Congress he took the position that it will be necessary to build up the nations first and apply Socialism afterwards. It is quite certain that if he rebuilds the Russian middle class, restores capitalism and makes the nation prosperous he will kill Socialism.

This is all very hopeful for the restoration of Russia. But there is another side to it. Stalin may drop Communism in Russia and may try to convince the western nations that the Moscow government is no longer trying to bring about a world revolution; yet it is hardly likely he will make things any more safe for the neighbors of Russia. He is highly ambitious and a marvelous manipulator and there is every evidence that he is working to spread the power of Russia along imperialistic lines.

The recent Russian successes in China have been due more to cunning diplomacy and appeals to Chinese nationalism than to teaching of Communism. The Balkan upsets are also largely attributable to renewals of the old-time Russian intrigues. In Persia, Turkey, Poland, in all directions, in fact, we are seeing evidences of what the Indian report to the London Parliament called "the new Russian Nationalism."

Stalin built up that nationalism. He put together the present federation which has made a united Russia from the Baltic to the Pacific, and the political and persuasive powers he used to wield together the many races will be employed to make Russia even bigger. Therein, if he lives and keeps his power, will lie some dangers to the world at large.

Mexico City Police Capture Two Germans in Act of Looting Wholesale Drug Warehouse

BY JACK STARR-HUNT

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 16.—Police authorities believe that, in the capture of two Germans known as Hans Ivansuk and Nagy Zoltam, they have in their possession two Europeans wanted in a number of leading cities of the Old World.

The two arrived in Mexico some six months ago, according to their story told at police headquarters after they had been caught red-handed attempting to rob a leading drug store warehouse here. In Ivansuk's room burglar tools which would be the envy of any cracksman were found, according to the police. The equipment included everything from fine silk cord used to strangle victims, to high-grade chemical preparations of various sorts.

The prisoners attempted to resist when trapped by the police and drew their weapons, but were overcome by a ruse, as the springs in their revolvers had been filed away by a secret service operative who gained their confidence before the robbery was planned. Both are under 30 years of age, and expert chemists. They established a plant where, according to the police imitations of famous products, rouge, soaps, toilet articles and in fact all well-known brands sold by leading druggists were manufactured. Bottles were labeled as the originals and only through the trained druggist's expert eye could any difference from the legitimate products be noted.

Their first big coup, the police say, was the robbery of the drug store warerooms in which it was planned to substitute their imitation products for the real articles. The real merchandise was then to be peddled from house to house "at lower prices" than sold in the stores and distributed to customers in other cities of the country. No explanation is made by either of the men why they preferred to first obtain the real merchandise and then re-sell this and run the risk of being caught while substituting their imitation goods for the legitimate, and which resulted in their capture. It is believed by the authorities that both preferred to have their own products deposited in one large lot, setting first a blind for the police and to some extent casting suspicion on the drug store, thus covering their own trail while the real and stolen goods would be sold at less risk.

Zoltam shortly after his arrival in the city obtained employment as a chemist at a drug store. He supplied his partner with samples of the most popular brands of soap, powders, beautifying concoctions and other similar goods. These the two then manufactured to perfection, both contents and container boxes were ready to replace the legitimate in the warehouse on the night of the robbery, the police assert. Zoltam's carelessness after the theft of several keys necessary to enter the warehouse resulted in the owners of the store becoming aware that something was wrong. He was watched, and detectives were able to trace manufacture of substitute keys to the warehouse and gradually a secret service operative gained the confidence of the two men and learned of the plot. It was this operative who filed their revolver springs on the night of the planned coup.

Canadian Mines Set Low Record for Fatalities

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Jan. 16. What constitutes a world's record was scored in British Columbia in 1925 in the matter of fatalities in the coal mines of the province.

The death rate per million tons of coal mined, the basis usually taken in all coal-mining countries on which to estimate the death rate, was but 2.4 per cent, a figure not only the lowest in the history of coal mining in the province, but a world's record, as shown by a comparison with statistics compiled in all other large coal-producing areas throughout the world.

Official figures announced, along with the foregoing by the British Columbia Department of Mines, show that in the past decade the best record established in any of the other leading coal-producing countries of fatalities per 1,000,000 tons mined were as follows: Great Britain, 3.85; United States, 3.92; France, 4.74; Belgium, 5.73, and Prussia, 7.04.

HIGH SCHOOL FARMS PAY NEAT PROFIT

Agricultural Students Cost State $126,000 and Earn Total of $200,000

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE]

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 16.—Teaching agriculture to high school boys cost the State of California $126,000 last year, but the profits of the school farms totaled more than $200,000, so the boys won't worry if the taxpayer doesn't.

These figures showing that agricultural courses in California high schools more than earn their keep were revealed to the State Board of Education here today by Richard J. Werner, State Director of Agricultural Education. Werner explained that all risks of deficits are avoided by admitting to agricultural training only boys who want to become farmers. A requirement of the course is that each student must produce while learning, and in producing he is expected to be business man enough to produce at a profit.

There are now 2500 boys enrolled in high school agricultural courses, which is a 20 per cent increase over last year's enrollment. Seventy-two schools are offering such training.

In fourteen of the schools alone, Werner reported, 700 head of baby beeves are being raised for market. The animals are parceled out among the students and each boy is held responsible for the business-like handling of his stock. He learns his theory at school in the morning, and in the afternoon goes home to take care of the live stock intrusted to him.

"It's no household-pet proposition either," Werner emphasized. "We give a boy eight or ten brood sows to take home and he raises a real carload of pigs."

BOY KILLED BY AUTO WHILE MOTHER PRAYS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TAUNTON (Mass.) Jan. 16.—Marsden P. Carr, 8 years of age, son of Marsden and Marion Carr of North Dighton, died at the Mt. His mother went into St. Joseph's Catholic Church and when she came out of the edifice she saw a crowd gathered and learned of the accident. She was taken to the hospital, but was not in time to see her boy before he breathed his last. The boy had dodged from behind a wagon into the path of an automobile.

CAT SAVES LIFE OF GAS VICTIM

Neighbor Hearing Cries of Feline Finds Master Unconscious

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HAVERHILL (Mass.) Jan. 16.—The cries of a pet cat saved the life of Erving Flanders, 56 years of age, from gas asphyxiation the other morning. Flanders lives with his cat in a single room in a boarding house. Charles Russell, living in the same house, heard the cries of the cat in Flanders's room and upon investigation found Flanders lying unconscious on the floor. The cat, disliking the odor of the gas, cried out a warning that saved Flanders's life. Flanders was taken to the Gale Hospital in a critical condition.

FEWER WORRIES NOW FOR ENVOY

American citizen, acquired the property as heir to Mrs. Evans.

WIDOW INHERITS LAND

When some six years ago Mrs. Evans became a widow, inherited the land from her husband and began administering it the now famous "Evans case" first gained prominence. It was then strictly an issue between Great Britain and Mexico. The story of Mrs. Evans's life on the ranch remains a practically untold chapter in the events of Mexico's recent history.

The official report that Cunard Cummins gave to the London Foreign Office of her dangers and her personal bravery are related in a White Book issued on the subject by Downing street and its contents show a remarkable losing fight on the part of Mrs. Evans against untold odds. It tells of her repeated repulse of armed invaders who sought to acquire sections of her land, relates how on one occasion, barricaded on the roof of her home on the ranch, she held off the assailants at the point of a rifle and how secret Indian messengers, loyal to her, rushed to Mexico City and reported the occurrences at the British Legation.

It was about four years ago that Camp appeared on the stage of this diplomatic-tragic drama and offered his services—giving no reason at all to Mrs. Evans—as manager of the ranch. Camp was referred to by Cunard Cummins as "a brave young American, only support a brave British woman had to depend upon." Cunard Cummins's attitude in the matter resulted in his expulsion from the country by the Mexican government after ten days' siege had been maintained by secret operatives on the British Legation. The entire Diplomatic Corps assembled managed to obtain permission for him to leave unaccompanied in a manner befitting to the diplomatic rank they maintained he held, while the Mexican Foreign Office recognized no such standing.

TWO HELD FOR CRIME

In August, 1924, Mrs. Evans was slain near her ranch by a group of men while she was returning with the pay roll. Two illiterate Indians are still held in the penitentiary at Puebla with a death sentence for the crime hanging over them while intricate legal maneuvers have stayed the putting into effect of the sentence.

Camp, on the day of Mrs. Evans's assassination, chanced to be away. It is this fact, that he was not present at the time, some of his friends here maintain, that inspired him with the determination "to see the ranch through" at all costs. He was retained by Mrs. Pettus as manager and since then fear for his safety has been a constant worry to Ambassador James R. Sheffield, who relieved Great Britain of the burdensome case once the property became American.

During the past six months repeated efforts have been made by representatives of Mrs. Pettus to sell out to the Mexican government, but a question of price has detained the dropping of the curtain on the third act of this drama. The suggestion of selling the property was long ago made to Mrs. Evans by former Ambassador Charles B. Warren, but while she lived she would not consider the matter. It was believed by Warren and still is believed that the best means of settling the issue is for Mexico to buy the land outright and turn it into an agricultural college, satisfying the wants of the owner and soothing the feelings of the agrarians of Puebla.

The last chapter of the drama will be staged when final disposition is made of the two Indians held in the jail at Puebla by the proper court authorities either acquitting them of the charge of murder in the appeal pending or ordering the sentence imposed on them put into force.

SOAP AND WATER TO CONQUER DISEASE

A soap and water campaign for the purpose of keeping down the ravages of disease has been urged by a celebrated authority and it is said to have been very effective as carried out for some time past by the City Health Department of New York. The department has recently issued a printed plea for the more frequent use of soap and water among the employees of industrial establishments and a formidable ally to these is the clean towel, but it must be clean. As a means of keeping down communicable disease, persons are urged to give the hands and face a good brisk cleaning before lunch and later in the afternoon the same treatment is recommended for this purpose as well as that of combating the 4 o'clock fatigue which attacks many office workers. It is recommended as a wholesome and sanitary practice. This and other similar measures are said to have been the reason for a great cut in the number of fatalities from typhoid fever. In 1898 the number of typhoid cases in this area annually amounted to nearly 700 cases, or twenty-one to every 100,000 of population and in 1923 this had been brought down to 140 cases or two to every 100,000 persons. The health authorities say that this is chiefly due to the voluntary enforcement of sanitary rules in the industries and the co-operation of the public in general.

SHOW ROOM ON WHEELS

A handsome high-powered automobile has been made use of by a machine firm located in Maryland to serve as a traveling demonstration room. The three men who make up the crew include a driver, an advertising expert and a demonstrator of the tools carried in and on a walnut buffet. A separate power plant supplies the necessary power and a big trunk at the rear of the coach contains advertising displays for the use of the advertising expert who puts them in the jobber's windows while his salesmen are in the coach listening to the demonstration.

Honeymoon Walk

The widower had just taken his fourth wife and was showing her around the village. Among the places visited was the churchyard, and the bride paused before a very elaborate tombstone that had been erected by the bridegroom. Being a little nearsighted, she asked him to read the inscription, and in reverent tones he read:

"Here lies Susan, beloved wife of John Smith; also Jane, beloved wife of John Smith; also Mary, beloved wife of John Smith—"

He paused abruptly, and the bride, leaning forward to see the bottom line, read to her horror:

"Be ye also ready."—[Exchange.

ARCTIC HEATING PLAN GIV

Diversion of Pacific and Gulf Waters Would North Summer Resort, Says Sponsor

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

MONTREAL, Jan. 16.—The Eskimos soon may be vertisements in the Florida and California newspaper Southerners to spend their winters in the Arctic region for changing the frigid polar weather, as suggested to the government, proves up on every point claimed for it by the Dimitrie Joanovici, the gentleman who advances the idea, does not offer any qualification for his plan, beyond declaring that it is feasible.

Joanovici's proposition is based on the principle that if you pour hot water into a cold bath it will temper the icy plunge. He believes in denuding the Arctic of its frigid temperature by diverting the Gulf Stream northward and building a dam to keep the northern waters from flowing southward.

The carrying out of Joanovici's plan involves three constructions. He would have a canal carry the overflow of winter water from the St. Lawrence into the Hudson's Bay. This would enable the Gulf Stream to hug the shores of Nova Scotia and Labrador, though leaving the British Isles to freeze. He would build a barrier across Fury and Hecla straits. As this obstacle would stretch from Melville Peninsula to Baffin Land, be ten miles long and one mile wide, it would, one can at once perceive from a map, shut off the Arctic current from flowing southward. And to make perfect the change in temperature and the transformation of the Arctic, he would cut passes through the Aleutian Islands and the Alaska Peninsula to allow the warm Pacific tides and Japanese current to find their way into polar waters.

Thus would Mr. Joanovici, by three engineering feats, enable Canada to offer to the world a climate which would result in an overpopulation of her broad domain within the span of a single lifetime. Much of the worthiness of the project is nullified by his charge that the British government has "dominated Canada to such an extent that its subjects have been kept in the dark concerning solution of this important problem." Joanovici also doubts the ability of the Minister of Marines and Fisheries, under whose portfolio such a work would fall, to carry forward a successful conclusion the plan he has outlined.

BEQUEST CALLS BACK DESERTER

Former Soldier Jailed in Effort to Collect Inheritance

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Jan. 16. — Louis Singlin, who wearied of being shot at somewhere on the front in those memorable days of 1915, would be a deserter yet if he hadn't come into an inheritance and since dead heroes do not get much use of money left them in wills he "came to life."

As a result he is in jail and faces court-martial proceedings. Singlin, instead of hiding in the hills as many deserters did, spent the three remaining years of the war mingling with the troops on leave in the rear of the front lines, eating in the canteens.

LODGE SEES WORLD END YET FAR OFF

Psychic Declares Breaking Up of Planet Millions of Years in Future

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Sir Oliver Lodge, world-famed psychic, in an address at the Charing Cross Hospital, declared that no one should worry about the end of the world as the time won't arrive for millions of years yet.

"The beginning of the world," he said, "was the formation of nebulae 200,000,000 years ago—and this date is no mere guess. The end will apparently be the disappearance of matter and the existence once more of an ether filled with perpetual remnants of radiation traveling out toward infinity with the speed of light at a date comparatively more remote than any I have mentioned.

"The star known as the Companion of Sirius is as massive as the sun, but no bigger than a planet. On this star the force of gravity is 200,000 times greater than on the earth. A match weighs half a ton and a coin weighs a ton.

"The temperature of the interior of a star is about 40,000,000 degrees. The sun, expending its substance in riotous radiation, is losing 4,000,000 tons a second but the mass is so enormous that it can keep on doing so without appreciable change.

"To date 1 per cent of its bulk even at this enormous loss would take 150,000,000,000 years."

New York City now has 125 women members on its police force. The feminine force is headed by Mrs. Mary A. Sullivan.

SENTENCE MAIL FRAUD BAND

Boys and Girls Among Kentuckians Convicted of Defrauding Shippers Out of Thousands of Dollars

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CATLETTSBURG (Ky.) Jan. 16.—What is believed to have been the most extensive band of defrauders of mail-order houses ever known in the mountain country is thought to have been broken up through convictions in the Federal court here.

Fifteen persons were convicted before Judge Cochran and sentenced on charges of using the mails to defraud. All of the persons held guilty, except one, were from Magoffin county, where, it is asserted for a considerable time there seemed to be an organized band which preyed on such establishments.

The prisoners received sentences ranging from one to five years in Federal prison at Atlanta. There were several women in the list, and some of those sentenced were not more than 13 years of age. One boy, 16 years of age, and a girl, 13, were given sentences of one day in jail. Another girl, 16, was given a suspended sentence of two years.

THOUSANDS LOST

Mail-order houses, according to records, lost thousands of dollars in Magoffin county. The goods were ordered shipped to fictitious addresses, were obtained and, it is asserted, "peddled" to various sections and sold, the owners of the goods, however, not receiving the receipts therefor.

This reputed scheme has long been "worked" in the hill country. In one or two cases, goods have been ordered on letterheads of banks that had no existence in fact, and, it is asserted, when references given were appealed to, word would come back on other fictitious letterheads that the would-be buyer was responsible and reliable.

INQUIRY STARTED

Finally, the situation in the Eastern Kentucky mountains became so serious that an investigation was started and resulted in wholesale arrests. Before pronouncing sentence on the asserted defrauders, Judge Cochran said they were more to be pitied than censured, because "You have no one to make you good. You have no environment, no ancestors of good character to whom you can turn for encouragement. But you have been warned and this has done no good. You have consistently defrauded mail-order houses and you seem to be determined to continue to do so."

"A great many people in Magoffin county are persistent violators. As much as I dislike to impose heavy sentences on you people, how am I to make an impression on the people of Magoffin county, if I do not I am determined to make an impression on them—let them know they can't get by with this sort of stuff.

"The mail-order houses should investigate before they sell their goods."

DO SNAKES EVER COMMIT SUICIDE?

Five years ago I was riding a pony up the Mt. Lemon trail not far from Oracle, Ariz. I got off the pony and started crawling under a barbed-wire fence to look for an old bench-mark near by. While I was under the fence I heard a sudden whirr and saw a small side-winder rattler just in front of my hand getting ready to strike. I got out from under that fence mighty fast, tearing a gap in my shirt. Then I grabbed a few rocks and sticks and began shying them at the snake, which began moving away, striking furiously at everything which came near it. I wasn't a very good shot, but finally a big chunk of rock struck the snake in the middle and broke its back. After that the snake lost its power of propulsion, but it still continued to writhe and strike—as lively as ever—at the sticks which I now threw at it carelessly out of an idle desire to torment it. Finally the snake twisted and with what looked like a very deliberate act opened wide its flat jaws and closed them in a vise-like grip on its body about a third of the way down from the head. I could see the two long front teeth pierce its skin.

Now I had heard the cowboys say that a rattler, if tormented and unable to escape, would, in order to evade its tormentors, commit suicide by biting itself. So I waited around to see what would happen. I kept throwing a few harmless twigs at it. A few times the snake lunged at these, but its movements grew sluggish. After a few minutes I couldn't get a rise out of Mr. Snake, and later when I went over and stirred him with a stick he was just as dead as any dead snake I ever saw.—[W. W. Snyder in Adventure Magazine for November.

LUNATIC COMPLAINTS

Senator Smoot said at a Washington reception:

"Even England is abandoning free trade. How can she help it, when all the other nations have adopted protection? The English free-traders complain, of course, but their absurd complaints remind me of the lunatic who banged himself on the head with a brick and howled:

" 'What a world! Chickens will only lay when eggs are cheap and plentiful—when eggs are dear and scarce the blasted birds lie down on the job.'

"The lunatic again banged himself with his brick.

" 'The sun,' he went on, 'only shines in the daytime, when there's plenty of light. Why doesn't it shine after dark, when light is wanted? Oh, what a world!'

"Another bang.

" 'The only man who can never borrow money at the bank is the poor man who really needs it.'

"A keeper ran up, snatched the brick away and led off the lunatic. As the wretch disappeared in a padded cell his last words were:

" 'And you can't get a job unless you've got a new suit, and you can't get a new suit unless you've got a job. What a world!' "—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Alarmed by the encroachments of the Atlantic on the western coast of France, which menaces hundreds of coastal towns, a National Federation for Coast Defense has been organized and will attempt to get government aid to save the coast from further erosion caused by the storms.

Already miles of territory have been engulfed by the sea. Many towns situated on plateaux overlooking the ocean fear they will be wiped away.

FISH HATCHERY WORK PROVING SUCCESSFUL

BRITISH COLUMBIA SALMON PACKERS SEE REVIVAL OF PRODUCTION

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

VANCOUVER (B. C.) Jan. 16.—New opportunities have appeared for the salmon packers of British Columbia.

For years the industry in Vancouver has been crippled because the salmon run was captured largely by the United States canners on Puget Sound. The American operators so thinned the salmon run that the Vancouver packers were unable to maintain their production. The value of the annual salmon pack in Vancouver in recent years has been but a fraction of what it used to be.

The work of the fish hatcheries has gone on steadily, however, and each year millions of salmon were released in the upper waters of the Fraser River. Hundreds of them were marked by the Federal fishery officials and it is the information gained as the result of the markings that now makes it virtually certain that the run of salmon in the Fraser can be brought back to its former volume.

LEGEND OF EVOLUTION AMONG INDIANS

Lo, the poor Indian, has been dragged into the squabble over evolution. Dr. Jean Jeancon, curator of archeology at the Colorado museum, has discovered that the aborigines of America had a theory of evolution which antedated that of Darwin by some 4000 years or so. The Indian legend of creation and evolution of man was written on rocks in symbolic language. Many such rocks have been found in ruins and deciphered.

According to the legend, man was born in the innermost recesses of Mother Earth. After four stages of development he struggled to the surface of the earth where he attained physical perfection. While he was in the caverns of the earth man was in a very low stage. He resembled Darwin's protoplasmic man in that he had neither eyes nor nose. His dangling tentacles afterwards developed into arms and legs.

A decided step forward was made, according to the Indian pictures, when two gods gave man a grain of corn. The grain sprouted, grew through the ceiling of the caverns and reached the earth's surface. The primitive Indian followed this stalk of corn, and in doing so he acquired speech, sight, smell and the ability to distinguish between good and evil.

While in one stage of progress in the caverns a long tail became part of man's body. When he reached the surface he lost this appendage. To scientists this myth of the tail is especialy interesting because the Indians in North America probably knew nothing of the monkey family, that animal family having no representatives north of the Rio Grande.—[Pathfinder.

Highest Temperature Produced

The highest temperature yet produced by man is said to have been reached at the University of Leeds, England, by the combustion of ordinary manufactured gas combined with oxygen. A temperature of 7677 degrees Fahrenheit was reached, or 4287 degrees Centigrade. The temperature of the sun is more than 6000 degrees Centigrade; and the source of its heat is only one of the many questions still challenging solution.—[Compressed Air Magazine.

ANIMAL PECULIARITIES

Mud turtles and tortoises have no teeth.

All animals that chew the cud have cloven feet, but not all with cloven feet chew the cud.

Both bones forming the parrot's beak are movable, while the majority of other birds can move only one.

The structure of the frog is such that it cannot breathe with its mouth open, and if it were forcibly kept open, the creature would suffocate.

Pigs are poor swimmers, and, owing to the fact that their front legs are set so closely under their bodies, they frequently cut their own throats with their cloven feet when they fall into the water and attempt to swim.

Hares cannot close their eyes since they have no eyelids. Instead they show a thin membrane, which covers their eyes during sleep.

Fish swallow their food without chewing it. This they do because they are obliged constantly to open and close their jaws in breathing through their gills.

The owl cannot move his eyeballs or eyes; they are fixed in their sockets by a strong, hard, elastic case in the form of a cone. But the owl can turn its head around in an almost complete circle without moving its body.

Sheep have no teeth in their upper jaws. A species of Turkish sheep have the most of their fat on their tails. In this breed the tails become so large that they have to be carried on small carts made of flat boards and two wheels—[Boys' Life.

JAPANESE SAVE TOGO FLAGSHIP

Led Fleet in Victory Over Russian Squadron

Permission Accorded by Powers at Washington

Popular Subscription Raises Necessary Funds

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

TOKIO, Jan. 16.—The Mikasa, Admiral Count Togo's flagship, from the bridge of which he directed the Battle of Tsushima Straits that resulted in the annihilation of the Russian Baltic squadron, has been saved for the Japanese nation.

It is true that permission to keep the Mikasa was accorded by the powers at the Washington conference; but money was necessary to keep the gallant ship in proper condition. A nation-wide movement was started for funds, and, at a meeting of the "Save the Mikasa" Association, Admiral Togo, who was present, was told that sufficient funds had been collected to insure that the Mikasa would be perpetuated for the Japanese even as the "Victory" is for the British and the "Constitution" for the Americans.

Among those who contributed to the "Save the Mikasa" fund were the Prince Regent himself and Admiral Togo. Each gave a 50-sen coin, it having been arranged that no contributions should exceed 50 sen, so as to allow the entire nation an opportunity of contributing toward what is a national affair. School children sent the pennies they had intended to buy candy with; laborers sent their mite; peers and countesses sent their contribution—but no contribution of more than a modest 50-sen was accepted.

The Mikasa is at present moored off the coast of Yokosuka, one of Japan's largest naval arsenals, and it is expected that she will remain there permanently, even as the Victory is at Portsmouth. The ship will be turned over to the Navy formally on April 1, next, and will be made into a sort of clubhouse which can be utilized by the officers and ratings of the navy. The only charge that will be made for lodging will be 1 sen per person.

REGULATIONS FOR THE SUNDAY MOTORIST

The car was at the curb. In it or near it, expectantly waiting, were the owner and his family.

"Would you care to take a Sunday ride with us?" the motorist asked affably.

"Thanks, it is very kind of you," we replied. "When do you start?"

"As soon as the police give us our starting time," he said. "We put in an application to go out this morning and Willie has gone to call headquarters now to see if it was granted by the traffic commissioner."

"All that formality?"

"Oh, yes. And quite proper, too, considering the number of cars and the congestion on the roads. Well, Willie"—as his son returned—"what is the word from the police?"

"Our starting time is 10:43, Pop. And you're to take Route No. 9."

"What's the idea?" we asked blankly. "Can't you leave when you wish and go where you want to?"

"Oh, no," replied the Sunday motorist. "We have to go where the police send us. If a policeman stops us and asks for our route card and we're in another road, we'll be summoned to court and fined."

"And is it a pleasant ride, this Route No. 9?"

"No, indeed. We haven't had a car long enough to draw any of the nice routes. All the good roads are taken. They're assigned by seniority, you know. Route No. 9 goes mostly by gas tanks and ash dumps on the outskirts of the city, and is full of holes. Being out on it all day is no joke"—this with something of a sigh.

"But can't you come back home when you feel like it? Surely the police—"

"You don't understand. The homecoming congestion on all roads is terrific. Once you're out, you have to take your turn coming back. You get your place in line from the police and you stay in it. There's nothing you can do about it except abandon your car, and then very likely they'd arrest you for willfully obstructing traffic."

"Do you mean to tell me," we began dumfounded, "that you can't come home here until the police let you, once you're out?"

"Precisely that. For even if I could find a way to sneak back to town they'd arrest me for parking in front of my own house if I were in ahead of my time. This street is a one-way traffic street from 4 to 8 on Sunday evenings. You can't beat the game. I've tried and I know."

"Pop," interrupted the motorist's son, a worried look on his face, "do you think it's true what the Salvation Army song says, that every day'll be Sunday by and by?"

The motorist's cheeks blanched deadly white and he would not answer. The vision was too awful.—[A. H. F. in Kansas City Star.

CAT THEFTS BY COLLEGE MEN SCORED

Pets Purloined for Use in Student Rites, Says Head of Rescue League

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BOSTON, Jan. 16.—College students are stealing cats in Greater Boston, according to charges made by the Animal Rescue League. Mrs. Smith, president of the league, has issued a warning to the public not to deliver cats destined for the league to anyone except Agent Stanley, who wears an Animal Rescue League band on his hat or to a woman who wears a badge.

"All others," she said, "asserting that they come from the league are frauds. After closing hours the other day, two young men rang our doorbell. The men asked if the watchmen would let them have two cats. They said they would return them if he wished, but they were college students and were obliged to have cats for some rite that the club they belonged to demanded of them.

"The men were sent away without the cats, but that same night two valuable cats were stolen in our neighborhood. Many complaints of stolen cats are coming to us. Women visit our league in great distress to see if by any chance their cats are with us. A man in a store lost a cat he valued very highly and was sure it was stolen.

"A poor woman living in a room alone with her cat came to me in great distress. She was old and sick and she had spent half the night searching for the cat in the poor district in which she lives.

"Cannot college students think of some other way of performing their rites without this criminal and cruel act of stealing cats? They probably would not steal money, but it is worse to steal a household companion that is beloved and valued."

Will Foster Art Instruction

Income from $1,000,000 has been set aside by the Carnegie Corporation to establish a system of scholarships and fellowships in the arts. The purpose is to enable candidates of promise to prepare themselves to be college teachers of art.

In addition, $100,000 has been set aside for the purchase of teaching equipment for departments of fine arts in colleges and universities.

The trustees of the corporation feel that the number of competent teachers of art is entirely insufficient and that few colleges have either proper equipment for teaching art or the knowledge of how to procure it.—[School Life.

RAIL LINES TO TAP OLD TOWNS

Scene of Texans' Exploit to be New Terminal

History of Mier Battle Brought to Memory

Place Still Remains Bit of Ancient Mexico

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ROMA (Tex.) Jan. 16.—Standing upon the bank of the Rio Grande at Roma one can see the spire of the ancient church in Mier, Mexico, five miles to the south of the river, rising out of the chaparral that surrounds the historic town where a band of Texas patriots immortalized themselves eighty-three years ago while on a desperate mission. Both Roma and Mier are about to be placed in closer touch with the outside world by the construction of railroads from which they are now far removed. It is stated that the new line of the Missouri Pacific system, which was recently completed from Sam Fordyce to Rio Grande City, is to be extended up the river to Roma, eighteen miles, and that the National Railways of Mexico plans to construct a branch line from Camargo to Mier to tap the extensive coal beds that are situated near that town.

Mier is a bit of old Mexico. Its chief interest to the few Americans who have ventured into the remote place is that it was the scene of the sanguinary defeat of what is known as the "Mier Expedition," which set out from San Antonio late in 1842.

The small force of Texans, numbering 261, fighting against overwhelming odds, by their supreme courage, won the battle, then, by the treachery of the enemy, lost it, were later imprisoned in Mexico City, where some were executed and others died in the most abject misery, while a few fortunate ones escaped.

The purpose of the Mier expedition into Mexico was to avenge the invasion of San Antonio by Gen. Adrian Woll, under orders of Santa Anna. The little band of Texans crossed the Rio Grande to the town of Mier which was defended by Gen. Ampudia and a force estimated at 4000 trained soldiers.

WIN AND LOSE

The Texans defeated that force and then, surrendered to the vanquished, were sent in chains to Mexico City, where they worked on the public thoroughfares and thence sent to the gloomy fortress of Perrote, where some died, some were pardoned, and from which seventeen escaped in one year by tunneling through the solid masonry of the prison walls under a moat and to liberty. A year later sixteen others escaped by tunneling forty feet beneath the prison floors.

The "Mier Expedition" was in command of Col. William S. Fisher. It divided at Zapata, Tex., a portion marching overland on the east side of the river, the others ascending the river in flat boats until they came to a point seven miles above the town of Mier, where they camped, and from which point they crossed the river and entered the town which they found without troops. They succeeded in entrenching themselves in houses and barricaded streets and alleys.

Here for forty-eight hours a most remarkable battle was fought. An army of several thousand men was held at bay and charge after charge repelled by less than 300.

The victorious Texas force took the Alcalde, Don Juan, with them as a hostage and returned to their camp where they were to await supplies. The day wore away and night came and went and no supplies arrived.

A scouting party which had been left on the Mexican side reported at about 4 p.m. that a large force of cavalry, under Ampudia had arrived and was then in battle array opposite the Texans' camp, that their supplies had really started from Mier, but had been stopped by Ampudia. This information so angered the Texans that a hasty council of war was held and it was decided to cross the river and give battle.

DRIVE ENEMY BACK

They crossed the river at 5 p.m. Christmas Day, whipped the enemy cavalry back to Mier and followed it to the banks of the river. Mier was invaded by 261 men and officers, the rest having been left at the camp to guard the horses and equipment. At 7 p.m. the advance into the town was begun.

In less than an hour of the advance into Mier, against overwhelming odds, the Texans fought their way to within a half-block of the Plaza de Armas, which was defended by three pieces of artillery, 1000 infantrymen and 2000 cavalry and irregular troops.

At noon of the following day Dr. J. T. Sinnikson, who had been made prisoner, was sent out by Ampudia under a flag of truce. He was forced to do this under threat of death if he refused. He brought to Col. Fisher the statement that Ampudia had just received reinforcements to the number of 800 and that 1700 men were en route from Monterey and expected to arrive momentarily: that if the Texans did not surrender in five minutes, every man would be put to the sword. Col. Fisher ordered the Texans to cease firing.

This was the fatal moment. The Mexican officers and men crowded around the Texans and surrender was inevitable. Fisher surrendered under the solemn promise of Ampudia that they would be treated as prisoners of war and kept on the frontier until released.

MARCHED INTO INTERIOR

Instead, they were marched far into the interior of Mexico along dusty roads, footsore, half-starved and many of them sick. At the village of Salado a plan was matured by Capt. Ewing Cameron and others to attack the guards and regain their liberty. Some of the men were sick and confined in a separate building from the other prisoners outside of the gate of the prison yard. The main prison was inclosed by a wall inside of which was a large open court or yard where ammunition boxes and muskets were piled and stacked. At this place was a force of 150 infantry, besides the prison guards at the door of the prison and a strong force at the gate leading into the yard from the street. Just outside of this gate was a force of cavalry.

At sunrise on February 11, 1843, the Texans overpowered the guards at the prison door and then charged the infantry in the yard and a desperate combat took place for the possession of the cartridges and muskets.

After the Texans were masters of the situation here they passed through the gates and engaged the cavalry but they had fled, leaving some of the horses.

There were about 190 survivors who left, their intention being to retreat as rapidly as possible toward the Rio Grande, more than 200 miles distant. In order to avoid or foil pursuit as much as possible they left the main road and took to the mountains. They became lost in a desolate country where there was neither food nor water. For many days they toiled and struggled and suffered all of the pangs of hunger and thirst. Some died while other became crazed and wandered off alone, dying in hot, dry ravines or on rocky mountains. A strong force of Mexicans with mules carrying provisions and water were on their trail and from time to time picked up those who had been left behind until the main body was reached and they surrendered. They were put in chains and marched back to the scene of the late battle and confined in the same old prison with double guards. Here an order was received from Santa Ana for every tenth man of them to be shot. In decimating the prisoners it was decided among the Mexican officers to let them draw lots.

After the execution the remaining prisoners, heavily ironed, were started on foot for Mexico City.

HUNTING CLUBS NOW PERMITTED IN RUSSIA

ORGANIZATION ENCOURAGED AS WOLVES CAUSE HEAVY LOSSES

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIGA, Jan. 16.—For the first time since the revolution hunting clubs are permitted to organize hunts, and members of these clubs, if they can find three Communists to vouch for them, will be permitted to keep guns and ammunition in their homes. The Moscow Investia reports that a revival of hunting is necessary, since large packs of wolves have appeared within a few miles of the Bolshevik capital, and have destroyed more than 46,000 gold roubles worth of live stock during the last winter.

The Investia reports that farmers in the vicinity of Moscow have lost seventeen horses, 162 colts, forty-seven cows, forty-eight calves and 1700 sheep during the winter of 1924-25, and the losses this year promise to be even larger unless big wolf hunts are again organized by hunting clubs whose existence is now legalized by a special decree of the Moscow soviet.

Foreigners living in Moscow will be invited to become members of the clubs, which will obtain special bonuses from the government for every wolf killed during the coming winter.

SUBSCRIBERS IN PARIS HAVE PHONE TROUBLES

COMPLAIN THAT DIRECTORIES FOR 1925 NOT YET DELIVERED

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Paris telephone subscribers, particularly those unfortunate residents who suffer the mechanical frailties incident to the Louvre and Central exchanges, are vehemently complaining that they have not yet received the 1925 telephone directory. They declared they could tolerate for eleven months the quaintness of the P.T.T. administration, which has neglected them consistently, but with the advent of 1926 they felt the almost year-old directory should put in an appearance.

Various agencies which received these complaints, notably Paris newspapers, advised the telephonic sufferers that, however valid their complaints, there are in France but two ways of obtaining their 1925 directories. The one way, irate subscribers were informed, is to start proceedings against the government, which operates the telephones in France, and the other is to write to their respective Deputies and demand an interpellation in the Chamber. Both of these methods, however, were discarded by subscribers, who, rather than resort to these laborious alternatives, expressed themselves as willing to wait a little longer, provided their directories put in an appearance by 1975 A. D.

BOYS CYCLING ROUND WORLD

Want to Show India Has Pep and Vigor

Arrive at Tokio on Way to Homeland

Most Difficult Journey is Across Deserts

[SPECIAL FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE]

TOKIO, Dec. 26.—"We want to show that young India is full of pep and vigor; it seems these stunts are necessary in this ultra-modern age if one is to get any recognition so we are girdling the world by bicycle—not for money, not for a wager, but for India."

This was part of a statement made by J. P. Bhapsola and R. L. Rhumgara, 29 and 23 years of age respectively. They both hail from Bombay and are physically splendid specimens.

"We want to show the world that Indians are also capable of undertaking hazardous feats and pioneering exploits. We are not backed by any government or any big corporation. We already have a rare world record as being the only two persons who have ever gone across the Persian Desert, the desert of Mesopotamia, the sandy waste of Sinai and the Syrian Desert."

Their most-prized possession is a battered and well-traveled album containing autographs of some of the world's greatest men. Those who have signed in the young athletes' book include President Coolidge, Premier Stanley Baldwin, Lord Birkenhead, Lord Curzon, the Duke of Portland, Benito Mussolini, President Doumergue of France, the late President Ebert of Germany, Gov. Farrington of Hawaii, King Feisul of the Hedjas and Sir James Craig of Ulster. In Japan, Premier Kato and the Mayor of Tokio honored the boys with their autographs.

Bhapsola and Bhumgara left Bombay on Oectober 15, 1923, prepared for a three years' journey. They have done most of it and are now on their homeward lap. Traversing the deserts was the hardest thing they were up against. The next hardest thing was cycling through heavy snow in mid-Europe, where they happened to be when winter was at its depth. "No joke," they said laughing, "but we did it. By the way, we have used up four machines, of both British and American make."

In Northern Italy they were thrown into jail for a day on the charge that they were German spies. They never had any trouble obtaining food, they said, except when crossing the deserts.

After traversing the entire length of Japan, they will go to Shanghai, then across China to Canton, then through French Indo-China, Siam, the Straits and Burma to Calcutta and then across India to Bombay. They expect to reach their goal by June this year.

HERE'S ONE FAMILY WHO STAYS ON FARM

THREE GENERATIONS STILL CLING TO LARGE RANCH IN NEBRASKA

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LYNCH (Neb.) Jan. 16.—Proof that it is not a difficult task for a farmer to keep his children on the old home place is furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schoolmeyer, who occupy and operate a 1200-acre tract of land a few miles from this place. All of their fifteen children except a daughter, who is studying nursing in the hospital here, live on the place and have a part in the operation and also in the profits of the enterprise.

The Schoolmeyer family has been added to several times by marriage, and out of these marriages have come three grandchildren, and these, too, form part of the family. One of the married daughters lives on the adjoining tract, and a married son lives on the home acres in a house located near the family residence.

Mr. Schoolmeyer is 59 years of age and his wife ten years his junior. They both were born in Germany and have lived in Nebraska for forty-one years. Twenty-six years of their married life has been spent on the farm where they reside. Nine boys and six girls were born to them.

FRANCE MAY SLACKEN NATURALIZATION LINES

PROPOSED MODIFIED LAW WOULD REDUCE TIME RESTRICTIONS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Naturalization of foreigners in France will be made easier if the French Parliament adopts the plan submitted to a Senatorial commission by M. Lisbonne, in a report on the problem of nationality and naturalization. M. Lisbonne's program calls for the reduction of the time of residence, preceding naturalization, to three years as a maximum, to one year in certain cases, and to the mere necessity of establishing domicile in France in other cases.

Under present French law, a child born in France of foreign parents may, in certain cases, choose its own nationality upon attaining majority. The new proposal would limit the cases in which the right of option is given.

A French woman who marries a foreigner would be allowed to retain her French nationality, under the new plan, unless she expressly wishes to adopt the nationality of her husband. A new proposal would also tighten restrictions against alien undesirables.

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Jan. 16. The budget of the San Antonio Public Service Company for 1926 calls for an expenditure of $2,000,000 for improvements, as compared with $1,500,000 which was spent for that purpose last year. The electric power and light systems will be extended and new equipment installed in the local plant. Changes and extensions of the street railway system also may be made, it is stated.

Wife Accuses Moonshiners of Burning Mate

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 16.—Mrs. Susie Henderlite blames moonshiners for the cremation of her husband, John Henderlite, 79 years of age, and his three dogs in a fire which destroyed the Henderlite home. The Henderlites lived in a three-room house on a farm near the Bear Camp Run road, several miles from the city. Mrs. Henderlite declared the neighborhood was infested with moonshiners, but did not say why her aged husband would have been selected as a target. The home they occupied before the one just burned, Mrs. Henderlite said, was burned a year ago, after having been set on fire three times.

Henderlite had not been seen around the house for a day or two—his wife being away on a visit—and neighbors began an investigation. The skeleton of Henderlite was found, as were the bones of the three dogs, which had been Henderlite's constant companions.

ANCIENT WATER MILL SPARED BY WRECKERS

OLD PLANT IN OKLAHOMA SAID TO HAVE BEEN FIRST IN STATE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 16.—The historic value of what is said to have been the first mill established in what is now the State of Oklahoma, situated near Flint, in Delaware county, in the old Cherokee Indian Nation, has saved the millsite from demolition at the hands of the Page interests that are planning a great water-power site on the Illinois River near the millsite. The original plans for excavations called for an area that embraced the site. An amendment to the plans excludes the site.

The original mill, operated by water power and established by a Cherokee settler in the early thirties, was washed away in a historic flood of the early eighties. A new mill later was established by T. A. Beck, who yet operates it. It is of larger capacity than the first one, but only a little more modern. Water still furnishes the power. For more than forty years Cherokee country settlers have there obtained the makings for their corn bread.

PUNISHED KENTUCKY GIRL ENDS OWN LIFE

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ALBANY (Ky.) Jan. 16.—Rosa Thurman, 17 years of age, and pretty, has taken her own life by firing a load from a shotgun into her abdomen. She lingered several hours, during which time her sweetheart, Fred Pierce, 19, of Altha, Ky., some miles away, was notified and was trying to reach her. He arrived shortly after she died. She seemed to be watching anxiously for the boy to come. The only cause to which the suicide might be attributed was that her mother thought it necessary to chastise her for quarreling with a younger sister.

Lowers Gasoline Cost to 9c per Gallon

Mr. J. A. Stransky, A1528 Stransky Bldg., Pukwana, S. D., has invented an automatic and self-regulating device which has lowered the gasoline cost of automobiles to 9c per gallon because they have made from 37 to 57 miles on a gallon of gasoline. The device fits all cars and can be installed in five minutes. Mr. Stransky wants agents and is willing to send a sample at his risk. Write him today.—[Advertisement.

The Grebe "Colortone" hushes annoying sounds and allows notes of voice and instrument to reach you in full natural tones

THIS is, perhaps, the greatest recent contribution to radio reception. It enables you to alter to your taste the quality or timbre of speech or music from high, thin pitch to low, deep, round tones. This receiver, unlike others, is not at the mercy of the loud speaker. The "Colortone" also helps you to subdue to a great degree the scratching, hissing, whistling sounds that are usually the bane of radio reception.

The "S's" and the "H's" are plainly audible; the kettle drum in an orchestra can now, for the first time, be plainly distinguished; naturalness of sound replaces the artificiality which has heretofore interfered with radio enjoyment.

HIGHWAY LAW ATTACKED

Oklahoma Statute to be Tested by State Supreme Court as to Constitutionality

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

OKLAHOMA CITY (Okla.) Jan. 16.—Local lawyers have petitioned Judge C. B. Stuart, president of the Oklahoma Bar Association, to appoint a committee from the association to study a petition that has been filed in the Oklahoma County District Court by Kirby Fitzpatrick of Ardmore, on behalf of Ed Butterfield of Oklahoma City, in which the constitutionality of several laws governing operations of the State Highway Commission is attacked.

The subject is regarded as of utmost gravity and general concern, since, should the injunction asked for by Fitzpatrick be granted by the Supreme Court, major activities in road construction in the State would be halted until relief could be granted in the commission by the Legislature. The petition asks that the commission be restrained from receiving or expending funds.

Fitzpatrick has resolved to pick out those laws of import that at the moment are particularly affecting the welfare of the people which he assumes are in violation of the Constitution and present them to the Supreme Court for interpretation. He has found a number of such acts said to have been passed hastily by Legislatures.

Three such laws he has lumped into one suit filed in the District Court of Oklahoma county. They relate to duties of the State Highway Commission, particularly in the receiving and expending of money. The petition asks that the commission be restrained from receiving or expending any more money until its rights under the Constitution are established. Should the injunction be granted the commission would virtually become inactive and completion of a number of State Highway jobs indefinitely postponed.

Fitzpatrick contends that the laws are unconstitutional because they permit the commission to expend money that has not been appropriated by the Legislature. Recently the Criminal Court of Appeals held part of an act creating the State Real Estate Commission unconstitutional for that very reason. The Constitution provides in substance that no money may be expended by any department of State government that has not been specifically appropriated by the Legislature.

That decision is said to affect ten or more State boards and commissions, such as the State Fish and Game Commission which turns receipts into a revolving fund and expends what it requires for operation of its business.

Fitzpatrick has gone beyond the revenue issue and raised some other serious questions with reference to departures from the Constitution. He charges that the Highway Commission has employed a large number of men and women to run its annual business of about $20,000,000 without the Legislature having made provision for the jobs or fixed the salaries that should be paid.

He charges that the Legislature has attempted to delegate to the Highway Commission "the power to enact criminal laws" and assess penalties whereas "under the Constitution there are no crimes except those defined by statute, that such attempted delegation of power is unconstitutional and contrary to the genius of American institutions."

He charges that one act relating to the commission authorizes that body to imprison a person for debt. This relates to an opinion of the Attorney General that a motorcar owner who after January 1 has not paid the annual license tax on his car is subject to arrest.

Fitzpatrick recently instituted a case in the District Court of Carter county, which now is on its way to the Supreme Court, charging that an act of the last Legislature providing for a preferential primary system is unconstitutional. Other complaints are in the process of making.

The suit against the Highway Department will be heard in the District Court the 25th inst.

UNIVERSITY IN NEW HOME

A brilliant future is predicted for the University of British Columbia, now that it is "done with tents and hovels" and is in possession of its superb new plant at Point Grey, states Ernest L. Harris, American Consul General at Vancouver, in a report quoted in School Life, a publication of the Interior Department, Bureau of Education. The university was established by the Provincial Legislature of British Columbia in 1890 and began its corporate existence in 1915. It is an integral part of the educational system of the Province and, as its calendar states, its policy is to promote education in general and specifically to serve its constituency by teaching, research and extension work. The new buildings were formally opened September 22, 1925. They are of granite, of a modified Gothic style and are handsome and dignified. The site overlooks the Gulf of Georgia, near Vancouver, and an impressive mountain range gives it an imposing background.

Because of its proximity to American universities and the ease of communication with them, it is probable the relations of the new university with American institutions will be closer than with other Canadian universities.

The tiny airplane which won the speed and efficiency test at Mitchell Field, flying thirty-five miles on a gallon of gasoline, could make a trip from Chicago to New York at an expenditure of only $5 for fuel and oil.

It costs an average of $333.64 a year to maintain a pauper in the United States.

ENDLESS TASK FOR HISTORIAN

Missouri Society Indexing Century's Journals

Fifteen Thousand Volumes to be Scanned

Card System to Record All State's Activities

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

COLUMBIA (Mo.) Jan. 16.—The work of indexing some 15,000 bound volumes of Missouri newspapers, dating back more than 100 years, has been undertaken by the State Historical Society of Missouri in its library at Columbia.

Floyd C. Shoemaker, secretary of the society, has devised a card-index system for newspaper indexing similar to that used by the New York Times in its annual bound-volume index. All of the current papers from 1915 to date, the Boonville papers and the Columbia papers in their entirety have been indexed.

SUBJECTS INDEXED

The index is a selective catalogue system. The significant articles that might be of value to the genealogist, the lawyer, the merchant or the student in research are caught and listed in the card catalogue. The date of the paper, the name, the page and the column are given, so that the person seeking the data can turn directly to what he wants. In this way the papers suffer no mutilation, as no marks are put upon them

When the Columbia newspapers are completed, work will be started on papers in St. Louis, Jefferson City and other key towns which represent or reflect their particular section in Missouri.

Every phase of Missouri history, including vital statistics, is made available. Stories on such subjects as political movements, literary tendencies, religious developments, financial systems, road and railroad construction, developments, public improvements, authors, artists, Civil War veterans, old soldiers, 49ers and "personals" are noted. Resources and crops have their history chronicled in these files. The history of education in Missouri, both private and public, is no small part of the report.

These articles are being indexed at a cost of 4 cents a card. Many of these articles, after having been hunted up, would cost from $1.50 to $2 if published in serial pamphlet or book form.

STORY OF STATE

"The office of preserving what has been written is the task of the State Historical Society of Missouri," Mr. Shoemaker points out. "There is limitless material dealing with the life of the State embedded in the musty copies of the newspaper files published throughout the commonwealth.

"As the hieroglyphics of old awaited the discovery of the Rosetta Stone to disclose their guarded secrets, so the colossal mass of data stacked away in the newspaper files of the Historical Society has awaited this modern Rosetta-like power.

"The State Historical Society of Missouri, through its indexing system, is building up a tremendous library at a ridiculous low cost."

WHAT A LANGUAGE

The Prince Chicibu, second son of the Emperor of Japan, speaks and writes English fluently. Like most foreigners, however, he found difficulty in mastering the English article. His English tutor had explained to him that the article "a" must not be placed before a plural noun. Several days later the Prince came to the tutor, carrying the latter's prayer book. "How do you account for this?" he asked in all seriousness, indicating a word with his forefinger. The tutor looked over his royal pupil's shoulder. The word was "amen."

A Brief Description

Little Malachi McIntyre obtained a job as an office boy to the president of a New York concern. When he had served a few days, they gave him a form to fill out with his "personal record."

When Malachi reached that particular paragraph, "Have you any visible marks for identification in case of accident or death?" he rose from his chair and dashed over to a mirror to give himself a general inspection. Then he returned to his desk and wrote as his answer to this personal question:

"Nothing except freckles."—[Exchange.

ALIEN STRANGER FORCED TO WED

Young Italian Girl Freed From Unwelcome Mate

Flees From Home After Six Days of Matrimony

Charge of Bracelet Theft Dropped by Husband

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

QUINCY (Mass.) Jan. 16.—A strange story of a young Italian girl, unable to speak a word of English, being forced by threats of arrest and deportation to marry a much older man, and after six days running away to earn her living in another city, has won for Mrs. Pierina Ciriani annulment of her marriage to Giacomo Ciriani of West Quincy, and the right to resume her maiden name of Miss Pierina Cartano.

Ciriani fought the annulment suit in court, but Judge McCoole found against him after hearing the testimony of Quincy police officers.

BROUGHT TO AMERICA

Miss Cartano was in her eighteenth year and living in a little Italian village with her parents, she said when word came from her cousin, wife of a brother of Giacomo Ciriani in West Quincy, that a wonderful husband had been found for her in the wealthy land of America and money would be furnished for her steamship fare. Finally she consented to come to America on the express understanding that she need not marry unless she desired to after becoming acquainted with the husband-elect.

The first time she saw Giacomo Ciriani, she said, was after she had been passed by the immigration officials and was leaving the station. "He met me there," related Miss Cartano, "and said I must marry him at once. He was so different from the man I had hoped to meet. I told him and I told my cousin I couldn't marry a stranger like that; I must wait until we knew each other better.

"They said if I didn't marry him right away, I would be arrested and put in prison and after awhile sent back to my home in Italy disgraced. I didn't know what to do and I didn't have any friends to help me. I was terribly frightened. They made me go with them and be married and then he took me to his house in West Quincy. I cried and cried. After six days, I managed to escape, and ran away. I met some people who spoke Italian and found I was in a place called Watertown. They found work for me and a place where I could live."

THEFT CHARGED

Miss Cartano was traced by her husband and Quincy cousin and they had a warrant issued for her, charging theft of a bracelet given her by her cousin as a wedding present.

Attorney Ballen brought out in questioning Gacomo Ciriani that the husband had looked up the law and found that if an alien were arrested for theft the alien could be deported as undesirable. The larceny charge was dropped and the bride used her small savings to start the annulment suit, charging that fraud and duress were practiced by Ciriani to coerce her into marriage.

Miss Cartano is now working in Boston and living with new-found friends. She is not to be deported, is learning to speak English, and is planning to become an American citizen.

BEES DANCE WHEN HONEY IS FOUND

BERLIN OFFICIAL SAYS THEY ALSO HAVE DISTINCT CODE OF SIGNALS

BERLIN—That bees dance the Charleston, the waltz, the shimmy, the tango and many other dances with which humans are unfamiliar, is the declaration of Dr. Von Frisch of the Munich Zoological Gardens, who maintains bees do not "trip the light fantastic" as a means of amusement but in order to tell their mates the location of newly discovered honey domains.

By their gyrations, free and easy as Anglo-Saxon dances, they not only tell the direction of new pastures, but the distance and the kind of flowers, maintains Frisch, whose investigations have also proved that bees are practically color blind, being able to distinguish gray, but unable to differentiate between other colors.

Frisch used hives with glass sides in order to observe his bees. A bee marked with a drop of paint returning from a new and profitable find first deposited his cargo in a comb cell before announcing his find. Then followed a dance following the lines of a figure eight, which aroused all workers. Suddenly many left the hive and flew directly to the land flowing with honey, which was two kilometers distant, though the dancer remained at home.

Only flowers the same as the marked bee had visited were tapped by the new force of workers.

Frisch has classified numerous dances and figures executed by the bees returning with messages, and believes they tell the whole story of direction, distance and kind of flower by this method. To test out their color-distinguishing ability Frisch used a series of various color slabs on one of which a sugar lotion was placed. The scout bee was able to tell his mates exactly where to go when the slab was gray, but they were confused by other colors.—[Vancouver Province.

EAT SUET PUDDING AND LIVE LONGER

ENGLISH VILLAGE CLAIMS REMARKABLE HEALTH DUE TO THIS CUSTOM

It has long been a mystery at the Ministry of Health as to why Covington, a remote village in Hunts, with a rather primitive water supply, should be one of the healthiest spots in England.

The last five people who died in this village were from 84 to 91 years old.

The village is without a shop and it is a nine-mile journey from Thropston, the nearest railway station, through flat, open country.

Various reasons were given as to why the inhabitants live to be so old. One of the oldest villagers declared that it is mainly due to the old-fashioned custom of eating suet puddings.

"I was brought up on suet puddings," she said, "and you can not find a better food. We laugh at the way town-fed people eat. We attribute our good health to our enforced simplicity of diet. We cannot spend a penny in the village. In some ways your modern civilization has left us far behind, but in the art of living we are far ahead.

"We have fine, strong, healthy men in the village who have brought up big families on $3 per week and suet puddings. We live hard, work hard, and die hard on suet puddings. The complete recipe for old age is to live on home-fed bacon, home-made bread, home-grown vegetables, and suet puddings and pies."—[London letter in Vancouver Province.

The Vardar River in Greece is to be changed back into its channel of fifteen years ago because its deposits of silt are threatening the existence of Saloniki Harbor.

SOUTH AFRICA HAS WONDERFUL BULL

Lion stories still possess a strong interest in South Africa. It sometimes appears that the more interesting and exciting of such stories have no lion in the title role.

In Rhodesia the manager of a ranch received a report that a Hereford bull, cost $7500 when imported from England, was missing. The manager therefore reported to his directors in England that the bull had been attacked and eaten by lions.

But the bull was still very much alive, and returned unharmed some days after the letter had been despatched. Then the problem arose as to how the notification of the bull's continued existence was to be conveyed to the directors.

In desperation the manager appealed to the assistant manager, who undertook to deal with the matter. The directors received the following note the week after the advice of the bull's death had arrived:

"We regret that in our last letter we allowed an unfortunate error to creep in with regard to the imported bull. The three words 'eaten by lions' should have read 'chasing lions away.'"

ARRIVAL OF HELEN WILLS STIRS OLD WORLD FANS

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—In spite of the string of knockouts that Gene Tunney has been compiling, those close to the former devil-dog say that he will not enter the ring with Jack Dempsey this year even if Jack proves willing. His most recent feats of knocking out Tommy Gibbons, Bartley Madden and Dan O'Dowd have stamped him, of course, a very promising contender for the title.

But Dempsey is a different proposition and while Billy Gibson will do a lot of talking about Tunney meeting the champion, it is asserted that he is too wise to throw his charge into the ring with Jack before 1927 when it is reckoned Gene will have arrived at the peak of his prowess.

Close followers of the ring have no hesitation in saying that Gene sooner or later will be the world king. And with his war record and his personal charm he will be the most popular man who ever held the title.

COBB IS VETERAN

Ty Cobb, who recently celebrated his thirty-ninth birthday, has been with the Detroit Tigers since 1905. He played in 2725 games, has been at bat 10,353 times, made 3823 hits, and has scored 2038 runs. The "Georgia Peach" has stolen 856 bases during his 20 years in the big league.

UNBEATEN FIVE WORKS' AIM

Grizzly Mentor Turns in Great Record; Points Team for California and Stanford

Undefeated Southern California Conference basketball champions; quite a bill to fill, yet Coach Caddy Works of the local University of California believes he has the combination this year to turn the trick. Works refuses to become worked up over his prospects, but still continues to turn in victories with regularity.

At the beginning of the season Caddy so far forgot himself as to offer the statement that he would try to win one game a week. So far he has kept his word.

CADDY WORKS.

During Work's reign as head casaba mentor at Southern Branch, the Grizzlies' record has been one of the best in the conference. The nucleus for this year's squad, the best in the history of the Branch, was started in 1924, when the Grizzlies were nosed out of the conference title by the strong Whittier quintet. Last year the Branch did even better. Stanford and California defeated the Grizzlies, while Occidental was the only school to take a victory over the Branch among the conference cagers.

Starting off this season with seven veterans, Works has developed a team that so far has proven the best in Southern California. Ten games without a defeat have been chalked up so far, with the quintet just beginning to hit its stride. Stanford, Oregon Aggies, Montana State, the strong Hollywood Athletic Club and an all-star Navy team are numbered among the victories this season.

POINTS GRIZZLIES

Works will be content to take the conference title this year, but early in the season he pointed the Grizzlies for California and Stanford, placing the conference schedule in the background. Caddy, who made basketball history at California, is scheming against his alma mater and one of his fondest hopes is to defeat the Bears, when the teams clash here in February.

Last year the great work of Ernie Nevers nosed the Grizzlies out of a win, but this year the same team with the exception of Jack Ketchum, a forward, trounced the Cards for the first time. Works is looking forward to trouncing the Stanford five when the two teams meet in a return game at the Olympic Auditorium, February 5. The Cards should be a greatly improved machine by that time and one of the best games of the year is looked for.

In the conference, Whittier is the only squad conceded a chance to upset the Grizzlies. Basketball is the big sport at the Poet institution. That coupled with the fact that

ENGLISH NET ENTHUSIASTS PREDICTING GREAT MEET

Wimbledon Tourney Should Prove Greatest in History; Tilden to Enter, is Intimation

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Tennis interest in England usually somewhat dormant during the winter months, is at a high pitch this year. The arrival of Helen Wills in France has added a tremendous fillip to the thing and English tennis people are already talking of the "greatest Wimbledon of them all."

This year is the golden jubilee year of the famous English tennis event and the most earnest endeavors are being used to bring the best players of the world to the English meeting.

SUZANNE LENGLEN.

P. W. Rootham, vice-president of the British association, is quoted by the cable dispatches as saying: "The gathering at Wimbledon will include the finest talent in the world. It probably will be the best collection of tennis players that has ever appeared together at one time. We are especially gratified that Tilden will compete."

LITTLE CHANCE

The last sentence, it would seem, finds Mr. Rootham carried away with his own enthusiasm. There is, of course, a likelihood that Tilden will go abroad, for the American champion has changed his mind overnight in the past. But at present he has strongly intimated that he will be unable to go over.

American tennis officials, anxious to co-operate in the British celebration, are ready and willing to send across the best team that the country can muster. But just which ones of America's leading men stars will make the trip is rather problematical.

Billy Johnston would probably go, but it is doubtful that either Tilden or Richards will make the trip. Tilden does not want to lose the time from competition in this

Bright Track Prospects at Santa Ana High

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SANTA ANA, Jan. 16.—Prospects for a winning track team at Santa Ana Polytechnic High School appear bright, with a number of veterans returning. Coach Walter Scott, new mentor, hopes to make a bid for the Coast Preparatory championship. Howard Paul, diminutive athlete, who last year captured second in the broad jump at the State championship meet at Stanford, will be back in a suit this year and is looked to to win many points.

The first meet will be against the Pomona freshmen at Claremont, February 19. A joint team from the high school and the junior college will be entered. The conference will be held April 27 at Pasadena.

In the sprints, Harvey Bear, who performed well last year, appears to be the best bet in that division. Other good sprinters are Howard Paul, Jack Blakney, Everett Beery and Judson Riley.

In the weights, Santa Ana will rely largely upon the performance of Jerry Heard, Harry Radamacher and Will Schleicher.

HOCKEY FLOURISHES

More than 200 hockey games will be staged in Western Ontario this month when practically every village, town and city will present teams in junior, intermediate and senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association, which is the great amateur organization governing the sport.

OBSERVATIONS

BY THE INNOCENT BYSTANDER
BILL HENRY

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA sportsmen will get a chance this spring, unless plans fail to materialize, to see the finest aggregation of foreign track and field stars that ever invaded this country when Hoff of Norway, Houben of Germany and Paulen of Holland journey out this way. The successful trip of the flying Finn, Paavo Nurmi, a year ago created an interest in track and field athletes that was unequaled in history, and the 1926 invasion, while it lacks the scintillating presence of Nurmi, ought to be a pretty good repetition of the success scored by the great distance runner. All of the afore-mentioned athletes are either in this country now or on their way here, and plans are being formulated to have them make a journey to Los Angeles during the course of their stay under the Stars and Stripes. Just what success they'll have, of course, we don't know, but they ought to

BOWLERS RESUME ACTION

Local Pin Artists to Swat Maples Again After Layoff During Holidays

Members of the local bowling colony are beginning to get back into their regular league schedules again after the lay-off enforced by the recently concluded city championship tournament and the Christmas-New Year holiday. The stars are in good form, and the pin-toppling activities are expected to be in full sway in a short time.

The title affair proved more or less of a howling success with the best stars in the city performing, and records going by the boards on all hands. The nifty Richfield Oil quintet walked off with team honors in the easiest fashions, piling up a lead that resembles the one established in the Petroleum League.

Local bowyers are allready preparing for the Pacific Coast Congress which is to be held in San Diego in May. The Richfield team plans to enter this meet, and is expected to walk away from any and all opposition.

STATE AND SOUTHERN TITLE TILTS TO DRAW VISITORS

Fifty-four Hole Women's Event to Pave Way for Midwinter Feminine Classic

BY BILL WISE

With the replacing last week of the last divot lifted by the internationally famous field playing in the $10,000 Los Angeles open event, more than 500 local golfers have settled back to a state of California tee and greens normalcy, which includes both men and women's team matches each week, several invitational tourneys that are fast approaching, and intensive training for the California State and Southern open events that will be played here within the next several weeks.

While scores of local masculine golfers will be engaging in interclub team tilts, as many more women will be representing their own clubs in the Auxiliary Team League, and will also be playing through a fifty-four hole invitation event—and likewise shaping for a real midwinter classic, the women's invitation at Los Angeles, late next month.

Aside from team matches, the next event of importance is the annual Pebble Beach Gold Vase tourney for men, February 12-14, just preceding the fourth annual Pebble Beach women's championship, the most representative competition in the State for California and visiting women.

COLLEGIATE EVENT

The men's club championship at Coronado is scheduled for February 10-15, and will draw a fine entry from this vicinity, while the intercollegiate championship at Pebble Beach, February 20-22, will find Harold Thompson, Eddie Meyburg and more than twoscore more local youngsters playing for the golfing glory of many leading colleges and universities.

The Pebble Beach women's championship has come to be the finest feminine tourney in the West. While the title is purely local by far the most representative field of northern and southern women always play through the event. Feminine State title tilts in the north draw fewer than six local entries, with the reverse likewise true.

The midwinter classic at the Los Angeles club will be the best local women's event of the year. Many visiting players will be included in the fast field, starting play in the event February 23.

Both the State and southern open events will be awarded at the annual election and business meeting of the Southern California Professional Golfers' Association, February 15. Brentwood and El Caballero would be wonderful courses for the events.

IDEAL COURSES

Par has never been broken at El Caballero and professionals here during golf week were very much impressed with the course. Wee Willie Hunter's Brentwood course is one of the fairest tests of championship golf in this vicinity. The course has been completely revamped, with traps so situated that perfect golfing skill is required to tour the layout in even figures.

If Brentwood officials would care for the competition, the Brentwood club would be a wonderful spot to hold either the southern or State open, preferably the latter. El Caballero could very easily change the championship aspect of many of the high-caliber visiting golfers, and the event would develop into a competition worthy of the title.

Dates of amateur events throughout the State during the next few weeks are as follows:

January 13, 20, 27, February 3, 10, 17—Men's team matches.
January 28, February 4, 18—Women's team matches.
February 8, 9, 10—Women's fifty-four-hole medal play tourney at Brentwood, Flintridge and Hillcrest.
February 12, 14—Annual Pebble Beach gold vase tourney.
February 15, 19—Fourth annual Pebble Beach women's championship tourney.
February 15, 20—Men's club championship at Coronado.
February 20, 22—Annual California intercollegiate championship at Pebble Beach.
February 23, 28—Women's mid-winter invitation tourney at Los Angeles Country Club.

Tozer to Lead Venetian Grid Squad in 1926

Those football teams that bucked up against the Venice High School gridders of 1925 realize what good judgment the Venetian pigskinners of 1926 exercised when they selected Dick Tozer as captain.

Tozer stretches skyward beyond six feet, weighs well in the neighborhood of 180 pounds, and tackles like an entire line in himself. He was the outstanding defensive man for Venice, champion of the Bay League, the year through.

It was Tozer who caught a forty-yard pass in the Santa Monica game and enabled Venice to whip the Samohians for the first time in thirteen years. In the San Bernardino contest, which was a play-off qualifying for the semifinal game of the Southern California championship, Tozer picked up a Berdoo fumble and rambled eighty-eight yards to the winning touchdown.

GOLF WINNERS SHARE GLORY WITH CHAMBER OFFICIALS

SAN DIEGO NET STARS MAY LOSE

Local High School Tennis Experts Lining Up for Hilltop Invaders

Southern California high schools are rapidly selecting their respective tennis teams for the approaching 1926 tennis season.

Under the instruction of Capt. George Newby, Long Beach High School stars are rapidly rounding into shape for the year, the Coast League season opening on the first of April. Stanley, Stimson, Sweet and Caneer will support the leader in his efforts to dislodge the championship team at San Diego High School.

Coach Dale Issenhuth, student mentor at the Movie City institution of Hollywood, announced the rankings for the Foothiller tennis team, the first five players of which are Leonard Dwarkings, Tom Stephens, Clifford Robins, William Palmer and Roy Lane.

Roosevelt High School's hopes for a championship net team have also jumped considerable in the last year, for the returning of Capt. Frank Kabada has given the students fresh hopes for the year 1926.

Winning first place in the annual school tennis championship, Harold Eager, last year's veteran star, surprised the Artisan students and, incidentally, himself, for the star will play first singles for the Vermont-avenue aggregation this year. John Walls walked off with third honors, while Moose Thompson and Sam Gendall took second and fourth positions, respectively.

The loss of Hyde Braley, Fairfax High School's sole veteran tennis star, put a crimp in the chances for a junior league title, but with the addition of Nep Boren, Bob Schelmen, George Goss and Bob Baumgarten, the students are hoping for better results. Formerly a coach at Los Angeles High School, Bob Goodenough has taken over the tennisters and is rapidly developing some real tennis talent.

Jack Phillips and Rex Goodcell are destined to shine on the courts for the Romans out Wilshire district. Coach Vincent Peet has built a classy tennis team around these two players.

With Polytechnic High School out of the race because of lack of tennis talent, the seven remaining prep institutions are awaiting the announcement of the 1926 tennis schedule, for in this line-up, the school leaders will find just what institution has received the advantage as to courts, and time of play.

AFTER JACK'S CROWN

Bill McKenzie, Vancouver Island logger heavyweight, recently knocked out Art Shearer of Portland, Or., in the second round of a recent bout in Seattle. The winner was down for a count of nine in the first round. It was to have been a six-round bout. McKenzie has won four bouts by knockouts in as many weeks since making his debut as an aspirant for heavyweight honors.

SOCCER TOURNEY NEXT

The first round proper of the annual soccer football tournament for the national cup, emblematic of the championship of the United States, will be played Saturday and Sunday, the 16th and 17th inst. Sixteen teams in the East and sixteen in the West will compete. Winners qualify for the second round and losers are eliminated. New Bedford will entertain the Shawsheen team, cup holders.

NEW COURSE READY SOON

St. Andrews's Pay-As-You-Play Links on Ventura Boulevard Will Open July 1st

Norman Macbeth, president of the St. Andrews Corporation, has announced July 1 as the formal opening date of Los Angeles' first privately owned pay-as-you-play grass golf course and large crews of men with sixteen teams of mules are hustling the grading of 131 acres on Ventura Boulevard in preparation for the seeding of the links early in March.

The eighteen-hole course will be of standard size with a total length of 6000 yards and will have full grass fairways and greens, Macbeth said in discussing plans for the new project, development of which he is personally supervising.

Norman Macbeth

"The dire need of more public golf playing facilities in Los Angeles has been demonstrated in a very striking fashion during the last week, when visiting golfers here for the $10,000 open tournament, sought public courses on which to try their stride," Norman Macbeth said.

"The lack of adequate public golf courses in Los Angeles has always been a source of wonder to me. Chicago with a population of 3,000,000 has twenty-six privately owned and twelve municipally owned pay-as-you-play golf courses. Los Angeles, with a population of a third as large as Chicago has only two municipally owned public courses and not a single standard-sized grass course for public use.

PERFECT SETTING

"I have entered into the St. Andrews golf project with considerable enthusiasm because I see in it an opportunity to provide a playground for thousands of golf players who are not club members or who are visiting in Southern California and find under present conditions, little opportunity to play at their favorite sport," said Macbeth.

About two months ago the St. Andrews Corporation purchased 131 acres on Ventura Boulevard adjacent to the Caballero Country Club from the Harold G. Ferguson Corporation for a consideration approximating $250,000.

OFFICIALS EFFICIENT

Norman Macbeth is president of the new golf corporation, T. C. Brady is its secretary, and the directors include R. L. Woodrough, Harold G. Ferguson, George L. Eastman and Thomas Bundy.

NEW PENN PAVILION

Pennsylvania expects to have its new gymnasium and indoor athletic stadium ready for use for the 1926-27 basketball season. It will be used for an indoor baseball diamond, an auditorium and a basketball floor to accommodate four games at a time. A swimming pool will be included in the new structure.

CURLING POPULAR

Seventeen clubs are members of the Grand National Curling Club of America. A feature of the season will be the Gordon international medal play at Utica February 6. Canada is expected to enter twenty teams.

SCORES OF ELKS IN GREENS TOURNEY AT SAN PEDRO TODAY

Ike Wentworth, president of the Southern California Invitational Golf Association, has completed arrangements to start a record number of brother Elks in the interclub golf tourney at the San Pedro Golf and Country Club today.

Many trophies will be offered for winners over one of the most beautiful seaside links in the West, and judging from the interest that has been displayed in former Elk's events, the play today will sizzle.

Competition in the three-man team matches will be very keen, as all lodges in the southern jurisdiction have entered a team to compete for the Gene Murphy trophy. Los Angeles Lodge, No. 99, will be represented by George T. Cline, Johnny Hodge, Frank Deleot.

The ball sweepstake for individuals will be divided into classes A, B and C, eighteen holes medal play at handicap, players not having a handicap to be given one before starting. Tee-off at 9:30 a.m. Prizes will be awarded to the winners of low gross and low net in each class.

All Elks in good standing are cordially invited to participate.

GOLF STRATEGIES THAT WON

Long Jim Barnes Trails Jock Hutchison Till Trap Opens Way to Win P.G.A. Championship at Siwaney Club in 1916

BY BUNKER

One of the best bits of headwork ever staged in a major golf tournament was that pulled by Long Jim Barnes in the Professional Golf Association championship in 1916.

This happened to be the first tournament arranged in this country to decide the professional championship at match play, and naturally every important player in America was on hand in hopes of winning the title.

After a week of hard battling, Long Jim and Jock Hutchison pushed their way into the finals. And the big gallery that flocked to the Siwaney Club, near New York, to see these two great players in thirty-six holes of decisive play certainly got their money's worth.

Jock started off in the lead. At the end of eight holes he had Barnes four down. At this point Jim braced and for twenty succeeding holes the Hutch either had to bow to his opponent or accept a halve.

But, despite the record set from the ninth to the twenty-eighth hole, Barnes was able to do no more than overcome Jock's early lead. It was nip and tuck from then on. Jock won the thirty-third hole, putting him one to the good. The thirty-fourth was halved. So, with only two holes remaining, Barnes was one down. His chance to win the title didn't seem worth betting on.

GOT GOOD DRIVES

Shooting from the seventeenth (or thirty-fifth) tee, Jim and Jock got good drives. But after the second shots the gallery was left deeply surprised, believing that both players had gone off their game.

Jock's mashie shot went over the green and into a deep bunker at the left side. Jim's ball fell considerably short of the green. The general impression was that both contestants were beginning to feel the strain of the close struggle.

But, although Hutchison's shot was an error, that of Barnes was not. It had been deliberately calculated and executed according to plan.

The seventeenth hole at Siwaney measured about 400 yards, calling for a drive and a mashie to the green. After the drive, the fairway rises at a considerable grade to an elevated green, so that the player, pitching up over the slope, cannot see what happens to his ball after it finishes its roll on the green.

The traps guarding the green consisted of a big bunker along the left side which bent around a bit to the rear, and a deep pit at the front corner on the right.

The green was so constructed that it sloped from right to left. On a play to the green one would naturally shoot to the right so that the ball would roll toward the cup, instead of away from it. But in so doing there was always danger of getting in the pit. On the other hand, a ball pitched left of the cup might easily be shunted off into the bunker on that side.

By getting a longer drive than Jock, Barnes was able to watch his play to the green. He saw his opponent's ball drop a little to the left of the cup, almost hole-high.

"From what I knew of the punch Jock had put into the play," Jim explains, "and what I knew of the surface of the green, I felt sure that his ball had bounded into the bunker, although, from where I stood, I didn't know this to be the truth.

"I have always thought that Jock erred in not attempting to play his second shot short. At the time he had me 1 down, Par 4 was the best one had a right to expect on that hole. That certainly would have halved it nine times out of ten. It might have won it.

"By halving the hole, he would have gone to the next tee still 1 up. Then he would only have needed to halve the eighteenth hole to have beaten me. In other words, I think, his tactics at the finish should have been defensive.

BARNES PLAYED SHORT

"If the ball had held to the green, I should have tried to place my second there, too. But, convinced he was in the trap, I felt sure he would need one stroke to get out and two putts, at least, to get down. He might take two strokes to get out of the trap and have to hole a 6.

"I decided to play just short of the green, trusting to an accurate chip shot to get me a 4, but conscious that even a 5 might win the hole.

"Well, my play was successful. My pitch and chip left me with a short putt. Jock got out of the bunker nicely, but had to sink a fifteen-foot putt for par. He failed and I won the hole. This squared us and when I took the eighteenth, 5 and 6, the championship was mine."

Well done for Jim, all right. And when it is considered that there is no greater chip shot player in the game than he, it is easily seen he had good reason to expect his strategy to succeed.

CAVLIFLOWER ALLEY NOTES

[illegible]

[illegible] harp voice of his. "Don't you touch these bandages," snarled Bud, with a truculent stare. "I'm long on the jinx stuff, especially in regard to bandages." Then and there the dandy little boxer rushed out of the room into the gymnasium proper and finished his bandaging unmolested.

Phil Salvadore has time, now and then, to run down from his Pomona gymnasium and indulge in a bit of floor shuffling at the Newsies'. While actively engaged in shadow boxing last Tuesday, a by-stander ventured: "Gee, but Phil's sure loosening up this afternoon." Then some old disgruntled boxer, overhearing the remark, had to butt in with, "Say, brother, you really can't be referring to the purse strings."

Joey Sanger, through Brother Lou, declares that as soon as he rounds into his best shape again he will be ready to take on either Bud Taylor or Jimmy McLarnin. Lou thinks that such a match would surely draw a capacity house. Joey's recent showing here with Doc Snell has endeared him with local fans and he has become a prime favorite. The cry is, "Let us have more of Sanger."

Newsboy Brown lost a decision to Cupid last week. Miss Sophia Novak of Sioux City hit him a tremendous blow right over the heart and Brownie went down for the full count. Just after the soft tones of "Here comes the bride" had died away, Mushy Callahan attempted to show the happy party a few steps he had learned at Solomon's penny ante, claiming it was a genuine Charleston. Ace Hudkins, with fire in his eye, declared that Mushy was an imposter and that the dance was nothing but a yiddisher gazotsky. Ace then showed the real goods. Callahan was miffed—invited Hudkins into the back yard to fight it out and attempted to gum up the whole works, but Carlo Curtis threw oil on the troubled waters and his continued unrefined. Nevertheless, Hudkins claimed all evening that Mushy's dance originated in dear old Jerusalem.

Dave Landau tells of a sportively inclined butcher in London who was almost put on the blink by a bunch of spunging fighters. Dave had a big stable of pugs in the English metropolis. Every time one of them got a black eye, the butcher kindly came forward with a free portion of beefsteak to reduce the swelling. As the butcher's charity swelled so did the demand for free meat, and an epidemic of black eyes supervened. The beefsteak merchant would undoubtedly have gone on the rocks had he not finally tumbled to the fact that most of the shiners were phonies and that the meat, instead of clinging lovingly to a damaged orb, usually found its way into a palooka's stomach with a cloudburst of gravy all over it.

When the California boxing bill went into effect, the soothsayers went into session. Carefully inspecting the sacrificial entrails they exhaled as follows: "It doth seem that the gods pass their favors Holly Stadium way." Neither time nor custom has staled the words of the prophets. "Oh, that this too, too, solid flesh—"

JACK DEMPSEY TURNS WILD ANIMAL TRAINER

When wild animals invaded the Manhattan Gymnasium last week William Harrison Dempsey turned trainer and before he was through the Nebraska Wildcat and the Nebraska Tiger rolled over and purred like well-fed kittens. The wildcat was represented by Ace Hudkins, lightweight fighter, and the tiger by John Pesek, heavyweight wrestler. The latter appears on Lou Daro's card at the Olympic tomorrow night, and much of his training is done with the heavyweight boxing champion and Hudkins as his co-workers. The trio attracts big crowds at the Manhattan each day.

MIDDIES SEEKING HASKELL

Annapolis Gridders Want Indian Eleven to Start Football Season

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ANNAPOLIS (Md.) Jan. 16. It was said at the Naval Academy today that negotiations were on for a game with the Haskell Indians to start the Naval Academy football season for next year, the date being October 2.

It was also announced that the naval team would depart from its custom of several years' standing and play a game the Saturday before the Army game. Its opponent for this date, November 19, will be Washington College of Chestertown, Md. The game with Haskell gives the midshipmen another contest in a schedule which promises much, including Drake, Princeton, Colgate, Michigan, West Virginia, Wesleyan and the military academy.

Some of the most interesting and exciting games ever played at Annapolis were between the navy team and the Carlisle Indian eleven, then at the zenith of its fame, under Warner.

STUDY CALLOW'S SYSTEM

Head Coach Ed Stevens and Assistant Fred Newell of Harvard University rowing squad will visit the University of Washington this month and study the system in use by Russell "Rusty" Callow in turning out his speedy eight-oared crews. Yale has beaten Harvard regularly of late, not losing a race for the last three years and Stevens is anxious to defeat Leader's champions next June.

MONTREAL IS WINNER

The Montreal A.A.A. won Dominion championships in five branches of sport and Province of Quebec championships in seven branches during 1925.

NO-HIT CHARLIE DOOMED; PITCHER SOLD DOWN RIVER

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—"How the mighty fall!" so runs an old adage. It is a truism that holds good in all walks of life, but especially so in baseball.

Just a few years ago Charley Robertson of Sherman, Tex., was "zipping" his fast ball across, with a deceptive hop on it, and holding the Detroit Tigers, led by the inimitable Ty Cobb, hitless. That was April 30, 1922.

Just a few days ago Secretary Harry Grabiner of the Chicago White Sox asked for waivers on the lad from the Lone Star State and the St. Louis Browns claimed him. In other words he is sold down the Mississippi River to St. Louis for a petty $4000. Such is fame!

After the quiet, unassuming Charley pitched his perfect game in Detroit in 1922 you could not have purchased him from the White Sox for $75,000.

IN A RUSH

Robbie entered baseball's hall of fame in a most sensational manner. He was not heard from much; in fact, he was considered just a good pitcher until he pitched his no-hit, no-run game against the snarling Bengals and defeated them by a score of 2 to 0.

In keeping the Tigers from first base for nine innings Robertson paralleled the feat of Addie Joss hurling against "Big Ed" Walsh of Chicago October 2, 1908, and Cy Young pitching for Boston against Philadelphia May 5, 1904.

The day that Robbie hurled his perfect game he was given faultless support, especially from the late Harvey McClellan and Eddie Collins, now manager of the Chicago White Sox. By snappy fielding they retired six batters at first. Only six balls were driven far into the outfield, and they were taken care of by the venerable Harry Hooper and Johnny Mostil. Robertson fanned six hitters as a part of his perfect day's work.

Manager Ty Cobb called on two pinch hitters in the ninth, but they were retired in the same workmanlike fashion as their predecessors.

Aside from the second inning Herman Pillette, who is now in the minors, also hurled excellent ball against the Pallid Hose, he being touched for two runs in that frame.

ALL THE TRICKS

Ty Cobb and his players resorted to all the trickery at their command and time and again appealed to the umpire; but without avail. Robbie was as cool as a North Atlantic iceberg and just floated his fast ball in while the Tigers thought that he was tampering with the horsehide.

In his knack of making the ball hop over the corners of the plate or break sharply to the inside, Robertson possessed control that was uncanny. He never was in a hole with a batter and consequently did not feel obliged at any time to groove a pitch to avoid passing a batter.

A few years ago Robbie had an operation performed for the removal of a bone in his pitching arm and since then has not taken his regular turn on the rubber. When he did pitch he displayed cleverness in pitching to a hitter's weakness, but he never duplicated his sensational feat of 1922 in Detroit.

SOCCERITES IN DEMAND

Scottish soccer clubs have so far this season received close to $200,000 in transfer fees for players who have crossed the border to engage in English competitions. The notables include Hugh Gallacher, Airdrieonians to Newcastle United Harper Hibernians to Arsenal; James, Motherwell to Cardiff City.

HARRY GREB HEADING WEST

Coming to Meet Ted Moore in Vernon Main Event Next Week; No Title at Stake

Harry Greb is heading for Los Angeles. He is the sixth ring champion to stamp his feet in Southern California since the new boxing law.

Paul Berlenbach—light-heavyweight title-holder—is the only member of the present reigning ring kings who hasn't showed here since the new ten-round boxing law. Jack Dempsey lives here. Fidel La Barba brought the flyweight championship to Los Angeles. Mickey Walker, Charles Phil Rosenberg and Benny Leonard are recent visitors.

Harry Greb

Greb already has his tickets bought—rather, they were sent to him by Promoter Jack Doyle. He is matched to box Ted Moore at Vernon on the 26th inst. in a ten-round decision fight, but will not be risking his title. The weight will protect him.

Moore boxed Greb for the middleweight championship in New York a little over a year ago. They went fifteen rounds. The fight was so close ringside fans booed the decision when the referee raised Greb's hand.

"I really thought I fought him to a standoff that night," says Moore "Greb can't be improving at his age, and I think I am a better fighter now than then. I can't win Greb's title in this fight, but if I win I can make plenty money as the man who beat Greb."

Moore is working at Dempsey's gym and he is in far better shape now than when he lost a hairline verdict to Leo Lomski several weeks ago. He proved that he is one of the smartest eastern boxers that has appeared here.

Moore took the Lomski match on a few days' notice when Bert Colima's bad hand forced him to retire from the picture.

Women's Teams to Compete in Polo Matches

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

BALTIMORE (Md.) Jan. 16. Philadelphia and Baltimore horsewomen will meet in polo contests next spring. Mrs. Randolph Nichols, president of the Maryland Women's Polo Association, today announced that a squad of Philadelphia society women will play a Maryland four on Pikesville field here. The Philadelphia society women are the first players to respond favorably to the challenges sent out by the Baltimore group during the last few weeks.

Two other overtures for games made to the women's polo team of Chestertown, Md., and the girls' team of Philadelphia, are expected to be accepted within several days.

Miss Kitty Penn Smith, and Miss Lydia Clothier, are prominent players on the Philadelphia society women's team.

YACHT YARDS BUSY

On December 1 last, the Herreshoff Yacht Yards at Bristol, R. I., had under construction nearly sixty boats, ranging from sixty-five-foot schooners to flocks of little twelve-and-a-half-foot knockabouts for Buzzard's Bay consumption. In addition the company had on its hands the work of changing the famous cup defender Resolute from a sloop to a schooner.

MANY ENTERED IN LONG RACE

Expect 150 Runners to Go in Cross-Country

City Terrace Gallop Draws Host of Entries

Rival Indian Teams Battle for First Honors

More than 150 competitors, among them the leading marathon runners of the Southwest, will take part in the first annual cross-city run from the Los Angeles Athletic Club to City Terrace next Saturday afternoon. Many of these men competed in the annual Amateur Athletic Union cross-country championships at Occidental College yesterday morning and are in the best of condition for the long, cruel grind of six and two-tenths miles, which they must travel over hard pavement next Saturday.

TOM HUMPHREY.

It is estimated that more than 10,000 people will swarm about the finish line in Ramona Plaza, while many thousands more will watch the runners go by them at different stages of the route, which leads a winding course to the distant finish. The race starts at Seventh and Olive streets, the runners going north on Olive to Fifth, east on Fifth to Hill, north on Hill to First, east on First to Anderson, north on Anderson to Aliso, east on Aliso to Brooklyn avenue east on Brooklyn to Evergreen, north on Evergreen to Wabash and by Wabash to Ramona Plaza and the finish.

A two-mile run for high-school entries will start at the corner of Brooklyn avenue and Evergreen at 2 o'clock, the finish line being the same as that which marks the end of the longer race.

REDSKINS BATTLE

One of the features of the six-mile marathon will be the team duel between the Zuni Indians from New Mexico and the Sherman Indians of Riverside. These Indians are considered the class of the race and there is much rivalry between the two groups. Mike Kirk is bringing five of his best Zunis, while Coach Jameson of Sherman, whose Indians made a remarkable showing in the Griffith Park race, will enter sixteen men. The first five will score points.

Many expect to see two of these Indians battle for the individual first-place trophy. Thomas Humphrey of Sherman, winner of the Breakfast Club race, is the outstanding Southern California runner, while in Amesoni Patasoni the Zunis have an experienced champion who once defeated the great Joie Ray in a one-mile race. Patasoni did this at Kansas City while attending the Haskell Indian School in 1919. In 1920 he made the American Olympic team in the 10,000 meters, but sprained his ankle on the boat and was unable to compete in Belgium. At Pasadena in 1921 he won the national junior A.A.U. five-mile championship, defeating Charley Hunter, now coach of the Olympic Club and at that time considered the West's greatest five-mile runner.

BOUT WITH SENCIO WILL FIX LA BARBA'S STATUS

Clever's Fight With Pancho Villa Will be Basis for Comparison; Title-Holder Confident

Fidel La Barba's exact standing as a world champion will be determined in the Olympic Auditorium ring Wednesday night when the flyweight title-holder meets Clever Sencio in a twelve-round bout.

Fidel will be shooting at a definite goal. His performance against Sencio will be carefully compared with the result of the Sencio-Pancho Villa bout which was fought last August in Manila, Philippine Islands.

George Blake

The late Villa was his real self when he fought Sencio. He was not in shape when he met Jimmy McLarnin in Oakland shortly afterwards.

HARD BATTLE

Villa, at his best, was barely able to defeat Sencio in 15 rounds. Throughout the struggle Sencio kept his head and matched blow for blow with Pancho. The natives were astonished at his success for Villa had been regarded as an idol.

Sencio himself might have won but for the fact he was young and green and himself entertained the idea that Villa was a superman. It did not occur to him that he could himself have progressed so far as to be a match even with a great champion.

Sencio will be a background of a true comparison. It has been a half year since he fought Villa and in that time he has become twice as good. He is now confident, sure of himself. In nine fights on the Coast he swept through the best the slope had to offer. He knocked out Mickey Gill and Roy Riley and beat such good boys as Georgie Rivers, Corporal Izzy Schwartz, Frankie Novey and Jimmy Dunning.

La Barba will be out gunning for a decisive victory, if possible a knockout. Fidel realizes that Sencio is classed as his outstanding challenger. It will be an immense benefit to his already big prestige if he annihilates the Filipino.

MAY SCORE KAYO

Fidel is concentrating on a right-hand style which he hopes to display with telling effect against Sencio. It has been noticeable that La Barba, a left-hook fighter by all rights, has been able to beat Frankie Genaro, Ray Fee and Lew Perfetti with right hands.

It is very likely that Sencio may offer such stubborn opposition that La Barba will need all of his two-hand prowess to win. If that is the case, Auditorium patrons will see one of the greatest fighters in the world in action.

La Barba is the most dangerous fighter of his weight in the world because of his determination. When he means to get in close and whip over his left hand only a miracle will prevent him. He is so remarkably strong that he could close in on a welterweight if he desired, without running the risk [illegible] being harmed by close infighting.

In addition to this great scrap, Matchmaker Joe Levy has arranged for one of the best supporting [illegible] presented at Jack Root's arena.

PR[illegible] GOOD

Jack Spar, the latest lightweight flash, meets Alex Hart in the semi-wind-up. Hart is the boy who pinch batted for Bobby Barrett against Dode Bercot at Vernon on a minute's notice and decisively thrashed the Northwest logger.

Spar may jump into the main-event class if he wins. He has looked like a champ in his last three bouts. Teddy O'Hara couldn't lay a glove on him.

The special event sends Sailor [illegible] against Benny Furrell in a rematch. This bout had the fans on their toes several weeks ago.

Danny McCoy and Phil Harris, welterweights, and Sally Martinez and Jackie Carr meet in the four rounders.

SCHEDULE FOR POLO IS NAMED

Southwestern Title Play Will be Staged at Fort Sam Houston

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The annual midwinter polo tournament for the championship of the southwestern circuit, and the first outdoor event of 1926, will be played at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., from January 17 to February 7, according to an announcement from the United States Polo Association. The play will be for the United States Polo Association's cup and entries will close on the 16th inst.

The championship is open to teams of four whose aggregate handicap does not exceed twelve goals, with an individual handicap limit of six goals. However, no team will be required to concede more than six goals. Games will be played under the existing handicap and a team must represent a club in the circuit. The cup cannot be won by default.

The present members of the Southwestern Circuit are San Antonio Polo Club, Dallas Polo Club, Houston Riding and Polo Club, Austin Polo Club, Mexico City Polo Club, Fort Sill, Okla., Fort Reno, Okla., Fort Bliss, Tex., Fort Sam Houston, Tex., Fort Clark, Tex., Fort McIntosh, Tex., Kelly Field, Tex., Fort Ringgold, Tex., Fort Huachuca, Tex., Fort Brown, Tex., and Marfa, Tex. Fort Bliss was the winner of the national inter-circuit championship held at Philadelphia last year.

OREGON MAKES PROFIT

University of Oregon, although they failed to win a single conference football game last season, had a profit from the sport of $17,000. Capt. J. J. McEwan is to coach the Eugene gridmen this fall.

REGATTA AT SEATTLE

Seattle will be the scene of the Pacific International Yachting Association regatta July 4 to 7, next. No cash prizes will be awarded in any event.

MAY EVEN THE BALANCE

General Manager Jack Root of the Olympic Auditorium sends Clever Sencio, outstanding challenger for the flyweight championship, against Fidel La Barba, the title-holder, in a twelve-round bout at the Olympic Auditorium Wednesday night. If Sencio can't even the balance nobody can, believes Root.

MACK PREDICTS CLOSE SEASON

Expects Yankees to be Back in Good Form

Looks for Good Work from Tony Lazerre

Southern Association Turns Out Good Men

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics has announced that there will be a tight race in the American League next season, which is a mouthful for the silent mahout of the White Elephants.

CONNIE MACK

In his prediction he remarked that the Yankees will be back fighting "toot," which might be considered a left-handed compliment even though Connie didn't mean it that way. On top of that the news comes from New York that Owner Ruppert and Manager Huggins are not only perfectly satisfied with the outlook, but that they expect to be in the hunt for the flag.

That the Yanks will be a different team from last season may be expected. Col. Ruppert has paid out real cash for ballplayers. There have been reports of a $300,000 bank roll having gone "south" in the various transactions and the colonel has promised to substantiate these figures.

In the neighborhood of ten newly acquired players loom as being better than the average. Some of them cost real money and others were obtained because the Yanks had strings on them. There are at least three of more than the ordinary class in the lot—Maurice Shannon, added to the Cubs, Mark Koenig, St. Paul, both shortstops, and Myles Thomas of Toronto, pitcher.

CHANGES HIS NAME

Li Zerri (Manager Huggins spells it that way) was the sensation on the Pacific Coast, where he broke the home-run record with sixty over-the-fence clouts to his credit. He was no slouch as a fielder, either, and he may make the grade. Koenig was considered one of the best short fielders in the American Association, although he did not approach the record set by Maurice Shannon, who will play under Joe McCarthy. He also is a pretty hefty hitter.

Myles Thomas was the star pitcher with the Maple Leafs. As Detroit has a stranglehold on Toronto material, many wondered why the Tigers did not see him first, but it is claimed the price was steep and that the Yanks alone were willing to meet it. In effectiveness the two Thomases, Myles and Alphonse, the latter belonging to the White Sox, were neck and neck, and if Al should make good, so should Myles.

The Yankees also came in possession of a couple of catchers in Pat Collins of St. Paul and Roy Luebbe of Omaha. Collins is no youngster, but he can hit, which should more than make up for his age. The Western League backstop was one of the best in the circuit. Jack Smith, unknown to fame, was also hooked, as was John Barnes of Colgate University. With what they have, the former champs should be well provided with receivers.

GOOD ADDITIONS

Two hard-hitting and well-matured players were obtained from the Southern Association. Henry Cullop and Frank Zoellers, outfielders on the Atlanta club. Zoellers, especially, should be of some use. Cullop has already figured in a trade.

In addition to the other infielders named, Leo Durocher and Mike Gazella, shortstops; Walter Gilbert, third sacker, and a Detroit semipro by name of Reinholtz, have also been obtained.

Of pitchers there is a great variety, but outside of Thomas and Herb McQuaid of St. Paul, there does not seem to be much class. Among right-hand boxmen are Joe Bloomer from Salina, Ro- Chesterfield from Danville, Wernke from Hamilton, Brennen from Georgetown University and Shealey from Ward-Belmont College.

The southpaws are Garland Braxton of Springfield, Mass.; Art Jacobs of Saginaw, Mich.; Ben Shields of Richmond and Cummings, a semipro from Philadelphia.

With the veterans the list runs up to thirty-six, as neither Curtis Fullerton of the St. Paul club and Ruel Love of the St. Joe team are likely to go south with the team. Up to the present there is a total of twenty-two newcomers, who may or may not represent $300,000 in cold cash. Anyhow the colonel seems to be trying.

Naval Academy to Play Host to Two Crews

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ANNAPOLIS (Md.) Jan. 16. The Naval Academy will be the host to two college rowing squads for a spring training period during the coming season. Massachusetts Tech will row with its varsity and second crew here on April 24, having spent the week previous here. The Syracuse squad will reach here about May 18 and its first, second and freshman crews will row corresponding crews of midshipmen on May 29.

CITY PREPS IN SIX CONTESTS

Lincoln Quintet Performs in Two Hard Games

Polytechnic, L. A. High to Face Railsplitters

Best Games Yet to Come on League Schedule

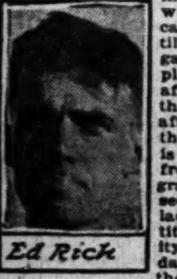
TUESDAY'S GAMES

Franklin at Hollywood
Los Angeles at Jefferson
Polytechnic at Lincoln

FRIDAY'S GAMES

Franklin at Manual Arts
Lincoln at Los Angeles
Jefferson at Polytechnic

Because of the fact that the City League prep school basketball season must be completed in one month, this week's card calls for six tilts. Three games will be played Tuesday afternoon and three Friday afternoon. Although quantity is not missing from the program, there seems to be a lack of competition and quality. On Tuesday afternoon, the Poly-Lincoln clash will serve as the feature. Hollywood and Los Angeles are overwhelmingly picked to cop their respective games, Franklin and Jefferson.



Ed Rick

EASY GAMES

Friday's games also seem to lack flavor. Again, Lincoln will hold the limelight, meeting Los Angeles on the Roman court. The game should be hard fought, with the Railsplitters favored to cop. Franklin is not expected to furnish the Toilers a great deal of trouble and it is probable that Coach Motts Blair will let his first string rest up for the Hollywood game to be played the 26th inst. Jefferson has been improving steadily under the tutelage of Coach Clarence Ebers and may be able to give the Mechanics a tussle.

Hollywood, Manual Arts, Los Angeles and Lincoln are almost sure to cop the first four places. Jefferson, Polytechnic and Franklin are definitely out of the race, although Polytechnic is still strong enough to upset one of the leading schools.

TITLE IN DOUBT

As the race for the title enters the final stages it is evident that the championship may be undecided until the final games are played on the 29th inst. Two of the best games of the season are still to come. Hollywood and Manual Arts will get together for their annual grudge battle on the 26th inst. Los Angeles and Manual Arts will close the season with a game that promises to be a classic. The Toiler are the favorites to cop, but the Romans may furnish the big upset.

Hollywood and Manual Arts have had an option on the basketball title for the past few years and their tiff is always a hard, fast game. Last year the Toilers were the only outfit to take the Foothillers into camp. Up until two years ago, Coach Motts Blair turned out championship teams with great regularity and he believes it is about time the Artisans were regaining lost laurels.

DONATE MEDALS

Members and friends of the Westminster Kennel Club contributed the golden jubilee medals, which will be awarded for the breed specials. These medals, this year are gold and bear the head of the pointer, the emblem of the Westminster Club for so many years, one for the best of the breed and another for the best American-bred springer.

POLYTECHNIC

Poly will at last have a complete athletic field. The house which has been a thorn in the side of Poly's athletic hopes will be moved. The Board of Education has just finished the long drawn-out condemnation proceedings and the house which now stands on the northeast corner of the field will soon be gone. The ground will then be graded down level with the rest of the field. If this work is completed in time it will be of great benefit to the track team.

The "Old Grads" of Poly had a chance to meet again and talk over old times at the sixth annual midwinter reunion and dance which was held at Polytechnic on Friday, January 15, at 8 o'clock in the evening. The dance was held in the gym, which was decorated by George Hopper, president of the Alumni Association. A good dance orchestra and plenty of punch helped out the good time which everyone had. All of the teachers were on deck to shake hands with their former pupils.

Coach Eddie Leahy had a chance to see his track prospects perform in the interclass track meet, held week before last. Bert Darling won a smile when he won the 100-yard dash in 10 1-5s. Leon Carpeles followed Bert to the tape and it looks as if they will make a great pair of sprinters. Darling also won the 220.

Frank Shapiro, acting captain of the varsity basketball team, will make all-city running guard if he keeps up his good work. He has shown up well in the L. A. and Hollywood games and is a good defensive player, as well as being good at long shots.

Henry Coggeshall, former Poly high jumper, has been recently married to Miss Marjorie Soemann, also a Poly graduate. Hank now attends U.S.C. and is expected to win national high jump honors for U.S.C. this year.

Now that Poly's cross-country team has won the Breakfast Club meet, Coach Eddie Leahy will have few worries regarding his distance men. Ellsworth Patterson, who took first place in this meet, should make a good miler. Meissner, Sherrill, Cully and Morrison can all help him hold up his end in this race.

HARDING HIGH

A new athletic field has been promised the reservation by the Board of Education. This will be quite an asset, as up to this time the various teams representing Harding have labored under many disadvantages.

As the basketball season draws to a close, a hard fight is being waged among the members of the two Harding basketball teams who are in the league, to see who can ring up the largest number of points for their team.

So far, Billy Gilbert, star forward of the Papooses, is leading with 55. Capt. Drake of the Heavies is trailing him with 39 points.

The other individual scores are: McCoy, Heavies, 27; Mepdrus, Lighties, 23; Williams, Heavies, and Clark, Lighties, have each scored 15, while Unicariet is following with 13 points.

With the final basketball game of the season out of the way, the Harding diamond stars are now limbering up their muscles, getting ready for the long grind of training which lasts from March 1 till June 20.

Last season the five different teams played twice, but this year, due to the addition of James A. Garfield High School to the Junior League, there will be but one round of play.

Harding loses but one letter man from their championship '25 team, this being Walter Mitchell, who transferred to Monrovia High School.

Ray Woodruff, captain, has high hopes of retaining the Junior City League baseball championship for another season.

SAN BERNARDINO

The Cardinal casaba tossers trampled on the Pomona Sagehicks on the local floor to the tune of 21 to 15. This was the Card's first Citrus Belt League game of the season and sent them off on a flying start for the league championship.

The new ticket office for the athletic field has been completed and will be in readiness for the coming Orange Show Relay Carnival, which will bring large crowds that can be handled only with the new office. The building is a stuccoed Spanish style type and was built at a cost of $300.

The track men have been limbering up for the past two weeks and are displaying mean form in the dashes and weights. They have been training so as to be in shape for the big Orange Show Relay Carnival to be held during February. Many veteran track artists are back from last year and should make a strong bid for honors in the carnival as well as the C.B.L. track meet.

The Cardinal lightweights won their first league game with Pomona last Friday, 13 to 7 and will battle Redlands this week in their second bout for the championship.

POMONA

Positions on the varsity tennis team are now being contested for and the complete squad will be announced soon by Capt. Gabbert. A round robin elimination tourney is now in progress with Gabbert, Dave and Der Hand, Willis, Cleminson, and Arnold as the contestants. Gabbert and the Hand brothers were on the varsity last year while Cleminson and Arnold are newcomers from last season's crack fresh team. Willis is newer to the game but showed well in both the Lewis cup and Novice tourneys.

Next week any player will be allowed to challenge a varsity man for his position on the team and several changes may be possible.

The fresh should put forth a good team this spring with Arthur Van Zerbe, Lee Mills, and Don Jordan as the mainstays. Van Zerbe defeated Mills in the finals of the Lewis cup tournament last week after both fresh had eliminated several varsity contestants. Jordan defeated Willis in the finals of the Novice tournament.

The decision of the student body to award letters to members of the swimming and cross-country teams will no doubt stir up added interest in these two sports for local athletes. Cross-country has always been a strong sport with the Sagehens, in fact the victory of the Grizzlies in the race held here last month was the first time in several years that the Blue and White runners have dropped the annual grind.

Swimming will come to the front this spring with meets scheduled against other conference teams. A complete team will be entered in the annual conference meet to be held in May. Last year the local splashers won the relay from the title winning Southern Branch paddlers. The men on that team Link Hall, Hugh Pinney, Emil Merhardt and George Lyman, will all be back this season.

Women's sports are progressing, with hockey and tennis tourneys under way. The January net tourney is now well under way and the feminine players are showing lots of ability with the rackets.

Classes have chosen their hockey leaders and the season is now well under way. Women who will lead their respective teams are: Seniors, Nell Emerson, Lucy Prout; juniors, Bethany Hahn, Kathryn Brown; sophomores, Martha Cockran, Laura Bonner; freshmen, Coral Vanstrum, Kathryn Allen.

AMONG RACKET WIELDERS

FAIRFAX HIGH

Since the Fairfax High School had their five new tennis courts installed, the school students have taken a fresh interest in the sport and the result finds many players on the courts daily. Coach Bob Goodenough, former Los Angeles High mentor, has announced a school championship tournament, the winner of which will be declared school champion and first player on the Fairfax High team.

The announcement of the event was greeted with keen interest by the Colonial tennis team, and with a flock of stars awaiting action, the school holds high hopes for a championship net squad. A large entry list has already been received by the coach, and from the list a talented squad of racket talent is expected to develop.

Letter men of last year, including Nep Boren, Bob Schelmen, Bob Baumgarte and George Gose are the favorites for the varsity berths, but the new talent in the prep institution may furnish the stars a surprise, for Herman Lester, Clay Mahone, Norman Yenson and Eddie Beackman all wield a wicked racket and are capable of some flashy tennis. The loss of Hyde Braley and Maurice Freind will weaken the team considerable, but it is hoped that the new talent will fill the vacancy.

LOS ANGELES HIGH

Play in the semiannual Los Angeles High School doubles tournament started off with a bang last week-end with many feature matches contested. The two Bens of the school, Ben Gerchakoff and Little Ben Harwood won a hard-fought contest from Harry Eichelberger and Bob Steffey, the latter a former Manual Arts High School varsity star. The score read in favor of the former team after a three-set struggle of 6-3, 3-6, 6-1. Rex Goodsell and Jack Phillips, the highly touted championship doubles team in the Roman institution, captured a close two-set victory from Tom Elliott and Mel Sheldon, third and fourth ranking Roman stars, the score being 6-3, 6-4.

On the 19th inst. the Romans encountered the Hollywood High School net aggregation in a series of matches. Both teams are the favorites for the city championship, captured last season by the Romans, but the Foothillers appear to have the best-balanced team this year, while the superior coaching of Dale Issenhuth should also help greatly. The Roman team is without the services of a tennis coach since the absence of R. E. Munsey. The contest should decide the strongest team in the city loop for the coming year 1926.

The frosh varsity, composed of Bob Laird former Glendale High star; Rodman Houser, a former Alhambra High player; Jack Finch, former Glendale High star and other promising material, will also tackle the Roman team this month, the tentative date at present being the 22nd inst. It is expected that the local high school will make a splendid showing against the branch outfit.

SOUTHERN BRANCH

Coach Bob Ackerman's peagreeners on the frosh tennis squad are showing up well in practice this this semester. With two Glendale High stars on the list, assisted by a former Alhambra High star, the frosh team takes on the appearance of a championship aggregation, while should they win the title the Grizzlies will have further established the record for victories, for the win would count the seventh straight frosh championship. Bob Laird and Jack Finch, Jr., are displaying some fast tennis, the former defeating Fred Houser, varsity star, in a practice contest last week. Rodman Houser is expected to lead the squad this season, while Laird and Finch run a close second and third position.

Bob Stanford, Jimmy Duff, Straver, Fred Houser and Capt. Vargas are the shining lights of the Grizzly varsity team. Bob Gibson, former fresh star at the institution, is also out for a varsity berth, and from his past season's record, it looks as though some one on the team will be grafted out of their position.

Girls' activities are also progressing rapidly under the court star, Gladys Patz, a former Los Angeles High star, who holds the 1924 county singles championship. Miss Margaret Vance and Dot McCleary have also shown classy form on the courts this year, and with plenty of tournament experience, the feminine stars are expected to show the other Southern California college stars the road to success.

HOLLYWOOD HIGH SCHOOL

With the coming of the new year the tennis activities of the Hollywood netmen have begun to percolate rapidly once more. In the boys' gymnasium is a list of the ranking players of the Foothiller institution totaling fifteen in all which has just recently been announced by Coach Dale Issenhuth, a graduate student of the school and 1924 State singles champion. However, it is expected that the names will change, according to ranking within a few weeks and so as yet, the team for the 1926 season has not been chosen.

Coach Issenhuth has not seen any of the material work out as yet and thus has no idea of the skill of any one player in the list. However, should present plans matriculate in the next few weeks, Coach Issenhuth will be allowed to see his team work out regularly on the courts of the boys' Y.M.C.A., according to rumors spread about which hint toward the agreement between the school officials and the club officials.

The ratings for the first ten players are here shown (1) L. Dwarkins, (2) T. Stephens, (3) C. Robins, (4) W. Palmer, (5) R. Lane, (6) G. Eastman, (7) G. Duncan, (8) W. Azhderian, (9) J. Kaplin and (10) W. Thompson.

Of course, the players from other schools will wonder at the omission of the Foothiller's crack ace, Dick Sheen. The star is at present out of competition, but will be seen on the team when the league opens, for he will challenge up the list for a position. Sheen was elected captain of the team and is rated the best court player in the Foothiller institution.

LONG BEACH HIGH

Long Beach High School's crack tennis team will certainly cause some one in the Coast league a great deal of worry.

The San Diego net squad champions of the league in 1925, are the first team which is assured of a great battle, for the Jack Rabbit team is anxious for a victory over this aggregation and would call the year 1926 a successful season if such a feat is accomplished.

In order that his men will be well prepared for the season's schedule, Coach Edwin C. Franklin has asked many tennis events for the team. Sixteen of the school's best talented stars have been selected from the institution and are at present competing in the annual tennis tourney for the championship of the beach city prep school. Capt. George Newby is favored over the field as a result of his past record at the school, while Stanley, Stimson, Canneer and Sweet, all letter men of the past season, are expected to furnish the captain plenty of competition.

Some promising material for the future is being developed at the Jack Rabbit institution. Perhaps the most talented of these players is Ralph Caneer, while a youthful star who answers to the name of Jack Bradley is also showing up well for preseason form. First-round matches have been completed and the results favored the four horsemen of last year's teams and four unknown dark horses of the tourney.

It's too bad that more spectators cannot see a first-class championship handball match, for then this great game would have as many followers as tennis, and possibly as baseball and football. There are many men who follow sports closely yet who have never heard of Maynard Laswell, handball champion of the U.S.A., and that's all wrong, for "Laz" is a good man to know and to hear about, and he is just as much a champion as Tilden or Hornsby or Jones. In fact, other men before these three have won the tennis, batting and amateur golf crowns in succession, but Maynard Laswell is the first man to win the handball title twice in a row, and he was runner-up in 1923, too. He wants to make it three this year, and then retire, but you know how it is with these champions.

Batting a rubber ball around in a box court with your hand may not be the most glorious thing in the world to do, but it is certainly more worth while, as far as exercise, competition and good-fellowship go, than poking a ball into a hole in the ground with a stick. Just plan handball a couple of times; you'll be converted in no time.

Laswell represents the Los Angeles Athletic Club, the organization that developed Fidel La Barba, the flyweight champion, and many other great athletes. He hasn't lost a tournament match in either singles or doubles in close to fifty starts. Can Tilden say that, I wonder? The competition is keener and the game certainly as fast and as difficult as tennis.

A greater number of spectators could see big handball matches, suggests the champion, if the top rear portions of the side walls were eliminated, and the gallery built like a horseshoe. He also likes the idea of courts with heavy plate-glass walls, with one side completely open to the spectators, as they have in Cuba.

OBSERVATIONS BY HENRY

be every bit as interesting as Nurmi, if not more so.

A lot of people regard Charles Hoff the invading pole-vaulting star, as something of a freak, because he not only is the holder of the world's pole-vaulting record, but likewise is one of the top-notch runners of the continent of Europe. Mr. Hoff not only has cleared a height of almost fourteen feet in the pole vault, but has ambled a half-mile in 1m. 54s., and a quarter of a mile in less than 50s, not to mention being capable of an extremely respectable mark in the 100-meter dash. Also he is alleged to have leaped something in the neighborhood of twenty-four feet in the broad jump, all of which would make him one of the very finest of all-around stars. However, while such proficiency is unusual it is not uncommon for star pole vaulters to be good men in other events, as in order to be a good vaulter one must have considerable speed, a good deal of leg spring and plenty of endurance.

They go in for that sort of stuff abroad more than we do, however. Nurmi, it will be remembered, not only was an exceptionally fine distance man, but likewise was, and is, the sprint champion of his own frosty country, and according to no less an authority than Charles William Paddock, could lick a lot of this country's sprinters if he trained for the short distance. Paulen of Holland, who is also headed in this general direction, is a very good man, and can lope the 440 with the best of them. He runs well under 49s. for the one-lap event. Houben of Germany is probably as well known as any of them, since he has beaten Paddock and Murchison in his own country. All of these boys will be sure to draw big crowds when they begin performing.

Our own suspicion is that when these young men come to the Los Angeles Coliseum, as they certainly will, they will run into some competition that will make them hustle. We have a flock of young men here who can sprint and gallop over various distances, while our batch of pole vaulters is not equaled in any part of the country. The Smith brothers from San Diego, Barnes of U.S.C., Graham of Caltech and one or two other young men hereabouts have soared into the empyrean to great heights, and under the competition provided by the great Hoff undoubtedly might be expected to do much better than they ever have before. Both Harry Smith and Barnes have looked at times as though they wouldn't stop short of twenty feet, and mebbe Hoff is the boy who can make them do their stuff.

Remembering the manner in which Los Angeles fans turned out to see the great Nurmi run, we are wondering if the foreign invaders of this particular year can repeat his ability to draw the crowds. None of them is likely to roll up the towering pile of shattered records that the Flying Finn did, but on the other hand, that very fact will mean that the chances of some local hero knocking the foreigners for a loop will be much better than they were when Nurmi was competing, so we wouldn't be at all surprised to see a huge crowd turn out to see the Europeans cavort on our sunken bowl, which was pronounced by Nurmi to be the finest track he struck in his trip to this country.

CALTECH

Manley Edwards, star weight man of the Caltech tracksters, is kept busy these nights doing his stuff in front of an admiring circle of fans. No casualties have as yet been reported.

As long as the subject is admiration it would be too bad not to speak of Murray Schultz and the young ladies from the Pasadena Athletic Club. Of course, Murray has to be on hand to help coach them in the art of sprinting.

The star hurdle men for this year seem to be Pomeroy and Bidwell. Pomeroy in particular has kept in tip-top condition throughout the entire year.

Tech is so far rather poorly represented in the field events. Ray Hollingsworth, star of last year's fresh tracksters, bids fair to be the lone representative in the broad jump. He will, incidentally, dash the century.

Working out in the high jump are H. K. Maury and Schroter. Maury is looking to his laurels owing to the close proximity of a diminutive fresh surnamed Perry. Said fresh recently startled the school by hopping five-seven fully dressed.

FIRST STRING

Of the five men making up the first string, four are veterans, while Jack Ketchum starred brilliantly in high school and as a freshman. Bill Goertz, a three-year varsity man and Ketchum make a strong combination. At center Ed Prigge, a Manual Arts product, has played consistent basketball authough not a brilliant player. Fully one-half of the Grizzly strength, according to Works, is the great pair of guards, Jimmy Armstrong and Horace Bresee. Fast, accurate shots, in fact every requirement of a great pair of guards is possessed by the Branch pair. They are regarded as the best combination in California.

OCCIDENTAL

All candidates for Coach Pipal's track team are busy at work on Patterson field. The interest in the sport being shown by the many men who are going through their preliminary work give indications for one of the most successful seasons ever had and some of the past have been most successful.

The Oxy freshmen basketball team plays their third game of the season Tuesday night against the strong Hollywood Y.M.C.A. quintet. Franklin gym will be the scene of the battle. Hollywood boasts of a formidable team, which is being coached by Louis Mellietta, last season's star forward on the Occidental team.

Athletic authorities are out on a search for a swimming coach at the present time. Prospects for a team of paddlers are good and as soon as a coach is obtained regular workout will begin.

Here is proof that dope is a reliable way of predicting athletic victories. In the college publication the following proof that Occidental could have beaten Alabama, 6-0, was given as follows: Hawaii beat Oxy, 13-0, and beat Washington State, 23-11, a margin of 12 points. That makes Washington State 1 point better than Oxy. Washington State beat U.S.C., 19-12, placing State 7 points better than U.S.C., and leaving Oxy 6 points better than the Trojans. Stanford defeated S.C., 13-9, placing Stanford with a 4-point advantage over the Trojans and Oxy 2 points better than Stanford. Stanford beat California, 26-4. Stanford is 12 points better than California. Washington triumphed over California, 7-0, leaving Oxy 7 points better than the Huskies. Alabama was 1 point better than Washington and therefore Oxy is 6 points better than Alabama.

PART-TIME HIGH

Associated student body has placed an order for twelve new basketball suits in the school colors. The new colors are purple and gold instead of royal blue and gold. The jerseys are purple with a six-inch gold stripe across the width of the shirt, with emblem on front and number on back. The pants are padded with purple and gold stripe down sides, with sox to match suit.

Coach Daugherty has quite a task ahead of him to keep the boys working hard on the program for fathers' night, which is to come off on February 10, a very good program is promised. A few of the events on the program are boxing, tumbling and pyramid building, wrestling, and then refreshments with a little drill work to close the program.

Don Tatsman, newly elected captain of the basketball team, states that he will put out a good team this season with the help of Coach Blakmore, although the boys lost two games, they still have the fighting spirit. With the new suits the boys will have no difficulty in winning the coming games.

Girl members of the P-T Athletic Association decided to set aside Monday night as their physical training night until later in the term. Swimming classes for the girls are to be on Tuesday and Thursday from 5 to 6 p.m.

Splashers of the water polo team are developing a good passing system, which will be one of their many good plays. The medley relay team is to be the best ever formed in Part-Time High School. Swimming and relay teams are to be coached by Joe Smith and Coach Kersey. Joe is to coach the boys' water polo team this year.

Instructions in swimming are given the girls by Joe Smith, who taught many how to swim last year.

LONG WALK SCHEDULED

THE END OF THE RUBE

CHAPTER 50

While Waddell was in St. Louis an indoor marathon race was arranged for the Coliseum between Dorando, the Italian hero of the Olympic Marathon run, and Percy Smallwood, an English distance runner. Smallwood came to St. Louis to train, but he lacked a trainer. Waddell heard of it and interviewed Smallwood, offering to train him. Waddell, of course, knew no more about track athletics than he knew about Latin and Greek, and he knew no more about training, never having done any himself. Smallwood did not know that, however, imagining that because Waddell was a star in baseball, he must know all about training, and he put himself under Waddell's care.

Hugh Jennings

BRITON CONFUSED

Waddell started out by telling Smallwood he would have to run every day. The Englishman guessed as much, but he was somewhat confused when Waddell ran him over cobblestone walks. Still, this was another country and Waddell was a great athlete and must know what he was about. So Smallwood let it go at that and ran over the cobblestone walk with the Rube every day.

The reason the Rube picked the cobblestone walks, instead of the country roads as he should have done, was because no one could see him in the country. Waddell always wanted to be in the spotlight, and by picking principal streets he was sure to have an audience. Rube made it a point always to run beside Smallwood and greet all friends and acquaintances along the route.

Well, the day of the race finally came. Soon after the start Dorando went into the lead and he kept increasing that lead. At the eleventh mile Smallwood had to quit because his legs gave way. Running over the cobblestones had ruined him. Dorando finished alone.

While Smallwood lasted Waddell ran with him, just outside the track. When Smallwood broke down the crowd demanded: "Let Rube finish." There was a general call for this, but Waddell refused to run any farther than Smallwood. He compromised, however by going into the band stand, appropriating the bandmaster's cap and baton, and pretending to lead the musicians.

Saloonkeepers frequently paid Waddell $25 to tend bar one evening in their saloons. It was a profitable investment. When the Rube tended bar the saloon was crowded. The saloonkeeper got his money all back plus a handsome profit.

Waddell's chief passion was fishing. He would frequently disappear, going to one of his select fishing spots. After the season he used to go to Minnesota and fish

MARITAL BUREAU PRIZE IN TOILS

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Jan. 16.—When George Leslie, a debonair sheik 64 years of age, was brought into court on a charge of theft of $5000 it was discovered that he had three wives and several hundred "fiancees" with whom he corresponded. Leslie then was charged with being a bigamist and police declare that he conducted a matrimonial agency with himself as the prize. In all it is believed that he obtained $25,000 from women whom he courted. During the courtship he managed to get funds for the prospective wedding and then disappeared, according to the police.

walked into the City Hospital and asked for medical treatment, but it was seen that lack of adequate food and exposure to the severe cold had proved too much for his constitution, weak for years, and physicians could only relieve his suffering. He gave a hotel as his place of residence for the past five years, but inquiry there developed that George P. Butler, assistant manager, became acquainted with Mr. Park when the latter came to Louisville ten years ago to practice law, and when Butler was chief deputy Circuit Court clerk here. This friendship continued until after Butler became connected with the hotel, and almost daily Park called at the hotel to see his friend—one of the few who remembered him.

FRIENDS COME FORWARD

As soon as the death was reported, Perry B. Miller, president of the Louisville Bar Association, asked to be allowed to care for the burial expenses, but the daughter already had provided for these. Mr. Miller said he had known Judge Park when he was without legal peer in Western Kentucky.

Two years ago Judge Park was found suffering from exposure in a vacant room in the Kenyon Building and was taken to the same hospital where he died. His daughter came to Louisville at that time and tried to persuade her father to accompany her to her home in Pine Bluff, where she could see that he was provided for, but he declined her proffers of assistance. After he left the hospital on that occasion, few of his former friends ever saw him.

THE LADY-BUG'S WORLD IS FIERCE

An Insect Stabs the Little Friend of Man in the Back

The little spotted lady-beetle, familiar to everyone as the subject of an old nursery rhyme, is really a fierce and vigiant little watchdog over man's cultivated plants, destroying plant lice and other pests. But it has its own enemies, falling a victim to an insect that stabs it in the back and then leaves its offspring to feed upon the still living victim. Dr. W. V. Balduf of the University of Illinois outlined today this tragedy of the fierce little world that lives among the leaves before the Entomological Society of America, in session here

"The parasite is a brownish, four-winged insect about one-fourth inch in length," said Dr. Balduf. "On the posterior end of the body this enemy has a needle-like organ or ovepositor used for injecting its eggs into the body of ladybugs. In five or six days a grub hatches from the egg. It eats at the fat stored in the back of the beetle. About nine days after hatching, the grub pushes itself out through the top of the abdomen of the beetle, spins a cocoon, and later emerges as an adult insect, to begin the mischievous cycle over again."

The lady-beetle's foe has enemies of its own, however. There is a second tiny wasp-like insect that inserts its eggs into the emerging larvae of the parasite, and thus plays on it the same deadly trick it has done the lady-beetle. The second assassin is thus a friend of both the lady-beetle and of man.—[Kansas City Star.

FLORIDA ALLIGATORS FOR CHRISTMAS

"You'd think," said John Toomey, resentfully, "that people would have more sense. And he dumped the alligator into the alligator pond in the reptile house at Bronx Park zoo.

"That," he went on sarcastically, "is a fine thing to send a man for a Christmas present."

Toomey is head keeper at the zoo. Somebody sent him an alligator from Florida with a "Merry Christmas" card tied to its tail.

Nor was Toomey the only person disposing of his Christmas alligator yesterday. A surprising number of persons got them as gifts from friends who are doing well in the real estate business in Florida. Not knowing exactly what to do with five young alligator, the recipients of these strange gifts turned them over to the zoo or the Aquarium. It was something new, to go to the zoo, bringing your own alligator with you. Toomey thought he detected an ominous significance.

"Pretty soon," said Toomey, "if this here Florida racket keeps up, we'll have all the alligators in Florida right here in New York, and the park will be nothing but an alligators' boarding house. I don't know how the new Mayor stands on this, but it's serious. If everyone who goes to Florida this winter begins shipping alligators back to friends in New York; and if all the friends shove said alligators onto us, we'll have to send all the lions and tigers to Florida to make room for the alligators. It will be dog eat dog, that's what it will be; and may the best man win.

"I like alligators as well as anybody, but as household pets what good are they? They're asleep half the time. You can't play with them. You can't take 'em anywhere. You can't teach 'em nothing. The older they grow the worse they get. Kick one of 'em in the ribs gentle like just to see him do something besides snooze all day and he'll break your legs with a swish of his tail. Give him the run of the house and he'll like as not chew up the children. Where are you going to keep an alligator, anyway; in the bath tub?

'These real estaters are wise guys. Do they give away lots? No. Oranges? No. They give away alligators. What do I want with an alligator?

" 'You get that thing out of here,' says Mrs. Toomey. And she's right. An alligator is nothing to give a man for Christmas."—[New York Herald Tribune

RAREST REPTILE IN CAPTIVITY

Two Live Tuateras of Much Interest to Scientists in New Zealand

[BY CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

LONDON, Jan. 16.—Scientists are much interested in two live tauteras, the rarest reptile in the world, now in captivity in New Zealand. The tautera has survived unchanged for millions of years and only on a few small South Sea Islands is it found.

The reptile lives to be 100 years of age. The two captives have passed the half-century mark. They are fed only once a week on worms and flies.

On the motor-bus line established between Sidney, Australia, and Young, an inland town about 250 miles distant, the most modern and luxurious coaches will be used.

IMMIGRATION DUE TO REBUKE

Oklahoma Senator Tells of Defiance to Peer

Refused to Doff Hat When Carriage Passed

Custom of Merry England Not for Senator Jones

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

STILLWATER (Okla.) Jan. 16. And it came to pass on the morrow that his lordship's butler, a loyal and efficient man, while meandering through the meadow on a daily mission, came upon the young upstart from London who had, with mischievous purpose, trespassed upon one of the most sacred traditions of merry old England.

"Eh, heh," ejaculated the butler, "you are the impertinent stripling, who, on yesterday, refused to remove your hat at the roadside while his lordship passed. 'Tis not done, sir, in England. I demand that through me you deliver an apology to his lordship."

"Apology be hanged," replied the stripling. "I am a free man; I doff my hat to whomsoever I choose and to others never. 'Tis you who are impertinent to charge me with impertinence."

"Well, sir, do you know," says State Senator Jones of Stillwater, who was that selfsame stripling, "that they made it so warm for me that I had to leave the estate of Lord Brownlow. Indeed, so bitter was the feeling against me that I had to get out of the community.

COMES TO AMERICA

"And that incident," he asserted, gaveling his fist upon the table and swelling with all the pride that his American citizenship inspires, "was the first cause of my coming to America. I would not say that a peer's butler ran me out of the land of my birth or that I feared for my safety where I had relatives and friends. There was a greater and grander reason why I came to America and of that I'll tell you presently."

The Senator, who was first of officials in early 1923 to forecast that Jack Walton wouldn't last a year in the executive seat, recounted some incidents of his childhood and told how the spirit of the land of the free dulled and dimmed the brand of patriotism that thirty-five years ago commanded Britons to recognize the unwarranted superiority of other Britons.

"When I was 12 years of age," he said, "and growing up with my brothers and sisters on the estate of Lord Brownlow, I declined one morning at church to rise from my seat and reverently bow as the peer marched down the aisle to his pew. Being the only person in church thus to violate an age-old tradition, I was marked.

"Nearly every estate of a peer in England has a little church upon it and it is the duty of all persons employed or sojourning on the property to attend church on Sunday morning. At any rate, that was the custom some fifty years ago.

ACT TOPIC OF COMMENT

"Within a very brief time my act was the comment of nearly every tongue, and it was condemned by nearly every tongue.

"I didn't believe in that sort of reverence, even at the age of 12. A passion of independence possessed me. I was as good as any other person in the British Empire.

"So I packed my bag and walked away. I went to London and found employment. So determined was I to carry on in behalf of personal freedom that for nine years I made my own way in the metropolis and never returned to the peer's estate. Then one day, having completely earned my independence and having grown to the age of majority, I went back for a visit. My relatives were still there and still practising courtesy and obeisances.

"As I loitered one day with companions by the roadside a carriage approached bearing his lordship. As it passed they all stood at attention, as the military man would say, and removed their hats. A revolt against the custom of unwarranted and probably unmerited ceremony again possessed me. So I cocked my hat over one eye, rammed my hands into my pockets, recklessly bent a knee and grinned while the peer went by.

REBUKED NEXT DAY

"The butler's rebuke next day, as I said, drove me out of the neighborhood, back to London, and shortly I was on my way to America and here I am to stay."

Senator Jones has been in Oklahoma more than thirty years. He was here in 1896 and made his first public speech in behalf of Bryan and bimetallism. An effective speech it was in the Territory, for he had brought from England a knowledge of England's method of purchase of silver bullion and its coinage into money and of its ability to cheapen the price of American grain thereby.

Socialism and other forms of radicalism Senator Jones as bitterly condemns as he does the monarchial features of the government of Great Britain. He is a rock-ribbed conservative and for that reason was apprehensive when Jack Walton went into office on a wave of proposed radical reforms.

DIGGING POST HOLES EVANGELIST'S HOBBY

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SOMERVILLE (Mass.) Jan. 16. Digging postholes is the favorite recreation of Rev. George Wood Anderson, evangelist, who for the next six weeks will hold forth in a big wooden tabernacle with sawdust covered aisles that has been constructed on the grounds of the Western Junior High School, Somerville. Mr. Anderson's home is in Chautauqua, N. Y. The evangelist spends his time at home with his family from May 15 to September 15 each year, refusing to make any appearance during that time. And that is when he gets a chance to perform his favorite recreation of digging postholes.

Finland's restoration of the gold standard has started.

Julian Petroleum Corporation Stockholders

From time to time I have honestly endeavored to keep the Stockholders of the Julian Petroleum Corporation informed as to the actual inner workings of your Company, and while in some instances I have miscalculated as to the time of certain happenings that I predicted, substantially the picture I have portrayed to you has been correct.

While handling the affairs of a Ten Million Dollar oil corporation with its many and varied ramifications I can assure you it is not the easiest task in the world to time every worthwhile happening up to the very day it will take place, and to those stockholders who sometimes feel inclined to become impatient with our apparent progress, I beg your consideration of the conditions I have had to contend with in putting your Company on the substantial earning basis it has reached today.

Before listing Julian Petroleum Corporation securities on the Eastern Exchanges, it became necessary to have the assets of your Company appraised by a nationally known Engineering Corporation. I was of the opinion that this work could be completed in a few weeks. However, it has taken over three months and consequently somewhat upset my calculations and delayed me in producing the results I have promised you.

After one year at the head of the JULIAN PETROLEUM CORPORATION I am proud to be able to advise every shareholder that your Company's earnings are now in excess of the dividend rate on every share of Preferred Stock issued.

To cite one instance of our present aggressive program of operations, I would call your attention to the fact that today we have fourteen wells drilling in different fields, which I believe is more new wells drilling than any other oil company in the State of California has under way.

When I took the reins of your Company in hand we were not refining any of our own products, but today we are operating three refineries to capacity. One in Los Angeles, one at San Diego and one in Arizona, with the plans for our fourth refinery in Portland, Oregon, about completed. During the past twelve months our pipe line system has been more than doubled, and as most people are no doubt aware, we are continually adding new retail service stations, and so throughout our whole operating system.

Rome was not built in a day, and neither is a large and healthy oil corporation, regardless of the amount of capital at your command, because your expenditures must be tempered with the greatest care and carried on to fit the organization you control.

At our annual shareholders meeting in the Olympic Auditorium on February 11th, 1926, I will be in a position to place before you facts and figures on everything in general that I know will prove more than startling to every shareholder. At this meeting I will also announce the date and rate of our first dividend on JULIAN Preferred.

While I feel absolutely confident that the appraisal of our assets will give our Preferred Stock a value of better than $50 a share, I do not look for the security to reach that price on the open market immediately; however, I do fully expect to see our Preferred selling at better than $30.00 a share, and this is on the announcement alone that I will make.

It can be purchased today through any Los Angeles Stock Exchange Broker at $15 a share, or less than one-third of its par value, and while I have advised you in the past to take advantage of this buy, I am now going to urge you to do so, for I sincerely believe that at the present price JULIAN Preferred will bring you greater and quicker profits than any other security procurable on any market in the world.

Certainly every shareholder that purchased this stock at par should endeavor to take on a like number of shares, thereby averaging down his original purchase, and creating an investment that in the years to come will prove the most profitable one you have ever made.

RULES FOR NEW WRITERS GIVEN

Large Number of Manuscripts Improperly Prepared

Typewriter Copy Declared to be Essential

Suggestions Also Given for Mailing and Selling

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—In a contest recently conducted by a popular magazine that called forth an unusually large number of contributions, it was found that almost one-fourth of the manuscripts had to be thrown out because the writers had not complied with the rules governing the contest and the form in which a manuscript should be prepared. These rules were simple and had been published repeatedly in announcements of the contest, so that it seemed incredible that any person with sufficient intelligence and interest to become a contestant would not exercise the care necessary to have his manuscript in proper shape. Yet it is said that the experience in this contest was not at all exceptional.

Indeed, magazine editors and book publishers say there is an even higher percentage of poorly or incorrectly prepared manuscripts among those which they receive from day to day in the ordinary course of their work.

Hence they are interested in broadcasting the fundamentals of practical authorship in order that their burdens may be lightened and that aspiring writers may not handicap themselves in the first steps they take toward breaking into print.

There are, of course, no absolute rules that writers must follow, except when they are participating in contests that are hedged about with certain restrictions. There is nothing to restrain any writer from submitting an article or story to any magazine or publishing house, and since editors and publishers are always looking for new talent, a manuscript will receive consideration, no matter in what form it may be, provided it be legible. However, unless it possesses striking and exceptional merit, it is not likely to receive favorable consideration if it is in such condition as to show at first sight that the author is in ignorance of or deliberately fails to comply with the ordinary requirements of his craft.

SHOULD BE EASY TO READ

Since the writer hopes to please the editor and win an acceptance, it is obvious that he should not irritate or offend by submitting his work in slovenly form. His first thought should be to make his manuscript as easy to read and as convenient to handle as possible, in order that the editorial attention may not be distracted from the story or the subject matter of the article.

This means that the manuscript should be typewritten. This is not absolutely essential, but it is extremely important. The author who submits a story in longhand handicaps himself at the outset, no matter how legible the writing may be. Preferably a black ribbon, and one in good condition should be used on the typewriter. The manuscript should be double-spaced, with wide margins on both sides and at top and bottom of each sheet, and only one side of the sheet may be used. The paper should be a good bond, not too heavy, but by all means not of the flimsy eggshell weight, and the sheets should be of the standard size: eight and one-half by eleven inches.

The author's name and address should be in the upper, left-hand corner of the first page of the manuscript, but it is not necessary to repeat the author's name and the title of the story or article on every page. The writer should paragraph his story according to his best judgment of how it should appear in print, and should endeavor to conform to standard rules of grammar, spelling and punctuation.

Words that should go in italics for emphasis or because they are from a foreign language should be underlined with a single line. If small capitals are wanted, the double underline will so indicate, while a triple underline calls for caps. Care should be taken with quotation marks, to make sure they are there where needed. Chapters should be indicated by Roman numerals, and a new chapter should always begin on a new page. It is not necessary to write "Finis" or "The End" at the close of a manuscript. The editor may be relied on to know when he has read all there is of the story. Always retain a carbon copy of a manuscript. Manuscripts rarely get lost in the mails or in the offices of magazines and publishers but it is well to be on the safe side.

HOW TO MAIL THEM

Manuscripts should never be rolled. They may be folded, if they comprise but a comparatively few pages, but when they run to any length it is best to mail them flat. It is just as easy to get envelopes of that size and the postage will be no greater. It is not a bad idea to "back" a manuscript with a stout cover sheet such as is frequently placed on legal documents bringing one end of it down over the front for four or five inches and holding it in place with clips. If this is done the manuscript will not wear out so quickly in its peregrinations, and, moveover, it will always present a neater appearance when it greets an editor.

It is well to inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with the manuscript, but not necessary. Full return postage must, however, always be inclosed, otherwise the manuscript will go on a journey from which it will never return and, manifestly, a record should be made of each journey it makes. Some editors report on a story within a week after receiving it; the average visit that a manuscript makes in an editorial sanctum is about two weeks. The best magazines pay upon acceptance, but some withhold the prized check until the story has been published. There is no standard rate of payment, but anything from two to five cents a word is considered good by most writers.

The length of a story, naturally, depends upon the story. A short story has been told effectively in a thousand words or less but ten to twelve thousand words is not too long if the story is worth it. Most editors, however, do not want short stories that exceed six or seven thousand words. Novelettes run from twelve or fifteen to thirty or forty thousand words, and novels from sixty or seventy to one hundred or one hundred and ten thousand.

The writer need not concern himself about copyrighting his story or novel. The magazine or book publisher will attend to that, and the author's rights will be fully protected. Ordinarily a magazine in purchasing a story acquires all rights to it, but upon request will reassign to the author all except the first serial rights, giving him a chance to profit further through publication in book form, foreign publication and stage or motion-picture production.

How to sell manuscripts is something for which there is no rule. The author may peddle them himself, or he may have a literary agent, who will charge him a commission of 10 per cent. It goes without saying, however, that no agent is likely to take on a writer whose wares are not readily salable. Another thing even more certain is that repeated rejections do not mean necessarily that a story is no good or unmarketable. Recently a writer sold, after eight years, a short story to an editor who had already rejected it twice, and literary history is replete with instances of big successes that had seemed hopeless failures as one editor after another had turned them down.

Writing is perhaps the most envied profession, and the most enviable one once it is crowned with success. Authors, editors and publishers, alike, agree, however, that the road to success is a hard and rocky one.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—One of the largest planes on the Imperial Air Route was refitted with a special "cabin" for her royal majesty, a giant lioness, which made the trip by air from Paris to London and appeared in a London circus. The "cabin" was fitted into the passenger salon but none of the passengers minded the strange companion. The lioness seemed to enjoy her first flight.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-coated tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headache, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits, 15c and 30c.—[Advertisement.

GIGANTIC TOTAL OF FISH ABOUT BRITAIN

A fish a mile long is difficult to imagine. Yet, if all the fish taken from British water last year were made into one gigantic fish, that would be its length, apart from its other dimensions.

More fish live and die in the sea without being seen than we can calculate; and owing to the rapid exhaustion of food supplies on land, as population increases, it is likely that the world's future food will be obtained chiefly from the oceans covering three-quarters of the globe.

Submarine farming is the scheme now engaging scientists' attention. The ocean beds contain rich pastures of vegetables, and in the Northern Pacific alone there are 2,000,000 square miles of sea bottom that have never been explored.

No one knows what grows on the sea bed sometimes six or nine miles below water level, but all surface waters to a depth of several hundred feet are crowded with plants ranging from the almost invisible diatoms to enormous growths longer than any found on land.

The sea is really a thin vegetable soup. So tiny are the diatoms that 200 in a row measure only an inch. In a single month one frisky diatom becomes one billion! They carry a little shell which makes them look, under a microscope, like pigmies in canoes.

Toothsome dishes are already prepared from the larger plant life of the oceans. All edible seaweeds have a peculiarly attractive flavor. Commonest is dulse, which the Highlanders and Irish peasants make into a very appetizing dish. Carrageen, or Irish moss, is collected in large quantities at low tide and produces sea moss flour a valuable ingrediant of puddings whcih is easily digested. The Irish make it into dainty blancmanges and a jelly recommended for consumptives. — [Vancouver Province.

Direct connection is offered Pacific Electric passengers with all the steam lines. Santa Fe will build a fine new station at its present site. The Union Pacific will have the benefit of the use of Southern Pacific passenger terminal facilities. The Southern Pacific will remove all of its passenger and through freight trains off of Alameda Street, leaving nothing on that street except industrial switching.

All of the steam line grade crossings are eliminated on this plan that can be eliminated by any other plan, and in addition all of the Pacific Electric interurban trains east of Main are removed from the downtown streets.

Statement of William Sproule, President, Southern Pacific Company

in the matter of the Passenger Terminal Plans submitted by the Presidents of the four railroads serving Los Angeles

IN SUBMITTING what has been called the Passenger Terminal Plan of the Four Presidents for approval of the people of Los Angeles, it should be said that the four railroad companies concerned in this case are proceeding in accordance with the laws of the land and in no respect in violation of them or in defiance of them. The laws are designed in the public interest to preserve the reasonable rights of all parties.

Respect and Full Regard for the Law

Among private parties, any fair transaction that is satisfactory to the persons immediately concerned can be closed at once. If, however, the transaction affects the general public interest, machinery of commissions and courts is provided that the public interest may not be overlooked in the transaction between the parties immediately concerned.

This factor of public interest does not take the transaction out of the hands of the primary parties by any means. On the contrary, it makes it merely subject to approval of the tribunals representing the public interest. If it is not inimical to the public, that is to say if it is not itself injurious to the public, or injurious in the results which it is proved will follow from it, and is not wasteful or extravagant in what is proposed, then the only question that remains in the transaction is as to whether it is fair between the primary parties, which usually is not in question.

This is the position in which the four railroads in Los Angeles are placed. They have a business proposal upon which they are agreed. They seek lawful authority to put it into effect as the best solution of the problem before the people of Los Angeles, not for the railroads only, but for the public, too.

Without going into details of what has taken place prior to the present hearing, it suffices to say that all of it is in strict accordance with the laws of the land. The railroads cannot fairly be charged with attempt to flout the laws any more than would any other party be charged with impropriety in appealing from any court below to the court above in furtherance of what he believed to be reasonable and right. All the parties are subject to the laws of the land and all the proceedings, so talk to the contrary is mere bluster. What the laws finally decide will finally govern.

The Railroads' Interest in Los Angeles

In Los Angeles to a marked degree the four railroads are a part of the community and part of the public interest. They are not separated from it. They are very large owners of property in Los Angeles. The Southern Pacific interests alone are probably the largest property owners in this city, and probably have the greatest single interest in its growth in business and in beauty. Every plan we have, at present or in contemplation, has an eye to the growth of Los Angeles. It cannot be denied that the Union Pacific and the Santa Fe have great interests in this city and in furtherance of its welfare. I do not believe there is anyone who doubts the sympathetic relation that has been manifest constantly between the executive head of the Pacific Electric and all that stands for the growth and good of Los Angeles. So these railroads can fairly ask to be recognized as friends of Los Angeles, promoting its prosperity as part of their daily business. It is in this spirit the plans for terminal stations are presented.

Railroads' Plan Is Designed by Railroad Men Who Handle Terminals

The advice of the roads should, therefore, be taken as one of vital interest, not only to them, but to the community, and especially in a terminal question. Wrong or stupid counsel given by the railroads in this matter could only react upon them to their own injury. They are entitled to be heard as people who know the business, and as the staff of all the four railroads are united in conviction that the best plan is that one which has their imprint, we believe the people of Los Angeles will not misunderstand when acceptance of that united plan is urged upon the people and through the lawful tribunals.

This plan is urged, and the estimates of cost are made by the men who have to do the work, who will be held responsible for the costs of it in the spending of the money, and who have to operate the properties with economy and efficiency after the work is done. Theirs are neither random nor theoretical proposals; the plan is the result of studies extending over years.

The Southern Pacific is charged with furthering the plans of the Four Presidents and well we may be, both because the existence of our present passenger terminal is involved, including the title to that property, and also because the Southern Pacific has the largest direct financial interest at stake, having to furnish the largest part of the money, and every plan runs into millions of dollars. Because of the nature of the title to the land used for our passenger terminal we could move from it only at great and unjustifiable hazard which no business man would assume.

It is important to us, therefore, that the right plan be the one adopted. It is natural we object to a plan that we are convinced is wrong, will be against the public interest, and would become a detriment to the city. When in this conviction all of the four carriers are united, the public can hardly afford to harbor the suggestion that these four carriers with their vast interests in Los Angeles are united in misleading the people in a matter that pertains to the railroads' own special and technical business, which they desire and intend to handle in a manner the public will commend, not only for this year but in the years to come.

Los Angeles Not a One-Station Town

No substantial reason has been given why Los Angeles should become a single station city. In the big cities the problem has been studied and the single station theory has not prevailed.

The fact is that in a big city, a single station for all its railroad business is sure to become unwieldy.

A single station becomes a bottle-neck, bound to create intolerable congestion of street traffic and make approach difficult and slow as the city grows. Instead of it, Los Angeles can well look to that plan which will most conveniently serve the greatest number of people using the facilities of travel and avoid congestion at the same time.

Most Important to Be Rid of Grade Crossings

The fact is that what began as a movement to rid the general business section of Los Angeles of railroad crossings at same grade as the streets has since been deflected into a movement that attempts to force the three steam railroads into a single station, for one thing, and for another thing, to do this upon a plan that leaves to shift for itself the Pacific Electric interurban railroad, although it is the principal carrier of passengers here and, by reason of the popularity of its service and the growth of this city, has attached to its operations greater problems in Los Angeles than all the steam railroads put together, and affecting vastly more people.

The Southern Pacific is even charged with delay in finding a way to create a union station, when the fact is we seek only to reach the main object desired by the public from the beginning. The main object of public interest is to get rid of the railroad crossings at grade. The union station has been lugged in without merit of its own.

I remember well that after we applied in November, 1913, to the California Railroad Commission for permission to build our present passenger station on Central Avenue (now known as Central Station), the Commission granted that authority with the stipulation that the erection of the new station and the relocation of the tracks should not be used as a defense against the separation of grade crossings in the State of California. We strictly complied with this condition and promptly began studies to separate grades in Los Angeles.

Grade Crossings a Menace

The next phase was in 1916 when the Municipal League filed complaint with the California Commission, asking for a union station as a means of obtaining relief on Alameda Street and other streets by the improvement and abolition of grade crossings. In 1916, at same time, the Central Development Association filed a complaint also calling for elimination of grade crossings.

It was not until a year later, in 1917, that this Central Development Association amended its complaint to allege that in order to get rid of the grade crossings a union station would be necessary.

These proceedings were prompted by the serious crossing accident which had occurred at the crossing of the Pacific Electric tracks on Aliso Street and the tracks of the Santa Fe Railway. The proceedings, joined in by several cities of the San Gabriel Valley, had the object of removing the dangerous railroad crossings at grade of the Pacific Electric Railway and of separating the grade crossings along Alameda Street.

Thus you see that the union station was brought in only because at that time those on the outside who had taken up the subject thought the separation of grade crossings could be obtained only through the creation of a union station. With this in view, the engineers of the California Railroad Commission tried to plan a union station at the north end of town, but any matured plans of the kind proved to be so costly and uninviting as not to be practicable, and after ten years the crossings at grade still remain.

Why a Union Station?

The public is growing curious as to why a union station. The union station has become a sort of Bogey-Man to call names and make queer pictures, but it has nothing to do with the progress or prosperity of Los Angeles. The destiny of Los Angeles does not hang upon a union station. The Southern Pacific and the Union Pacific have great and lasting interest in having suitable terminal facilities, and the traveling public approve the present Central Passenger Station.

The Santa Fe has several times stated its desire to build a modern passenger station in Los Angeles which will be satisfactory to the traveling public. No one can gainsay their interest in the matter either.

With the Pacific Electric having access to the Southern Pacific passenger station as proposed;—the Union Pacific continuing in the use of this station,—Los Angeles will have such a station as will naturally be of service, and when the Santa Fe builds its station, as it is ready to do at once, a natural facility will be added. It is true that this plan does not put all the traffic into one spot, but it does give the passenger convenient and adequate service for decades to come, without threat of congestion within a single funnel. The Central Station site will thus be preserved and not wasted, and the Santa Fe will have its own station, each rendering its own service in a proper and adequate way, which is all the public cares about.

The four Presidents' plan is the only one that will accomplish this and remove the grade crossings at the same time.

Importance of Grade Crossing Relief

The importance of getting rid of grade crossings in the districts of Los Angeles concerned can be stated in round figures as to Pacific Electric trains alone as follows:

Number of their trains moving daily over street crossings	1,200
Number of train movements daily over these crossings	18,000
Number of people carried daily on these trains	50,000

That is to say, in these trains 50,000 people are affected every day by difficulties of moving over the street crossings. There are 18,000 train movements in a day over these crossings, and every movement slows down and affects the other traffic at each of those points, in addition to the hazard. In this great movement, 1200 trains are concerned and among these is not counted any street car line. The street car does a pick-up and set-down business for the convenience of the local residents or local visitors. To this add the train movements of Southern Pacific, Union Pacific and Santa Fe at street crossings and along the streets.

When all is considered, it does not take much of an observer to perceive that the burning question is to get rid of the grade crossing train movements, which inconvenience people daily by the hundreds of thousands, that the union station is not an essential question and scarcely touches the public interest. The public is interested only in good service in the passenger station and on the train used on the trip.

People Want Trains Off Streets

The plan of the four Presidents called by what name anybody pleases is the only plan that will take the trains off the streets. It can be done in a year and a half. Then there will be no more train movements on the streets. Let me say again eighteen months' work will accomplish this great achievement. After the work is done there will be no trains on Alameda Street; on that street only the freight car switching will be done which industries there require, mostly at night. There will not be a Pacific Electric interurban passenger train on Main Street, on San Pedro Street, on Ninth Street, Los Angeles Street or Aliso Street. The streets will be cleared of electric interurban and steam passenger trains. Elevated trains will take the passengers swiftly into and out of Los Angeles on overhead structures of modern design. The elevation we propose is not in the streets but along private right of way through the industrial district and outlying. It is not in either residential or retail districts. It is selected with the view of not being objectionable to any responsible citizen and so that even overhead street crossings will give ample clearance. As to grades, curves and height, it is in accordance with good practice. Pacific Electric passengers will have ready means of access to the Central Station or the Santa Fe Station without having to leave their trains to cross a street at grade, for an ample way on easy incline will be at their service, whether to or from Southern Pacific, Union Pacific or Santa Fe platforms.

The effect will be to annex to Los Angeles in 1927 a wide area in four counties through the quickened service that will bring their people into and out of Los Angeles.

All of this can be done for much less money and with greater convenience to the traveling public than by any other plan.

Even more than this is done by the plan of the railroads, namely, within a year and a half from the time the work begins there will be afforded to the citizens of Los Angeles and visitors within her gates, whether on foot, in automobiles or in street cars, the great boon of being no longer subject to the trying delays daily which are now caused by trains on the streets and at the street crossings, with the crowding and jostling, the fears and the risks, that are part of the existing state of things injurious to Los Angeles.

No Need for Passenger Station at North End

The California Railroad Commission has stated in the first portion of the hearing which adjourned recently in this city to be continued in March, that they wish to consider every plan presented and that no plan is pre-judged.

As above alluded to, the Southern Pacific holds title to its station grounds under a reversion clause or what in law is known as a "condition subsequent" to the effect that the land "shall be used for a general railroad passenger station and for general baggage and express business and not otherwise, and that the premises shall revert to the grantors or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns upon breach of said conditions." The Southern Pacific objects to any proposal that would force us from the present location and cause us to incur the great hazard of uncompensated loss (following years of probable litigation) of the very valuable and useful property we now occupy, while demanding of us new and heavy obligations to provide inferior facilities elsewhere. It is calmly proposed that we scrap what we have. We ask you to think of that.

It is true that the Southern Pacific has acquired extensive properties at the north end, formerly known as the Hanchett properties, and it is excellent city property between Macy and Aliso streets, east of Alameda street, from which it might be assumed that our own interest should now favor a passenger station in that locality. But self-interest in the ownership of lands in that vicinity does not change our relation to the public interest, a study of which only confirms objection against the proposal to establish a station east of Alameda street, north of Aliso street.

Why Move the Stations?

The Southern Pacific continued to stop its passenger trains at River Station until the call for stop there ceased, because passengers quit using that end of town for getting on or off the trains. Yet it is proposed now to force the carriers to move from the convenient locations, where they have their properties and where their money is invested, to a locality already tending to congestion, where no important building has been carried on in ten years, and which the traveler has long since declined to use as a stopping place.

What would be thought of a proposal to move three or four of the great department stores from their present locations in the business district and force them to a location east of Alameda street, north of Aliso street, on the theory that it is to the public interest? In a like manner the public expects the railroads to serve them in passenger stations conveniently located, and it is as important to a railroad as to a department store, for both are seeking business by serving the public convenience.

Let Passenger Stations Stay Where They Are

At present sites there is plenty of room for decades to come. Enlargements can be and will be made as needed. The new Pacific Electric facilities added, give a result that serves the real convenience of the public using the stations. It is service that counts in the growth of a city.

As said already, the north end of Los Angeles is excellent property, which will have a development most assuredly, but that section is not adapted to a passenger station. It is not needed there, even if the site were suitable in other ways. Shops, hotels, office buildings and population of Los Angeles are moving steadily south and west, away from the Plaza, and have been so moving ever since the Plaza plan was broached ten years ago. The direction in which a city steadily grows for ten years is the human factor that cannot be ignored by prudent men.

The Plaza plan first presented has been abandoned by everybody. The modified Plaza plan is worse than the first one, and its best friends have to admit that it does not rid the city of the objectionable grade crossings which are the reason alleged for the union station proposal.

When the Southern Pacific built its station in 1915, the California Commission in authorizing it recited that "the structure to be erected under these plans will be efficient and ample to provide for the problem of passenger traffic coming into and leaving a city several times the present size of Los Angeles." That formal statement of the Commission in 1915 time has proved to be true, and the Southern Pacific will see to it that it will hold true for a generation to come, making such improvements as the travel may require in the growth and prosperity of the city, for we are as proud of Los Angeles as any of her citizens can be.

The Greatest Good for the Greatest Number

This statement is not intended to present all points, as that would make it too long to be read conveniently, but it aims to give the main points and guiding considerations. The presidents of the four railroads present it in good faith and rely upon the support of the public, to whom this statement is made without the slightest intention to mislead.

We offer the plan that has the greatest good for the greatest number, which is sound public policy and in the public interest.

PEAK RECALLS INDIAN PACIFIST

Chief Mountain in Montana Witness to Legend

Red Man Holds Glacial Drift Missiles of Spirit

Tells How Blackfoot Sachem Outwitted Deity

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

GLACIER PARK (Mont.) Jan. 16.—An interesting Indian legend explains how Chief Mountain, one of the citadels of Glacier National Park, got his name.

A long time ago, the story runs, a Blackfoot chief "whose heart was in the right place," climbed this mountain to commune with the Great Spirit.

The Great Spirit told the chief he admired him much because he was a good, conscientious Indian. And because of this cardinal trait, the Great Spirit confided that He desired to see the upright chief reign supreme over all other Indian tribes without any possible molestation from the enemies of the Blackfeet.

URGED TO WAR

"I'll tell you what you do," exclaimed the Great Spirit. "You make war on all the enemy tribes and I'll stand back of you and see that you annihilate 'em all."

But the old chief was a conscientious man and his heart was so good that it did not palpitate with revenge. He answered the Great Spirit and said No, he didn't want to go to war and kill off all the other tribes.

Whereupon, the legend says, the Great Spirit got angry and stirred the air with His furious rage by throwing huge rocks, many of them weighing several tons each.

The peace-loving chief, becoming alarmed for his own safety, ran down the mountain side, mounted his pony at the foot of the trial and rode "like everything" out over the prairie.

POOR MARKSMAN

Today there is a ridge of mammoth rocks extending sixty miles out over the prairie from Chief Mountain. The Indian legend says this is the pile of rocks the Great Spirit hurled at the fleeing chief as he rode away to escape the Almighty's wrath.

Geologists say this ridge is the result of glacial action.

Asked to explain the apparent discrepancy in the story which ascribes such poor aim to the Great Spirit, who should have been able to bowl the fleeing chief and his pony over with His first throw, the old Indians of today merely grunt their simple gutteral and say:

"Guess Great Spirit was so mad He couldn't see straight."

Mutual Understanding

The circus had come to the college town, and, having failed, was selling out at auction their stock of wild animals. A young man bought the man-eating tiger, and when the curious auctioneer asked if he ran a show, was surprised to receive a negative answer. "Then what in the world made you buy the tiger?"

"Well, when I came away to school, I had to leave my girl behind, and I miss her—and—" he paused to wipe away a tear and steady his voice, "so I've bought this tiger."

"I understand you," said the showman in a husky voice.

JOCKEY ONCE, JAZZ-MASTER NOW

But Girth Still is Herb's Concern

Herb Wiedoeft and Surefire

WHILE he does not yet compare with Paul Whiteman in the matter of waistline, Herb Wiedoeft, jazz master at the Cinderella Roof, has attained a girth, which makes it difficult to believe that he ever was a jockey. 'Safact, however, and Wiedoeft is still an ardent follower of the "bangtails."

In recognition of his former calling, Wiedoeft has been selected by the management of the Tia Juana track for the honor of sounding the bugle, which will bring the gallopers to the barrier for the $75,000 Coffroth handicap, the stellar event of the Mexican track.

Wiedoeft at one time rode for Stuart Polk, owner of Surefire, one of the entries in the forthcoming event. He is picture above with Surefire at the Polk stables.

Reaching Them All

An Irishman too old for service in the World War, still wanted to do his bit, so was given the job of putting up signs in his community to stir up patriotism. Tense as those days were, he always had his sense of humor with him, as one morning the sexton found this sign tacked to a tree in the cemetery:

"Wake up! Your country needs you!"—[Pathfinder.

ABOUT NEW YORK STATE

The land area of New York State is about 30,000,000 acres, of which two-thirds is in farms.

There are in the Empire State 80,000 miles of State and country roads, 40,000 miles of high-power electric transmission lines, and 15,000 miles of gas mains.

New York is the richest State in manufactures, with a yearly production of about $9,000,000,000.

The Empire State produces more hydroelectric power than any other State or country in the world, excepting the United States as a whole. In 1924 the hydroelectric power of New York totaled 4,000,000,000 kilowatt hours.

The people of New York consume yearly about 10,000,000,000 kilowatt-hours of current and 100,000,000,000 cubic feet of manufactured gas, both record totals among the States.

The largest New York farm crop is corn, of which 758,000 acres in 1923 produced 24,500,000 bushels. Wheat comes next in acreage, then barley, rye and buckwheat.

Seven billion pounds of milk a year are produced by 1,500,000 cows owned by New York State farmers and dairymen. Fifty million pounds of butter and 70,000,000 pounds of cheese are made in the State yearly.

States producing by far the most strawberries grown in the United States are North Carolina and Tennessee.

ROSY O'GRADY IN REAL ROMANCE

Daughter of Song Writer Weds Detroit Dentist

Singing of Old Ballad Leads to Love Match

Father of Bride Composer of Several "Hits"

DETROIT, Jan. 16.—

"Sweet Rosy O'Grady,
My dear little Rose,
She's my steady lady,
Most everyone knows,
And when we get married
How happy we'll be,
For I love sweet Rosy O'Grady
And Rosy O'Grady loves me."

When Maude Nugent Jerome wrote this song more than thirty years ago, she little dreamed it would play such an important part in the swift romance that ended in the marriage of Maude Jerome, her daughter, 21 years of age, and Dr. Russell D. Merritt, 5022 Warren avenue West, in Chicago.

Miss Jerome, now Mrs. Merritt, with "Big Boy," Al Jolson's show playing in Chicago, stopped in Detroit for a short visit with her sister, Mrs. Thomas Morris, of the Alden Park Manor, a few weeks ago.

SANG FOR COMPANY

Mr. Morris, president of the Inland Steel Company, invited Dr. Merritt in for an evening, during the progress of which Miss Jerome sang, among others, the chorus of the song that gained so much popularity for her mother.

The short visit she had intended to make was prolonged and when she was finally forced to leave to join the "Big Boy" company, Dr. Merritt followed quickly and the marriage was performed by a justice of the peace.

And when we get married,
How happy we'll be.

"Those were the lines that sealed my fate at that first party," Dr. Merritt says. "She looked at me as she sang them. Then I found out her mother was the author, and I immediately concluded that her mother must have had some real inspiration for the composition. I know now that she did. After all these thirty years the song has been rollicking along the words still fit the situation. 'For I Love Sweet Rosy O'Grady' and I'm sure that 'Rosy O'Grady loves me.'"

FATHER A WRITER

Mrs. Merritt's father, William Jerome, was the author of "Ham Tree" and "Piff Paff Pouf." He also wrote "Bedelia," "Row, Row, Row," "Rip Van Winkle Was a Lucky Man" and scores of popular songs. It was with his consent that his daughter became attached to the "Big Boy" company. A telegram was directed to him after the ceremony in Chicago by Dr. Merritt. It read:

"Just married, wire blessings."

The blessings came, by wire.

Mrs. Merritt will remain with her show for several weeks. Dr. Merritt, a dentist, will prepare an apartment for the coming of his bride after the theatrical engagement is ended.

"Then I think we'll meet mother," he remarked with a smile, "because she and 'Rosy O'Grady' are responsible. Anyhow, I'm certainly glad she had the foresight to write that song."

ANECDOTES ABOUT RUDYARD KIPLING

Although Rudyard Kipling, unlike many other great literary figures, has not had his career dogged by a swarm of anecdotes—probably owing to his retired way of life—there are plenty of good stories told about him.

They show his unalterably fresh interest in life, his unexpectedness, or the eternal schoolboy in him.

A good autograph story relates to the time when Kipling carried out all his business transactions by means of checks—paying even trifling amounts in this way.

After a time he found that his bank balance was much larger than the counterfoils of his checkbook warranted. The mystery remained unsolved for months until one day Kipling saw, in a shop at which he dealt, one of his checks framed and hanging on the wall.

The secret was out. Tradesmen had found that they could get more for Kipling's checks from autograph hunters than they could by cashing them.

Kipling's schoolboy editorship had an amusing echo some years ago, when the youthful editor of a school magazine wrote to him asking for a contribution.

Kipling, who as receiving enormous prices for his work, was delighted at the audacity of the request and proptly sent back an article on "Schoolboy Etiquette."

He said:

"Never shun a master out of bounds; pass him with an abstracted eye, and at the same time pull out a letter and study it earnestly. He may think it is a commission for someone else.

"When pursued by an angry farmer always take to the nearest plowed land. Men stick in furrows that boys can run over.

"If it is necessary to take other people's apples, do it on Sunday. You then put them inside your topper, which is better than trying to button them into a tight Eton."

But the gem of Kipling's contribution was his note to the editor:

"You will," he said, "find this advice worth enormous sums of money; but I should be obliged with a check or postal order for 6d, at your convenience, if the contribution shall be found to fill more than one page."

HORSE INVADES INVALID'S ROOM

Blind Team Panic-Stricken by Gunshot

Sick Man Believed at First It Was Nightmare

Animal Walks in Window and Wrecks Bed

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

FALLS CITY (Neb.) Jan. 16.—If it had not been broad daylight and Willie Carpenter not wide awake at the time, there would have been nothing lacking in the plot and performance to make it a realistic nightmare.

Carpenter had been ill for a time and occupied a bed on the ground floor of his little house on lower Lane street. He was reading a newspaper when he heard a sudden commotion outside and as he turned to see what it was all about the window of the bedroom a few feet from where he lay crashed in and a fear-crazed horse pushed its way inside. Before Carpenter could move the animal had jumped on the bed and when it gave way under him leaped out, ran around the room and then leaped again on the bed. The whole structure, with Carpenter lying on it, went down, the horse going with it, but by some miracle the sick man was untouched.

"It was really not until after the whole thing was over," says Carpenter, "that I was sure whether it was the real thing or just a nightmare. The animal came through the walls as though they were paper, dragging a part of a wagon tongue with it, and I was kept so busy for a half-minute dodging the animal when it leaped on the bed and the swinging tongue that I had no time to decide whether it was real or a dream."

Investigation disclosed that a team of blind horses, standing in front of a house south of the Carpenter home, had been galvanized into sudden activity when one of them was stung by the shot fired from an air rifle that a boy had recently been presented with as a Christmas gift. The horses wheeled about and headed directly for the Carpenter house. Neither horse was able to see where it was going. One just brushed the corner of the house, while the other went through the window, carrying the sash with him, along with the greater length of the wagon tongue that had broken.

Members of the family, hearing the noise, rescued Carpenter and calmed the fear-crazed horse. Carpenter suffered no ill effects.

GENTLE TREATMENT OF NEW CAVALRY HORSES

The mounted soldier is still a very necessary unit in the armies of the world, although, since the war, the size of the cavalry services maintained by military organizations has been much reduced. Horses for this service must be highly trained so they are secured young and selected with an eye to uniform height and weight. Most of the "greenhorns" are unused to the human voice or to the presence of man, so that the trainers must be gentle as well as experienced. Even under the most trying circumstances, harsh words and rough treatment are never accorded the beginner. Instead when a young horse does his preliminary work well he is rewarded with encouraging words, affectionate pats and an early release to the stables.

British Etcher Searches Stores to Get Blank Fly Leaves

Whoever thought when some of the bulky old volumes were published that in time the few blank pages in front and in back would be the most valuable part of the whole book?

That time seems to have arrived, for it is told that a distinguished British etcher spends many of his spare hours searching through old book stores and waste paper depositories for the massive and wholly unread volume of other days. For years he has been tearing out the clean leaves to get paper that is paper, and is not an assembly of all sorts of modern makeshifts, which will disintegrate after a few years.

The books, many of which are so dry and ponderous that some of the leaves remain uncut, can be bought for a few cents. The paper, it is said, is not duplicated today, and, if it were, the price would be prohibitive.—[Detroit News.

Barbers Prefer Women

So far as New York barbers are concerned, men can learn to cut their own hair. They prefer to work on the dear ladies' bobs, because the average tip from a woman is 25 cents—which is going some for the supposed tipless sex—while the average man gives them only a dime. The Cumberland (Md.) barbers who refused to open their shops to women may have made a mistake.—[Capper's Weekly.

Pleads Adam's Excuse

A Kentucky moonshiner crosses his heart and says his wife ran the still and he couldn't stop her. Is it possible these much-advertised bloodthirsty mountaineers of the South are after all merely meek and lowly henpecked husbands?—[Capper's Weekly.

$1,000,000

Paid by us to stop

Colds

We paid $1,000,000 for this way to stop colds. For this matchless formula which W. H. Hill spent 25 years in developing.

It stops a cold in a day. It does all things necessary, and each in the best way known.

Consider what that means. A cold may spread from one to another. Every contact is a threat. And nobody knows what a cold may lead to.

Stop it with Hill's Cascara-Bromide-Quinine. Have the tablets on hand. The sooner you start the quicker the cold will end.

Millions now employ this method. Nothing else compares. Don't let a cold run. Don't take chances with it. You will combat it in the most effective way if you get the genuine Hill's. At your drug store.

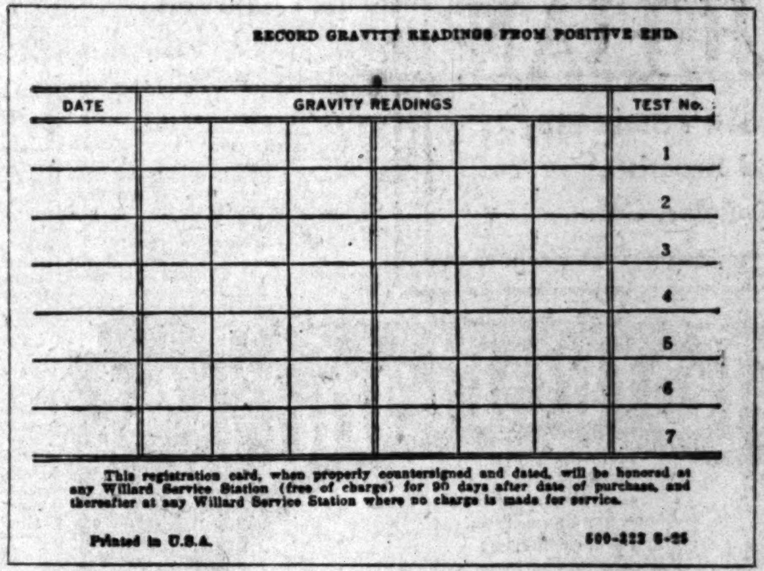
EVERY CAR OWNER SHOULD CARRY

Date of the last test is important. Evaporation takes place and distilled water may need to be added every two weeks.

This card carries 14 tests for a 3 cell or 6 volt battery, and 7 tests for a 6 cell or 12 volt battery.



RECORD GRAVITY READINGS FROM POSITIVE END.

This registration card, when properly countersigned and dated, will be honored at any Willard Service Station (free of charge) for 90 days after date of purchase, and thereafter at any Willard Service Station where no charge is made for service.

Printed in U.S.A. 500-222 8-25

Any of the 143 Willard Service Stations in Southern California will give you one of these battery record cards. . . . Each time you call for a test the date and gravity reading of each cell is put down so that you have a key to the condition of your battery. The past record is shown against the present condition and you know whether your battery is holding its charge properly. With this information you can most successfully guard against the inconvenience and annoyance of a dead battery.

This is only one of many similar advantages obtained by using Willard 5-Point battery service.

"I'M BUSY"

And just so Dawg-on busy that I couldn't even squeeze out a few moments to write something for you today.

You know it's mighty nice to feel that you have forty to fifty thousand friends who believe in you, but when two or three thousand of them, all make up their minds to see you the same day, it's not so good, especially when I'm trying to write Sunday copy, and that's that.

However, everything is "Egg in the coffee," and my "Wonder" is not looking any worse as the days meander along.

So, just be prepared to "Stop," "Look" and "Listen" when I holler "All aboard" and when you step on the gas, a little, "LEAD" in your shoe won't hurt any.

MANY TRAIN AT FLYING SCHOOLS

Brooks and Kelly Fields Teach 93 Aviators

Both Classes Probably Will be Larger This Year

Two Groups Graduated at Texas Army Post

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) Jan. 16. In 1925 the Air Service flying schools at Brooks and Kelly fields produced ninety-three airplane pilots. This number represents approximately 25 per cent of those who reported at the primary flying schools, Brooks Field, in September, 1924, and March, 1925, in quest of silver wings.

In 1926 the flying schools expect to turn out at least a dozen more pilots than last year. Based on estimates of officers and percentage of past classes, the two classes finishing the advanced flying school at Kelly Field in March and September will number about 114.

There are now forty-nine members of the advanced flying class at Kelly Field and, barring accidents, all should graduate. At Brooks Field there are 177 members of the primary flying class, but this number includes nineteen reserve officers and three National Guard officers taking special training, who will not go to the advanced school. A number of regular students will be eliminated before graduation in March, and it is estimated that only about 130 students will go to Kelly Field. Experience has shown that each school eliminates approximately one-half of the students reporting. The total for 1926 will be around 114.

Under the present system of training two classes are graduated from the flying schools each year. Classes report and graduate on September 15 and March 15. The September class is always much larger on account of the large number of West Point graduates assigned to the Air Service who begin training at that time.

The class of thirty-three which graduated in March, 1925, is the only class in the history of American aviation that completed both the primary and advanced schools without a single fatality.

KING SHAVES KING

King Alfonso of Spain likes occasionally to travel incognito. Not long ago, the story runs, he motored under an assumed name through the wild region of Castile and put up at a modest inn. The following morning, desiring to shave, he asked the chambermaid to bring him a mirror. When she had done so she remarked: "You are not just an ordinary traveler, are you?"

"Why do you ask me that?"

"I don't know," said the girl, "but there is something about you—perhaps you belong to the royal court at Madrid."

"Yes, I do," he answered.

"Perhaps you work for His Majesty himself."

"Yes."

"And what do you do for him?"

"Oh, lots of things," the King replied. "I'm shaving him just now."—[Kansas City Star.

"Has your husband been ill with the 'flu?'" asked the parson.

"Yes," replied the little worried looking woman. "He has been feeling very badly. I do my best to satisfy him."

"Is his condition critical?"

"It's worse than critical," she answered with a sigh, "it's abusive."—[Weekly Scotsman.

CHILD OF FOUR GLOBE TROTTER

St. Louis Tot Has Traveled 60,000 Miles

Starting Third World Cruise Next Week

Supplies of Food and Toys Taken Along

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 16.—Christopher W. Johnson, Jr., of this city 4 years of age, will embark the 19th inst., for his third world cruise. In the four years of his life this lad has traveled 60,000 miles in two previous world trips, and the coming one will add some 25,000 miles more to his record.

The child's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Johnson, carry on these trips supplies for the youngster which preclude any possibility of his suffering from lack of proper nourishment. Included in the supplies are seventy-five one-pound cans of powdered milk, sixty-five gallons of bottled spring water, two barrels of selected canned vegetables and fruit, jelly and crackers. Junior is going to have his regular glasses of milk, dependable water, and proper food supply no matter what happens in some foreign clime. Mrs. Johnson will also take along, on the S.S. Orca from New York, a satchel of medicines recommended by her physicians, for emergency use.

Junior's nurse and the family cook will accompany the Johnsons. The nurse is to relieve the parents of the trying task of constantly keeping track of a lively 4-year-old boy. The cook is to prepare Junior's meals. The boy will also have a barrel full of his toys with which to play.

Junior's travels have all been taken at such a tender age that he hasn't formed impressions of his experiences. However, he announces that he is "going to stay on this ship and be a captain," on the present voyage. Mrs. Johnson says Junior can pick out, from pictures in magazines, places in foreign lands which they have visited.

The coming trip will take the family to the British West Indies, South America, South Africa, Jerusalem, Constantinople, the Balkans, Italy and Southern Europe, England and home.

A River to Cool the Turbines

One of the prime essentias for a steam-driven electric generating station is water and lots of it. For instance, up in Minnesota on the bank of the Mississippi stands such an electric generating station which in the course of a day consumes 900 tons of coal. To cool its turbines, which generate 80,000 horsepower of electrical energy, 368,000 tons of water are daily pumped out of the Mississippi and returned to it after being used solely for cooling purposes.

For the second time in three years Francis A. Burdett of Wayne, N. J., blind and 62 years of age, has built himself a house, his sensitive fingers helping him to measure timbers and boards and fit them into place.

Here is Some Information Valuable to Folks with Rheumatism

San Francisco.—"For years I suffered with rheumatic pains in my knee joints, in my hands and in my back, so that at times I could not get around to do my housework. I doctored and tried every remedy recommended to me, but until I started taking Dr. Pierce's Anuric (kidney and backache) Tablets two years ago I obtained little or no relief. But thanks to Dr. Pierce and his Anuric Tablets I am absolutely without pains of a rheumatic nature. I wish I could tell the world of persons who suffer with excess uric acid, rheumatic pains and kidney congestion, what a wonderful remedy Anuric is, for I feel sure that it is the best medicine in the world for such ailments. It is inexpensive, too, but if I had to pay ten times its price I would not consider it too much compared to the relief it gives."—Mrs. Marie Boning, 24 Richland Ave.

Step into any drug store and ask for a package of "Anuric," or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, in Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg., and write for free advice.—[Advertisement.

Have you ever been caught violating a traffic regulation? Have you ever had a ...ky, red-faced cop wave both arms, blow his whistle, head in your direction, and address you thusly, as the crowds gather round about you?

"Hey, there! What th' hell do you think YOU'RE doing? How d'ya get that ...! "$@&'()('&@$*"!!!! Who taught you how t' drive? Can't you read? ...—what kind of a dumb-bell are you? The Times Politeness Reporter made the rounds of Los Angeles traffic officers Thursday, seeking courtesy under purposely aggravated conditions. He once toured Chicago on a similar mission. Comparing them, he says:

"Los Angeles traffic policemen are immeasurably more polite than those of eastern ...es. "A-ha!" said Officer No. 1147 when from his post at First and Broadway he espied an automobile of hybrid vintage ensconced in a "red zone" at the corner. And, having looked it over from a distance, he approached it carefully, apparently so as not to frighten it away.

Just then the driver crossed the street, and jay-walked while he did it. And Officer No. 1147, who had dodged into a near-by doorway, calmly watched the Politeness Reporter climb into the seat, start the motor, then:

"Where's your operator's card, doc?"

"Sorry. I haven't any."

"What? Where's your registration certificate?"

"Very sorry. I haven't any."

"Wha-a-a-aT? This your car?"

"No, sir."

"Wha-a-a-a-a-a-T? Well, now, you just drive around the corner and stop right opposite that place which says 'Traffic Division' on the window, an'—"

ARREST NO 1

So came the introduction of the reporter to the motto of the traffic division, "Let's take a ride!"

Officer No. 1147 was polite. He is a good traffic officer. He obeyed meticulously every rule of his department—and added a few smiles of his own—and even though he arrested the poor reporter, he is the second high man on the honor list of the day.

Deputy Chief Cleveland Heath and Capt. Gifford of the traffic division—both of whom are consistent preachers of and for courtesy to the public—extricated the reporter from his difficulty and sent him on his way. He drove down Hill street to Sixth, and, noticing two policemen on traffic duty conversing with one another, he calmly made a prohibited left turn and waited for a whistle as he drove slowly east on Sixth. And waited. And waited. And waited. And waited! But not a sound.

Heartened by this experience, the reporter made another left turn, also forbidden, north at Sixth and Broadway. He registered with ~~Traffic Officer~~ No. 281.

"Say, buddy, you know better than that—you know doggone well you can't make a left turn here—can't you read that sign? That's pure negligence! I oughta give you a ticket! I oughta take you up! I oughta make this cost you $10! Don't do that another day or I might not be feeling this way! Beat it!"

THEY'RE POLITE

All of this, however, in a low, pleasing tone of voice—with not even a profane word. Three times without a cussing out! And, incidentally, Officer No. 281 would win third prize for the day if there were a third prize.

The next stop was at Eighth and Olive streets in a red zone in front of a drug store. Here the reporter left the car and bought a soda. When he came out a large and imposing mounted policeman was waiting.

"Say, buddy," he quoth, "don't you know that if you stay here a bus will run over you?" And on he went.

The reporter drove south on Olive street. He passed a policeman in a Dodge touring car, and, being seemingly not used to driving, he cut in front of him—just a little bit close. A moment later, and a red-faced Irishman drove alongside.

"Over to th' curb there, you!

THE SAD ADVENTURES OF A COURTESY-HUNTER ON OUR MOST CROWDED DOWNTOWN CORNERS

The Times Politeness Reporter spent his first day in the guise of an innocent stranger to the city and its traffic regulations. He broke every rule in the book in every conceivable way in an effort to see how Los Angeles policemen carry out their orders to be polite under no matter what provocation. The artist here depicts in slightly expurgated form some of the things that happened.

The Politeness Reporter will have a new set of adventures every day.

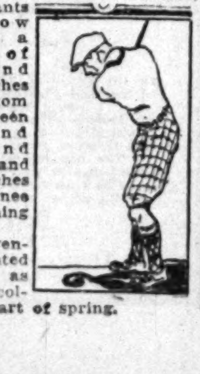
HOT PAPA! MAYBE THE BOYS WERE DOGGY LAST SPRING BUT WAIT 'TIL YOU SEE THEM THIS

BY SHERLEY HUNTER

According to the convention of Pacific Coast Tailors' Association, held this week at San Francisco, 'balloon" pants will narrow down to a "trouser" of eighteen and one-half inches at the bottom and between twenty and one-half and twenty-one and one-half inches at the knee this coming season.



The convention accented silver-gray as the reigning color for the start of spring.

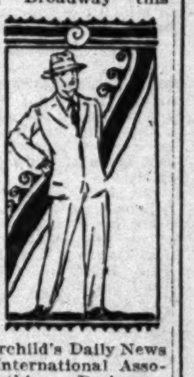
Down here, however, there will be a leaning toward sea-mist blues and blued-grays, what is known as Santa Monica sand tan, and a new check related to the old Urquhart plaid and called "caber," a name coming from Scotland.

The colorful $10,000 golf tournament, so successfully promoted over the nation by the Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce, will continue man's thirst for colors—and no course of sulphur and molasses will remove it, or admonition get ears.

some of the quieter creators have fixed up pastel concoctions—but their dainties will have as much effect on our jaded color tastes as a vanilla ice-cream soda to the gink who has learned to like "boot" from the fastnesses of Inglewood hills.

The prodigals are going to stay away another season from the sober tents of neutral color schemes.

So prepare for a color carousal and a greater army of zouaves in knickers along Broadway this spring and summer than the orgy of last summer and autumn.

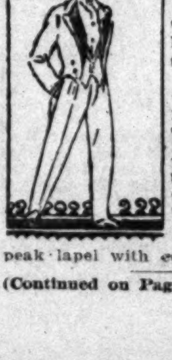


The male will be gorgeous if but given a chance—only so he hasn't a greater wardrobe than the female — especially if it is a "ten - payment" household.

Here's the style forecast, according to Fairchild's Daily News Record of the International Association of Clothing Designers, made at the Chicago convention the past week for fall and winter. A trend, ya' understand:

Shoving the Tuxedo into the background for strictly informal wear and bearing down on the full-dress coat for evening.

Young men's sack coats to have more body-tracing lines, less extended, squarer shoulders.



Waistcoats, a trifle higher cut, slightly longer points.

Wide trousers (not "balloons") to continue.

Autumn and winter will find young mens coats to be three - button with a length of twenty-nine and one-half inches, showing the above ideas, wide and semi-peak lapel with corners rounded.

OUR friend, Maj. Rupert Hughes, is never less fortunate than when inspired. Every time he gets an inspiration—usually at banquets—the thing kicks back and knocks him over with the recoil.

His latest and most alarming inspiration was about George Washington—he who was Father of His Country—first in war and first in all the patriotic pieces.

MUCKRAKING G. W.

Bursting with information, Maj. Hughes made a speech in which he said that G. W. swore in bad language; distilled whisky; and didn't do much in a churchly way.

And unfortunately he picked out as an audience the Society of the Sons of the Revolution.

Shrinking before the resultant roar, Maj. Hughes now hastily explains that he never would have said these things about Mr.

ANSWERS LACY IN PLAZA TILT

Joseph Mesmer Sets Forth Union Station Views

Calls Location Ideal for Handling Traffic

Present Congestion Blamed to Engines and Cars

The Times is in receipt of copies of the following letters:

January 14, 1926.

Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen: In the interest of a fair expression will you permit me space in your valuable publication to answer Mr. William Lacy's objections to the Plaza site as a suitable location for a union passenger depot, published in your paper of Wednesday, January 13, 1926? I have known Mr. William Lacy and his father before him since their arrival in this city some fifty years ago. His father, William Lacy, Sr., was one of the founders of the First National Bank, whose parent bank was the Commercial Bank. Mr. Lacy, Sr., was one of my warmest and best friends and I hold his entire family with highest regard and esteem and in differentiating with Mr. William Lacy's views I am doing so in no unkindly spirit, but simply to lay before him and others who may have similar views a few salient facts.

You say, "Every day I pass the Plaza site on the way to our works and I am fully acquainted with the terrible traffic congestion there. The establishment of the Civic Center will increase that congestion and it is utterly insane to complicate the situation further by a union station in that part of the city. To put an individual railroad station there would be folly; a union station would be much worse, of course, for concentration produces congestion and the site is already a bottle neck. A union station there would produce conditions almost intolerable."

Now, is it not a fact, Mr. Lacy, that the area within the Plaza site is reached directly, or very near, by most of the wide streets of Los Angeles, many of which are 100 feet wide and none less than eighty feet wide—such as Main, Los Angeles, Alameda, Aliso, San Pedro, Macy, Alhambra, Sunset Boulevard, New Spring street, Broadway and Hill street, which will eventually be cut through a little further west on Sunset, Figueroa street? Can you imagine, if you will, a similar possible street layout? Can you point out any suitable site in this city where a union station could be satisfactorily located other than the proposed Daum site located at the northwest corner of East Ninth street and Boyle avenue, that could even be served by two reasonably wide streets? Have you read and seen the drawings of the proposed Civic Center plan? If you have, you will observe that very ample provisions have been made not only for the present, but all future needs for immense parking space and widening of the streets. Is it not a fact that the terrible congestion that you refer to, is almost entirely caused by the operation of the many freight and passenger trains of the Southern Pacific, either on Alhambra, Redondo, Main or Alameda streets to and from the repair shops and locomotive stalls and to and from the Arcade depot, tying up traffic at Main and Alameda streets and likewise tying up at the same junction of Main and Alameda streets by all trains moving either north or south on Alameda street, and another tie-up at Main and Redondo streets near your factory, where it is not an unusual occurrence of north and southbound automobile and pedestrian traffic being tied up for more than ten minutes at a time. It is admitted that traffic congestion occurs all over this city and will continue to occur increasingly with every new automobile and other similar power-driven conveyances, but in the locality that you refer to, you should put the blame for the congestion upon the one who produces or causes the congestion, the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. Would not much of the grade operation be relieved by the Plaza site being adopted?

Tell me, if you can, where could street-car traffic be as expeditiously handled in loading and unloading passengers as it could be around the Plaza—a similar convenience obtainable as is in San Francisco in front of the Ferry Building, can you match it?

Also tell me, if you can, where could a similar economical arrangement so close to the very center of this city as in that territory immediately and adjoining to the north of the Plaza site, where with incomparable small cost a complete circle of trackage is obtainable which will permit trains being routed in all directions as at River Station via Redondo and Alhambra streets, to the northeast bank of the Los Angeles River, thence north on Union Pacific right of way along the northeast bank of the river to Union Pacific or Santa Fe bridge and thence southwesterly into River Station yards.

You also say, "I have never been able to see the necessity of a union station in a city like Los Angeles, it is not a transfer point." This may be your view and as such you are fully entitled to it, but in it you are not even being supported by the railroads who know that the public and that public convenience demands a union passenger station. Tell me, if you can name a single city with one-tenth the business that Los Angeles has, that is not served or tapped by more than three main lines. Why, Kansas City with half the population of Los Angeles, has twenty-two railroads. Denver, with less than one-third the population, has fourteen railroads. A union station would not only make it possible for other roads to come here, but would be a great inducement or invitation to have them come. Knowing your past public spirit in matters pertaining to our city's welfare I am loath to believe that you would after careful reflection take a stand adversely thereto.

Respectfully submitted.
JOSEPH MESMER.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE CHIEF GIVES OPINION

Los Angeles, Cal.,
January 12, 1926.

Mr. Joseph Mesmer,
2464 East Ninth St.,
Los Angeles, Cal.,

Dear Mr. Mesmer:

Your letter of January 9th has been received in which you resign your membership in the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce because of the recent action of our board of directors in urging that the main issues to be considered by the citizens of Los Angeles in the so-called union station matters were not so much a question of a union station as the question of traffic relief and the development of a transportation system that would eliminate our grade crossings and tie in the interurban communities to this transportation system, and to get some action without any interminable legal squabble.

You are undoubtedly personally acquainted with most of the members of our board of directors and I feel that you will agree with me that these men are without fear or bias in their outlook upon the situation in Los Angeles and it is because of this attitude which they have always assumed on matters of major importance to the community that the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has grown to be not only the largest institution of its kind in the United States, but the main instrumentality which has brough development and prosperity to this community.

Furthermore, these men, as you know, are all men of large interests in the community and are sincerely desirous that the community should receive the fullest benefit of any proposed improvement. Therefore, it seems to me that you or any other member of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce have little cause to resign your membership from this organization from the work of which you have largely profited just because in this particular instance you may have different views from the board of directors.

Your suggestions that our board of directors may have been swayed in the consideration of the matter by selfish interests are entirely unfounded and are as uncalled for as might be similar suggestions from our board that your particular interests make it very difficult for you to look at the union station question in the broad light that our board of directors has viewed it.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce board of directors has tolerance for the views of every individual or organization who may feel that they have a right to express these views in matters of large importance to the community.

I confess, therefore, under the circumstances, that I can conceive not the slightest reason for your resignation from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. However, I feel that you owe it your continued support in view of the unselfish work this Chamber of Commerce and the board of directors have done to promote the interests not only of yourself, but of every citizen of the community.

Yours very truly.
Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce
[Signed] R. W. PRIDHAM
President.

Nearly 25 per cent of the 150,000,000 barrels of cement produced in this country last year was consumed in paving and road building.

Headliners in Events of Petroleum Institute

Prominent Oil Men

Among those who will be prominent in the events of the American Petroleum Institute this week are these four men. From left to right they are Harry J. Bauer, president of the Pacific Gasoline Company; Norval White of San Francisco, Pacific Coast secretary of the American Petroleum Institute; J. Edgar Pew, president of the American Petroleum Institute, and Paul N. Boggs, chairman of the local committee in charge of entertainment during the session.

THOUSAND OIL LEADERS MEET HERE THIS WEEK

Every Phase of Industry Will be Represented at Session of Petroleum Institute

BY HOWARD C. KEGLEY

The most important meeting of oil men ever scheduled to be held in California, the greatest oil State, will take place here this week when the American Petroleum Institute holds its sixth annual convention at the Biltmore, beginning tomorrow and continuing through until Friday.

More than 1000 representative oil men from all parts of the country are expected. These delegates will represent every branch of the industry, from producing to refining, marketing and manufacturing. The oil-well-supply fraternity will be here in full force to discuss oil-field equipment standardization, the refinery experts will attend in order to exchange ideas regarding the most modern refinery methods, the fire-equipment representatives will come to discuss oil-fire-lighting apparatus, and marketers will gather to talk over service-station problems.

The American Petroleum Institute is a national organization of leaders in all branches of one of the most important industries in the world. It exists for the purpose of bringing the best minds in the oil business together to work out, each year, the problems which vitally affect the industry and the public. It is considered likely that as a result of intelligent leadership and close-knit organization this group of big business men has done more constructive work for the oil industry in the last six years than was ever done for it in all the years that had gone before.

STANDARDS SOUGHT

This year the institute will devote a great deal of attention to reports of committees on standardization, a subject which has been before it for two or three years. Remarkable progress has been made in this respect. For the last fifty years oil-well-supply manufacturers have been making equipment for use in all branches of the industry, and making it without the slightest regard for uniformity. In fact, for many years supply houses were rather careful that their tools and casing could not be successfully hooked up with those of a competitive line.

There were numerous sizes of casing, countless sizes of tools, ropes, belting, tubing, etc. If a supply house went out of business or discontinued a line the oil operator was out of luck. He had stuff on hand that wouldn't jibe with anything else that he might buy. The American Petroleum Institute has been working on this problem for years. It now has it boiled down to a point where many items have already been standardized and supply manufacturers are turning them out with the imprint "A.P.I." upon them. California has for more than a year been using standardized oil-well casing.

During the first day of the convention reports will be hearr from perhaps a dozen regional committeemen on the subject of standardization of equipment. This topic will probably be the paramount theme of the meeting, and it is destined to bring great benefit to the public by greatly reducing the supply costs of operating companies in which the general public owns a heavy interest.

WILL DISCUSS GASOLINE

Second in interest, perhaps, will be the subject of gasoline. Here, again, the public is interested, the quality and price of gasoline being a theme in which almost everyone is considerably interested now and will be even more interested hereafter.

On the third day of the meeting will be a general discussion of gasoline, between members of the Institute and the Association of Natural Gasoline Manufacturers. Harry J. Bauer, of the Pacific Gasoline Company in this city, will preside at this discussion.

F. E. Rice of the Phillips Petroleum Company will talk on "Methods of Manufacture," and S. B. Mosier of the Signal Gasoline Company will discuss his paper. D. E. Buchanan of the Chestnut and Smith Corporation, will take up some other angle of gasoline manufacture and his conclusions will be discussed by F. S. Wade of the Lomita Gasoline Company.

On the second day, with Mr. Bauer presiding, the gasoline men will conduct a session at which E. L. Peck, president of the Association of Natural Gasoline Manufacturers, will talk on "Natural Gasoline, Its Present Position and Future Outlook." His paper will be discussed by A. M. Ballard of the Sun Oil Company. A speaker who will be announced later will talk on "What is Good Natural Gasoline From the Standpoint of the Refiner?" This discussion will be led by R. E. Bering of the California Gasoline Corporation.

LUBRICANTS ON PROGRAM

The question of lubricants will be threshed out by two prominent speakers. H. C. Dickinson of the United States Bureau of Standards will talk on "Purchase of Lubricants on a Quality Basis." A. L. Clayden of the Sun Oil Company will speak on Anti-Knock Gasolines and the High-Compression Engine."

Aside from supply standardization and gasoline processes, perhaps the next biggest topic before the convention is the use of electrical equipment, especially in drilling.

There was a time when it was difficult to find an electrically equipped outfield in a California field. Now they drill with juice cheaper than with steam from oil or other fuel, and they are pumping entire fields by electricity.

The San Joaquin Valley oil fields are good examples of the use of electricity, and only a few weeks ago a company which went far out into a remote part of Ventura county to drill a wildcat prospect hole, strung electric lines over to the site to supply the power.

"The Trend of Electrification in the Petroleum Industry," will be a paper by H. E. Dralle of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. Thomas Fleming, Jr., of the Oil Well Supply Company, will talk on "The Hild Electric Drive," while the "Use of Electric Power from the Oil Operator's Standpoint," will be discussed by L. B. Riddle of the Shaffer Oil and Refining Company.

Judson C. Welliver, for many years a Washington correspondent, and a member of the institute's public relations committee, is to talk on the subject, "An Outsider Looks In at the Petroleum Industry."

RECEPTION SCHEDULED

On the evening of the opening day of the meeting representatives of the California oil industry will tender the visiting delegates and their wives and family a reception in the ballroom of the Biltmore.

There will be no social affairs the second, third and fourth days of the convention, excepting that on Thursday at 8 p.m., the institute will hold its annual banquet at the Biltmore. This is to be a stag affair, and will probably be attended by at least 700 persons.

While the banquet is in progress the wives and daughters of delegates will be entertained at a performance of "The Student Prince" in the Biltmore Theater.

Friday will be devoted to recreation. Many of the visitors will be taken for an auto tour of the oil fields in the Los Angeles basin, the trip extending from Inglewood to Coyote Hills. Others will make a tour of the film studios at Hollywood and Universal City. Still others will play golf at the country clubs. A golf tournament is being arranged by Lionel Barneson, Oscar Howard and other local oil men.

Paul N. Boggs, of the Union Oil Company, is chairman of a general committee on reception and entertainment. The Chamber of Mines and Oil is taking an active part in plans for the entertainment of visitors.

The reception committee plans to put bouquets of cut flowers in the rooms of all visiting delegates and to present each delegate with a miniature crate of California's Sunkist oranges.

SPEECH-MAKING

The next time Maj. Hughes wants to make a speech about George Washington he had better confine his eloquence to the story about the cherry tree. Better still, not make it at all. When making a speech, the less you say, the safer. Nobody ever listens to anything—except the part that gets you in trouble.

WAR BULLETINS

Irving Berlin and bride have adopted a method of protecting their privacy. They issue a war communique, stating that they are happy—thus far. If continued through the usual adventurous harmonics of married peoples' lives, the daily battle bulletin will become as dramatic—and probably about as near truthful—as the ones we used to read in 1917.

CRAZY SYSTEM

"Don't shoot the pianist; he's doing the best he can" . . . would probably apply to the prison parole board.

But whether they are doing the worst or the best they can, the whole system is absurd. A system which turns the courts into dummies; and results in the real trials of criminals being conducted in a secret, back-alley proceeding. One of the amazing results of the "reform" administration which romped around this State some years ago.

INDIAN TALENT

There is nothing especially surprising in the fact that the Sioux Indians have developed a talent for machinery and the use of tools.

They are a well-balanced people—trained observers, good thinkers and possessed of good eyesight; and not too many "nerves."

The Indian takes well to a certain type of education; because there is a lot of real stuff in him to educate.

MEN'S CLOTHES TO BE 'DOGGY'

The convention voiced a belief that man has at last been awakened to "clothes consciousness"—whatever that means.

Yes, the "shorts" for golf wear, exploiting the male's pink, dimpled knee, will be pushed into public conspicuity on the Pacific Coast. Is this "clothes consciousness" or sex jealously toward the weaker of the species?

At Hotel Biltmore, last week, an important drama of this community's industrial life entered the last act where everyone always "lives happy ever after."

Four-score of Los Angeles' foremost creators and manufacturers of wearing apparel exhibited their spring lines and required 50 per cent more space than their successful exposition for buyers a year ago. Over $1,100,000 of merchandise was sold, and several distinctly Los Angeles creations scored hits which would have scored equally well at any exposition in smug New York or psychologically the world's fashion dictator, Paris.

The "happy ending" of a drama? Most truly!

Almost seventeen years ago less than a dozen stout-hearted pioneers were bravely facing ridicule, intolerance, and often unreasonable competition from "back east" and these things coupled with a consumer prejudice, therefore a numbed interest of the retailer, holding to a faith that Los Angeles would some day become an apparel center. Many a fortune was lost—in some instances two or three fortunes in the same family, through loyalty.

Today Los Angeles has 356 apparel manufacturers with $18,300,000 invested in equipment, doing an annual output of $34,655,000, requiring 8100 operatives and 5900 women and 2200 men, earning a weekly wage of $201,000—and every week of the year.

Today there is not an industry, a field of service to man in the community but what is benefitted by this industry.

Fashion? Just as the lure of outdoor California has trickled into the consciousness of every nation of the civilized world—just as the motion-pictures produced in Los Angeles have wedged an influence on dress, interior decorations, modern comforts and conveniences into every home of the middle classes over the civilized world—just this has caused Paris to stop and "feel the pulse" of Los Angeles style tendencies before coining new creations—and made Los Angeles very much a style center of the entire world. A happy ending, indeed, to the seventeen-year drama.

Glancing into the doorways of the exhibitors at the Biltmore last week, and patching the glances together, you faced a kaleidoscope of gorgeous Southwest colors—as though the great God of the outdoors in this sun-glinted land had made a California stained-glass window, then smashed it to bits and flung handfuls into every room.

Pinks such as line the fragile, tiny sea shell.

Moon crescents gliding through gardens—morning mists—mauve and evening's afterglow—strange visions lurking in shadows purple—flaming brass and crimson of sunsets above sleepy seas—stripes that ring the bee in yellow—poetry against green meadows and mountain snow white.

Everywhere smiles and a welcome! Buyers from out of town sought opportunities to show with pride what Los Angeles can offer the consumer, if the retailer will but give the chance.

The market for sewing machines is improving all the time in Netherlands, India.

BUILDING HEALTH SINCE 1873

The human system demands certain foods rich in health-building vitamins to assure health and normal growth.

Eminent scientists agree that cod-liver oil is one of the greatest forms of concentrated medicinal food ever discovered.

Scott's Emulsion contains cod-liver oil, also glycerine and hypophosphites of lime and soda, a combination that seldom fails to bring the desired result. Millions have successfully used this vital food-tonic since 1873. It is a creamy, white, easily taken health-builder—just what is needed for those who are run-down.

You will never regret your having taken Scott's Emulsion of invigorating cod-liver oil yourself or having given it to your child.

IN competition for a silver loving cup presented by the Los Angeles Times to the publisher of the Southern California weekly newspaper, which produced the best appearing and most excellent first page, Timothy Brownhill, publisher of the Puente Journal, won the coveted honor.

J. P. Baumgartener, publisher of the Santa Ana Register, was given a cup offered by J. R. Gabbert, president of the Southern California Editorial Association, for the best editorial page appearing in any daily paper published by a member of the association.

Both awards were made yesterday morning at a session of the editorial association at the Hotel Clark and was a feature of the last day of their annual business meeting.

The contest among the weekly papers for the honors of printing the best appearing paper attracted widespread attention and practically all of the publications in the southern part of the State made an effort to win the cups and at the same time the distinction of producing the most perfect newspaper. Mr. Brownhill won only after the judges of the contest graded and regarded more than forty entries.

The contest was decided by Marc Goodnow, head of the department of journalism, University of Southern California, H. C. Hotaling, executive secretary of the National Editorial Association, and Burton L. Smith, State editor of The Times.

ADVICE TO PHOTOGRAPHERS

What to "Shoot" and When Told by "Times"-All-Year Club Contest Judge and Camera Expert

After examining thousands of prints in The Times-All-Year Club's photographic contest to help make friends for Southern California, H. G. Little, art director for Lord & Thomas, who is one of the three judges in the contest, said yesterday:

"Amateurs who have been making excellent photographs of an eye-pleasing quality seem to strongly sense the advertising needs, and the prints we are receiving are becoming more and more useful to us. However, I might add a few more general principles in the way of advice.

"Judging from my own experience, it is more than likely that every spot in Southern California has fallen under the eyes of the commercial photographers. Most of them they have shot. What, then, is the problem of the amateur in making a winning picture in The Times-All-Year Club contest?

"I would say that he must either find a new and splendid scene to photograph, or he must make photographs of scenes already taken better than they have been taken before.

"The first and second prizes of this week go to pictures of spots that probably have been photographed as frequently as any in Southern California. One is the mission at San Juan Capistrano; the other is a Los Angeles park scene familiar to thousands. In each case the photographer showed unusual capacity to observe, as well as true artistry. Each picture, when printed in The Times, will reveal its charm.

SELLING CALIFORNIA

"Here is what they will do when printed in the advertisements the All-Year Club carries in the eastern magazines: The picture of the mission at San Juan Capistrano is of the battered but still firm walls of the structure, with the ruined chapel at one side. It looks very much like a massive bit of masonry that might be set down in the old Roman Forum. It is the kind of thing that you expect to find in the Old-World ruins of the Mediterranean Basin When the world, through the reproduction of that mission scene in a magazine, learns that it is part of the romantic glory of Southern California, some of those who learn it will be tempted to come here and view our structures of the past. The Los Angeles park scene shows a view through the palms, with the waters of a lake in the near foreground. All looks sunny and idyllic. It is a scene that will appeal to thousands. It is Southern California of the sun.

"At best, what we who are judging the contest can say will be only a guide in principle to those who are making prints."

Technical advice on the making of pictures for news and advertising use is given by the photographer for the publicity department of the Chamber of Commerce. He has successfully made many thousands of pictures of every conceivable composition. They have been used in hundreds of publications.

"When making your pictures for reproduction," he said, "it is vital that you bear in mind the value of contrast. The picture of a woman with a light face backed by a head of dark hair will reproduce better than the same face if it is backed by light hair. In a crowd, if folks are so mixed about that there is contrast in the color of the clothing, pictures will be better. A girl in a light dress standing between two men in dark suits has a higher reproductive value than three men in dark suits standing together, though from every other standpoint the pictures would be equal in value.

LIGHTS AND SHADOWS

"When making a picture of a white boat from the water side if the boat is backgrounded against a green bank your picture will be better than if the boat were against something near its own color. In these winter days the light is yellow in the early morning and late afternoon. It is more nearly white two hours before noon and three hours afterward. This light will give the better light and shade contrasts.

"Don't, however, limit yourself to the hours or to the absolute guidance that can be given. The field is large and wide. If one will bear in mind the basic principles of news photography he will be able to apply them in all conditions.

"A silhouette photograph of the lighthouse at Point Loma might be an excellent topic. Such a picture should be made in the late afternoon. But when made don't have several automobiles around the base of the lighthouse to clutter up the picture. Make the lighthouse smash out as the dominating thing in the composition.

"Glossy prints are best.

"Good luck."

CLASSES IN SOCIAL CASE WORK TO OPEN

DR. MIRIAM VAN WATERS AND MISS LOUISE DRURY TO GIVE COURSES

Dr. Miriam Van Waters, referee of the Juvenile Court in Los Angeles, and Louise Drury, executive secretary of the Juvenile Protective Association, have been engaged by the University of California extension division to give courses in social case work this spring.

Dr. Van Waters's course in modern methods of social case work is designed for social workers, teachers and others interested in scientific methods used in this vocation. This class is accepted by the State Board of Education as a course in social case work for educational research and guidance credentials. The class begins on Wednesday, the 20th inst., and will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. in room 14, Woodbury Building.

Miss Drury's class is in introduction to social case work and presents to volunteers and social workers the technic which covers methods of investigation, diagnosis and treatment. BUYS BOOKS FOR LOCAL UNIVERSITY

Dr. R. T. Flewelling Adds to Philosophy Library at Southern California

Dr. Ralph T. Flewelling, head of the department of philosophy of the University of Southern California, now on sabbatical leave in Europe, is discharging a mission of book-buying for the local university by which the best philosophic works obtainable, and originals in foreign tongues necessary in research work for higher degrees, are being added to the Hoose Philosophy Library on the Southern California campus.

Benefiting by the generosity of an "unnamed donor" the Hoose Library is being rapidly increased, some of the books that have been added since Dr. Flewelling's visits to London, Paris and Germany being Dugald Stewart's collected works in eleven volumes; J. G. Van Herden's complete works in thirty-three volumes; Michael Montaigne's essays and letters; "La Philosophe," in thirty-one volumes, and a complete set of Charles Renouvier's works.

Dr. Flewelling will attend the International Congress of Philosophy at Harvard University next fall before returning to Los Angeles. At this congress philosophers of the world meet every ten years, but the meeting this year will be the first in twenty years because of the interruption of the war. Dr. H. Wildon Carr, visiting professor at the University of Southern California from the University of London, was secretary of the last International Congress of Philosophy, and will present a paper at the September meeting on "The Descent of Matter."

Editor of "The Personalist," a quarterly journal of philosophy, theology and literature published by the department of philosophy at the university here, Dr. Flewelling discussed, in the January, 1926, number, "Our Copy-Book Intelligentsia," in which he maintains that the main struggle of our modern intelligentsia is — rather than for consistency or for sense—for originality and the spectacular, and that sometimes the so-called intelligentsia mistake old ideas for original ones. Other contributors to the current issue are Charles R. Murphy, Mansfield Freeman, John Richard Moreland, Professor Wildon Carr and James L. McLane.

ECONOMICS EXTENSION COURSE ANNOUNCED

PROF. MILLER WILL HEAD NEW SPRING CLASS TO BEGIN WORK 28TH INST.

Earl J. Miller, dean of men at the Southern Branch of the University of California, and assistant professor of economics at the State institution, will give a course in elementary economics this spring at the extension division.

Mr. Miller's course will comprise a study of the evolution of economics society and this historical work will be followed by a careful study of the characteristics of our present-day economics system; the standard of living; principles underlying the production and consumption of wealth; business organization; problems of value; forms of money and changes in the purchasing power of money; the laws of price; the nature of monopoly and the problems resulting from monopoly.

This class begins the 28th inst. and will meet from 7 to 9 in Room 7, Woodbury Building. Registration for this course is taken at 815 South Hill street.

WILL DISCUSS CHINA

University Speaker Will Face History of Making

Pottery making, the world's first industry, will be discussed by Harry Tuttle of Parmelee-Dohrmann's, in the President's Parlors of the University of Southern California on next Wednesday at 3:30 p.m., according to announcement by the U.S.C. committee on extra-campus opportunities.

Chinaware used in the White House at Washington, samples of French wares, and souvenirs to be distributed by the Domestic Science Department at Southern California, indicating the correct procedure in the use of china, will be featured during Mr. Tuttle's talk, which will trace the evolution of the making of china to its present stage.

This is the first of a series of instructive talks and demonstrations arranged by the university committee on extra campus opportunities at Southern California, including Robert M. Fox, Dean Mary S. Crawford, John R. Rich, Miss Tacie May Hanna, Marc R. Goodnow, and Mrs. Della T. Early. A personally-conducted tour through Exposition Park Museum is the next opportunity to be offered by the committee.

Western Aero League Dickers for New Field

If negotiations of Dr. T. C. Young, president, and Howard I. Wood, executive secretary of the Western Aero League, are completed, the next monthly meeting of the league will be held at Parkridge Country Club near Corona, early in February. Nearly 100 men interested in aviation will attend. Parkridge has the newest and, it is said, one of the best flying fields in the State.

At the last regular meeting held in San Francisco in December, it was decided to announce the date of the February meeting after the three-day State conference that is being held this month at general headquarters in Glendale.

The league is composed of aero clubs on the Pacific Coast and persons interested in aviation here in the West. Monthly luncheons are held at various aviation fields, at which current flying developments are discussed.

ITALIAN COURSE POPULAR

Bank employees in exchange departments, musicians and others are taking the course in Italian given at the University of California extension division. A new class in this subject starts Friday, meeting from 7 to 9 p.m., in Room 803 Pacific Finance Building.

INCLINED THAT WAY

The Chamber of Commerce may be very much Bent, but is far from being broke.

LIKE OTHERS

Even the Seine, when it gets too full, is a long way from being safe-and-Seine.

PREPAREDNESS

The Prince of Wales has become an M.D. Evidently he intends to keep right on riding horses.

FEARFUL HOPE

Well, when war is completely outlawed we hope it will be better controlled than a lot of the other outlaws are.

A DOG'S LIFE

An English bride was accompanied to the altar by her watchdog. She did not propose to let the groom get away.

WANTS HIS HONEY

Bees will travel four or five miles from home in quest of sweets. But we have heard of man going half-way around the world for his honey.

SOMETHING JUST AS GOOD

Tobacco planters are seeking a suitable substitute crop to be raised while their lands are given a rest from their usual strain. They might try cabbage.

VERY FOREIGN

Senator Borah may be the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, but if he should be given a free hand there wouldn't be any foreign relations.

ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY

The man in the street says that if the Americans were not chasers of the dollar they would not have the money to lend to the critics over the seas. 'Tis well they adopt the pursuit.

SHUT OFF NOISES

They have cut out all cars with cutouts under a new State law in Illinois. Only the police and fire departments are permitted as noise-makers on the highways. This is a step in making a silent world.

DOUBLE PORTION NEEDED

We used to consider the story of the miner who struck it rich, went to the most exclusive hotel he could find and ordered $25 worth of mulligan stew a great joke, But now he'd have to order at least $50 worth if he expected to find any real potatoes in it.

SCIENTIFIC DEDUCTION

Ain't science grand? A naturalist has found that the lady minnow will live through colder temperatures than the male and from this deduces that women are really more hardy than men. We will say for the women that they can get along with less covering than the males.

THE JOINERS

The suburban city of Burbank once more is undertaking a consolidation with Los Angeles. The citizens have voted twice against annexation within the last six years, but the idea persists. It is only a matter of time when both Burbank and Glendale will fall within the limits of the greater city. There is no real line of demarcation now.

THE BAD MAN

Let it be understood that a motorist who gets into a collision or accidentally bowls over a pedestrian will get a perfectly square deal in the courts and everywhere else. If he is not to be blamed he will be promptly and honorably released. But the hit-and-run motorist should have no consideration whatever. He should be treated as an Ishmael. The hand of every man should be against him. In every accident—small or great—each and every participant is expected to hover around the scene long enough to be identified by name or license number.

THE MYSTERIOUS MACKEREL

For centuries men and mackerel have been playing hide and seek and always the game has been won by the mackerel. No one has yet been able to discover where it goes when it disappears from the North Atlantic Coast. It usually reappears on both sides of the ocean at about the same time—the fisherman's harvest time. It is the very aristocrat of fishes, the leopard of the seas. Its blood is several degrees higher in temperature than other fishes and it has more blood; that's why its flesh is red. New England and Newfoundland are greatly worried, for the schools of mackerel have remained in hiding for more than a year. Meanwhile, they have appeared in surprising numbers on the European side. Is the American branch becoming extinct or has it joined its British cousins? That is the question American and Canadian fisheries commissions are trying to find out. Some 10,000 mackerel have been caught and tagged and whoever catches one with a tag on it is requested to report. The hide-and-seek game has thus become a game of tag.

THE COUNTER-ATTACK

In the midst of political and partisan investigations at Washington that injure much more than they help, that are born of politi-animosities and ambitions, that are mosquito-like carriers of poison propaganda, the proposed investigation into political and private monopolistic control of the exportation of raw materials from foreign countries stands forth like an electrolier in a dark alley.

This is something in which the whole people of the United States are concerned, for it has a far-reaching and increasing effect on the cost of living. With only about one-twentieth of the world's population, this country now has more than one-half the world's gold. Greedy arms are stretching forth from the shores of the seven seas, and greedy palms are itching for a share of that treasure. There is no closed season for these foreign fortune hunters, both national and individual.

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, has sounded a warning that we must take national cognizance of this condition and adopt defensive measures, or submit to the pillage. In a recent interview given to the New York Times he said:

> During recent years we have witnessed governments deliberately, by special legislation, erecting monopolies to control the trade in raw materials of which they possess the dominant portion of the world's supply, for the purpose of fixing prices of these essential commodities against consumers in fifty or more nations of the world.
> At least eight different raw materials have been thus put under such controls by special legislation, and several others are in effect similarly controlled by periodic governmental support rather than by legislative machinery. Several more can be so controlled by action of a single government, or by agreements between governments. We hear that some such agreements are now in negotiation. We have never countenanced this kind of thing in the United States.

There is no connection between a protective tariff and the kind of control to which Secretary Hoover refers. A protective tariff is levied on foreign goods brought into a country. It is a legitimate protection of a standard of living. In this country it equalizes the wages of American workmen and those of other countries. It protects home markets against competition from pauper-made foreign goods. But the monopolistic control now aimed at the United States places a prohibitive export tax on goods sent out of a country. The tax applies to all over a certain amount.

Here are some of the products whose price is regulated by monopolistic government control: Rubber, coffee, nitrates, sisal, potash, iodine, tin, mercury and quinine. The cost of some of these to consumers in the United States is more than doubled through this governmental export interference.

The case of rubber is attracting the most attention, because this country produces practically no rubber, outside its island possessions, and consumes 70 per cent of the world's output. That is what the automobile has done to us. Here is how the rubber monopoly is maintained, as summarized by the New York Times:

"The British East India rubber control under the Stevenson plan of the London Colonial Office has been in effect since 1922. This control applies to British Malay and Ceylon, with a prohibitive export tax on all rubber shipped in excess of announced allowances. The present allowance is 7 per cent of an assessed standard allowance. The pivotal price is 1 shilling 3 pence . . British Malay and Ceylon produce 70 per cent of the world's rubber."

Government control of the amount that may be exported and the price below which it cannot be sold: that is the kind of monopoly against which Secretary Hoover protests. We could easily retaliate were we equally lacking in business integrity by limiting the export of oil or gasoline and fixing an export price that would compel other countries to pay several times the price charged local consumers. But, as Secretary Hoover says, "We have never countenanced anything of the kind in the United States."

What are we going to do about it? Is there anything that can be done? Secretary Hoover thinks there is. At least he asks, "If not, why not?" And Hoover is not addicted to loose conversation. When he speaks of "some such agreements now in negotiation" he refers to confidential reports from our foreign representatives. He poses three leading questions: "Have our citizens a right to appeal to our government to aid them in remedying injustice that they may suffer from such practices? Shall our government refuse to take cognizance of their complaints? Is it not a national obligation to secure a free flow of raw materials upon which national life is much dependent?"

The first thing necessary is a nonpartisan investigation to determine to what extent this country is discriminated against. When the foreign monopolies are exposed it will be for the executive and legislative departments of our government to determine what can and should be done to protect the American consumers from monopolistic spoliation. That something can be done is almost a certainty; for Secretary Hoover has never yet started anything he was unable to finish. He does not talk for popularity, but to accomplish a praiseworthy purpose. And he is plainly keeping in mind that a counter-attack is the secret of all just defense.

INDUSTRIAL VERNON

In greater Los Angeles the city of Vernon is the natural center of the growing industrial and manufacturing district, physically, geographically and economically. The annexing of the central manufacturing district to that city in no sense separates it from Los Angeles proper. Except for its individual corporate government Vernon is as much a part of the southwest metropolis as other and more distant districts that have elected from time to time to be included in the larger city. This annexation represents no loss to Los Angeles and is of obvious advantage to the manufacturing plants involved.

One of the most important considerations in the growth of any industrial district is a direct and convenient contact with traffic arteries. The transportation needs of this section link it up logically with the city of Vernon through which it can tap the main north and south thoroughfares leading in and out of Los Angeles. Transportation from this district as well as the surrounding country would ordinarily have to be worked out from the west, which means through the Vernon gateway. Being attached to Vernon gives the manufacturers and plant owners a more direct say in affairs of vital importance to them than they would obtain by being annexed to a more distant and possibly less sympathetic city administration.

Vernon is dedicated to industrial development and is not a residential district. This gives it a common issue and forms a close tie with the surrounding neighborhoods devoted to manufacturing interests. As regards the stockyards a large part of the slaughtering in this section is confined to packers already located in Vernon. Having so much in common with Vernon and no feeeling of prejudice for or against any community, was the incentive behind the attitude of the central manufacturing district in seeking that particular annexation.

Nor will any of the near-by cities be injured by this action. Maywood and other towns will still have all the advantages they already possess for residential uses. Indeed, they will have the added benefit of proximity to the industrial development of Vernon, because there are no restrictions placed upon the employees of the factories and stockyards as to their place of residence.

Mr. Doherty, vice-president of the district, sums up the attitude of the manufacturers in one sentence. "Our people feel that we have much in common with all the surrounding cities and that the development of the district can best be accomplished by the co-ordination of efforts by all concerned."

THE LIFE-SAVING ERA

At the close of the quarter-century many articles appeared all over the country to extol the achievements of the inventive and discovery faculties of this generation in matters physical and purely material. Few eulogies were spoken or written in honor of Pasteurs, Kochs, Curies, Roentgens, Castellanis, Bantings and McCleods and the host of scientific institutions which had prolongation of life and diminution of suffering at heart. The Rockefeller Foundation, which battles all over the earth with germinal and bacterial diseases, was not mentioned nor was the psychoanalytic and psychopathological advancement for recovery of mental faculties given credit for their tremendous strides in the field of mental cures. Insulin, antitoxins and a hundred and one serums which isolate and antidote injurious blood and tissue-devouring bacilli were overlooked, glandular rejuvenants, pain-killing anesthetics, twilight sleep and the violet ray were joined to the forgotten army of man's best friends. The legion of hygienic research savants, surgeons, medical genii and chemical experts whose lives are hidden in the solitude of their laboratories and constant attendance on suffering humanity were only remembered in the precincts of hospitals and sanatoriums by grateful patients.

The greatest cause of all human salvage, the pacific movement of the antiwar crusade, was passed over in oblivion as if war jingoes had returned from a funeral party. Tear gas, mustard gas, death gas and a score of other mortal gases, submarines, death-dealing airplanes, gattling guns, Big Berthas and other holocaust death dealers—to say nothing of the grim reaper's swift scythe, the automobile—were sung in immortal epics; but life-saving devices and institutions which have girded themselves with the sword to sever the head of the only figure which needs decapitation, Mars, found no poet to sing their praises.

Is material progress and war prosperity so overwhelmingly absorbing in its value that the millions of dead soldiers and crippled veterans should be overlooked as the principal price which we paid for financial profits? Whether they be friends or foes, their human lives are not to be figured in dollars and cents. The wreath of immortelles woven in songs of war spoils and booty was gathered on the blood-soaked fields of Flanders and Champgane even as the "Rights of Spoil" were based by Hugo Grotius on his "Rights of War." Their very glory is written on a background of millions of spirits of slaughtered youth which appear like a perspective of condemnation rather than glorification.

The only visible spiritual benefit of the war is a comparative return to religious fervor which followed the sudden transfer from life to death in almost every home of the civilized universe where the empty chair became the unoccupied throne of God of fear whom men worshiped in their sense of isolation. This lamentable loss of life, the agonizing cries of the shell-shocked victims in our sanatoriums and the paralyzed and the millions of truncated bodies of heroes have reacted like a stimulus of research among the more philanthropic savants of our age to alleviate human suffering as far as science may make up for the crime of humanity. To them and their proteges let a belated meed of praise be sung.

LOCKING UP SCREAMS

Steel girders, plaster and cement can muffle but never quite extinguish sound. But now a scientist announces that noises can be kept out of the house like a snowstorm.

He proposes to lock up screams. Dr. Paul Heyl, chief of the United States sound laboratory, has "invented a sound-proof partition." A fox-trot to a nine-piece orchestra presents no terrors to a minister's family dwelling on the other side of the new partition.

The supplications of the fiddle strings will not bother the supplications of the preacher, and a following of Roosevelt in matters of family will not be taboo to the neighbors in the same apartment here or hereafter.

The partition is made of hair-felt supported by thin boards of sugar-cane fiber. The sounds become tangled in the hair and the sugar-cane fibers tan their hides until they settle down to quietude and dreams.

This scientist is a missionary. He has made it possible for men to love each other and fulfill the prophecies concerning certain animals that shall lie down with each other. The millennium has come.

Nothing in recent years has done as much for the increase of religion and piety at home. This scientist should be decorated with a red hat here and be permitted his choice of harps and halos hereafter.

Families in flats will rise up in the morning and call him blessed and the lion and the lamb can dance together until dawn and neighbors maintain world peace and comity relations. There ought to be no more Balkan beginnings of war.

The saxophone may now lose something of its unsavory reputation and be invited into the best of homes. Indeed, a man, whether he be musically inclined or not, will not have to learn the saxophone in self-defense.

Who dares say science and religion are in conflict? Indeed, religion will welcome science as her hand-maid and science will regard religion as her ardent ally. Not since Locarno has anything happened that will bring as much peace on earth and good will among neighbors.

IN A BOX

A seat on the New York Stock Exchange has been widely commented on for selling at the startling figure of $150,000.

But the Metropolitan Operahouse of New York has gone the Stock Exchange one better. The August Belmont box in the famous "Diamond Horseshoe" was recently sold for $200,000.

This seems like a high price to get into a box. We have seen men get into boxes at a much lower figure. Indeed, some have gotten there without any outlay whatever. Some have had to pay roundly in order to get out.

TALKING AMURRICAN

BY BAILEY MILLARD

How I love to sit in the smoking car and hear the good ol' rican language reeled off by a pair of solid citizens of the men who are neither highbrow nor lowbrow, but just average uals, with average ideas, average vocabularies and average tion.

"This is sure a good line to travel on," says one solid citizen. "My favoryte road. Engineer's kinda careless though. He gave us a coupla pretty hard bumps last night. Nearly caved in my cupolo."

"Yeah," comes the response. "Fella takes chances. Knew a man that was knocked outa his berth in Coloraydo that way. Broke two ribs. But he got damages. A thousand bucks."

"You're kidding. Didn't know anybody could collect their dues from one of these western roads."

"Not generally. But he was a scrapper. You come through from Noo York, didn't you?"

"Yeah. Took a side trip up to Bawston. Business in my line is sure bum there. Won't go again soon, that's a cinch. Then I come back to Noo York, stopped over a coupla days and then headed straight for Loss Anjelus."

"What rout?"

"Cincinnatah, Chicawgo, Omahaw, 'Frisco and then down this way. Won't get down to the Mex line this time. Going back to old Mizzourah on the Santa Fee in Febuary."

"Know many people in Loss?"

"Not many in a social way—one family out on Wilshyre and another on New Hampsheer. Mighty fine people. Wilshyre chap's a big butter-and-egg man. Drives a car dolled up to beat the band. Got loads of kale."

"Guess them kind ain't much happier than the rest of us."

"But anybody that wants to can take their jack and have a good time, like he does."

"Yeah, if they ain't afraid to blow it."

"Well, my friend's no tightwad—not so's you'd notice it. He jars loose pretty easy."

"Ever hear the one about the Scotchman and the cash register?"

"No. Shoot."

The story is told and at the end both men laugh heartily—the kind of laugh that is good to hear.

In the day coach one is likely to get something of this sort from a pair of feminine passengers:

"Listen, Mabel. She isn't an Amurrican—I don't know what she is."

"Eytalian, I guess, dear."

"Well, she's Amurricanized, all right. Plays wonderful bridge. Likes to have her name in the society part of the noospapers."

"Maybe that's why she gets so many divorces. Usta be a teluphone girl, didn't she?"

"I don't know, dear. She's an exquisite cook."

"Surely. I had lunch in her apartment last week. She served the most wonderful stuffed tomawtoes and the loveliest scalloped potatoes."

"I just love her layer cake, don't you? But her Russian tea is turrible."

"Yes, but she makes good cawfy and she serves the loveliest sausages."

Back to the smoker after a half-hour of this. Our two men travelers are still talking.

"And I sent him a hot telugram, right off the bat. Told him if he didn't have a new ignytion coil and the other dingbats ready when I got there he couldn't do business with me any more."

"Yeah, you sure gotta jack up them garrodge people or they'l soldier on you every time."

"You said it! And when I hit town the things were there, all right, all right. But the bill was awful. He stung me plenty—that bird did."

"Listen. I'm going to sit in on a little game of draw in Brown's drawing-room. Want to join us?"

"Oh, that fella—he's ornery! Plays too safe to suit me. Always has hooch on his hip and I'm on the water wagon."

"Me, too. Prohybition suits me, all right. We don't have to drink his booze. C'mon. He won't skip you."

"All righty. I'll take a chance."

The stubs are dropped into the cuspidor and the broad backs of the two men are seen down the aisle, while I gaze after them admiringly, wishing I might hear more of their talk.

For I know that while they and their substantial like hold such converse in such language the banks will not break, the train will stay on the track, the planet in its orbit and the world will remain safe for democracy.

FOUR PLANETS

By the Foothill Philosopher

Last month I took great joy in the flirtation between Venus and Jupiter in their ethereal Eden of the West. On the evening of November 26 Jupiter gave the radiant goddess a kiss, but evidently she didn't like it, or he didn't, for next evening he had turned away from her and has been going further away from her every evening since then.

Having heard that Mars and Saturn were planning a war conference on the 15th inst., I got up early that morning and climbed the hill back of my home to watch them as they rose in the east, apparently only a few feet apart. They didn't know anyone was listening or they probably would not have talked so loud.

"Isn't it about time to stage another little fight down on earth?" asked Saturn. "It's lots of fun to watch those fools slash at one another."

"No use to try," snarled Mars. "You know yourself that even we gods can't manage human beings unless we have them hypnotized. Well, those creatures down there have awakened and have decided to resist all our attempts to hypnotize them. They're talking about a League of Nations and a World Court and fraternity and progress and peace. It's no use, Saturn! We must look elsewhere for sport."

And the sun came up and Mars and Saturn vanished—and my heart sang.

Drastic Announcement

We have published nearly 1000 Little Blue Books at 5c, of which we've sold 100,000,000 copies in the past five years: the greatest book-selling achievement in all history. We could sell these books at the absurdly low price of 5c per copy because we ran our plant on the Ford idea of Mass Production. So far we have offered standard classics—great works of fiction, philosophy, poetry, etc. But we find that publishing only the best literature limits our market severely—comparatively few people want the best books. To maintain the 5c price on this gigantic series we must sell millions of books. This will necessitate withdrawing classical and literary titles after February 28, 1926, to enable us to publish more popular books. Those who like the present selection of Little Blue Books must order AT ONCE—better order 100 or 200 copies or more—for, after February 28, 1926, only a few hundred of the more literary titles will be retained. This is your FINAL CHANCE to get GREAT LITTLE BLUE BOOKS AT 5c. GRAB IT!

REFORMS IN CRIMINAL LAW

BY A. MORESBY WHITE

(Mr. White is a distinguished member of the bar of England, now practicing here. Because of the proposal to revise the criminal code of California as a move against the prevalence of violent crime, and because the laws of England are so effective in that direction, Mr. White's articles are of special timeliness.—Ed. Times)

The articles which have appeared in The Times under the title "America, the World's Crime Center," by Dr. Charles F. Aked, have roused much public interest and it is expedient to follow them with a clear statement as to practical ways of dealing with existing laws so as to bring it into harmony with modern requirements Most of the points which were taken by Dr. Aked are such as would naturally occur to the intelligent citizen, but many of these are already provided for in the law, although not enforced in practice. Many more points of far-reaching importance arise every day in the courts.

In considering portions of our criminal procedure it is above all important to bear in mind the first object of the criminal law. It is the only weapon which the community has in time of peace with which to protect itself against persons who break the peace. The individual who makes war upon society, the man who goes up against the State, must be dealt with in time of peace with certainty, with quickness and, if need be, with severity as in time of war. The courts of justice with their officials, the lawyers, the police officers, are all part of the standing army used by the people for their own protection in time of peace.

WELFARE OF PEOPLE FIRST

The first consideration must be the safety and the welfare of the people, not the mental condition of the accused and not the possibility of injustice sometimes occurring. Human institutions in their working out are fallible. Nothing of man's work is perfect, but the imperfections of the accused have been too much urged as the chief matters for consideration in criminal cases. Far too frequently we read sob sisters' stories and sympathetic appeals worked up on behalf of relatives of the prisoner or on account of some asserted extenuating circumstances in favor of the accused. The only proper place for such matters is in the trial or at the time of sentence in the criminal court under the rules of evidence prescribed by the law. Let us get back to sane thinking and a rugged independence of justice. Let us return to the ancient path, broad and clear. Let us keep it clean. So may we free this land from its present reproach and assure for those who come after us impartial and speedy administration of justice.

The method of bringing a suspected person before a court is usually by warrant and this is issued at the discretion of any of the employees in the District Attorney's office. Too frequently a warrant is issued from the office of a City Prosecutor or of a District Attorney upon the authority of some young lawyer who has not had ten years' experience in the practice of the law. The issue of a warrant is an important judicial act. It is a direct interference with the liberty of the citizen. A warrant ought only to be granted by a judicial officer after careful investigation upon the oath of credible witnesses. It is not just that the official who will prosecute the accused, namely, a member of the District Attorney's office or of the City Prosecutor's office, should have the right to decide whether a warrant ought to issue in the first instance. Such power makes him a judge in his own case. A summons should always be first issued calling upon a suspected person to appear before a justice of the peace and only if the charge is a serious one ought a warrant to issue upon the order of a justice of the peace.

INITIAL HEARING URGED

A preliminary examination before a magistrate ought to be made essential in every case. The method of going before a grand jury and having an indictment found against a suspected person and then putting him upon his trial without any previous notice of the character of the evidence to be adduced against him ought to be abolished. The accused person is entitled to have at the preliminary hearing full information of the evidence to be brought against him and to be given reasonable time to prepare his own case if he is committed for trial. At the hearing before the magistrate the accused should have just the same rights to defend himself by witnesses or legal advice as are given to him at the trial.

At the preliminary examination the magistrate may dismiss the case or he may decide to commit the accused for trial. At present the law limits the charge at the trial to the one upon which the commitment is made by the magistrate and if a mistake is made in the commitment the District Attorney is precluded from preferring a charge which would otherwise be supported by the evidence. The law ought to be clear that any offense which is supported by the evidence given before the magistrate can be made the subject of a charge by way of information or indictment before the grand jury.

Bail should be given to an accused person after he is brought before the magistrate and at any time up to the date of his final trial, in every case, according to the discretion of the judicial officer, who should be a justice of the peace, and if necessary by way of appeal, any judge of the Superior Court. The power of the judge or magistrate to grant bail is to be exercised according to the well-known rules controlling judicial authority. For his discretion does not mean what he himself may fancy or think in his unfettered opinion, but what the facts of the case call for, according to the well-known observed precedents existing in the history of crime.

BAIL SCOPE TAKEN UP

Professional bondsmen as a class ought not to be necessary. Possibly in a new community it may be difficult for an accused person to find citizens willing and able to become bondsmen, but that difficulty soon disappears with the growing of the community. There ought not to be any rule absolutely prohibiting bail, even in a charge of murder. Always must the judicial discretion be the guide for it is in that sound discretion that the people put their trust.

Nor, again, can it be safely said that an accused person who has been convicted before, no matter how many times, ought not to be admitted to bail. Probably the magistrate or judge would be very slow to grant bail in such a case, but again, this is a matter for his discretion.

After the grand jury has found the indictment, then the accused should have the right to set aside the indictment or the information if it is wholly unsupported by evidence given before the magistrate.

The accused must be given the right to have a copy of all the evidence given before the magistrate and of all evidence admitted before the grand jury.

The time between the commitment and the trial should be strictly limited and the criminal calendars should be expeditiously dealt with so that the trial takes place within at the most one month after the commitment.

The indictment must be in simple language and the present rules may be still further simplified. There is no need for the ingenuity of counsel to be exhibited in putting a criminal charge upon paper. Any flaw or technical matter in an indictment should be capable of correction by the judge upon trial so as to allow the case to proceed, provided it does not amount to the substitution of an entirely fresh charge of crime against the accused. There should be no appeal about any matters in any indictment except where it wholly fails to charge a criminal offense.

ABUSES OUTLINED

The abuses at present existing at a trial chiefly arise from the weakness of the bench and the class of lawyers who are employed in criminal offenses. The bench should be strengthened through the selection of judges by a competent authority instead of through an election by the people, who are without adequate means to decide upon the best men for judicial work. Also by increasing the salary of the judges. Also by requiring at least fifteen years' experience as a practicing lawyer as a qualification for a judge. Also by providing for superannuation on retirement after service of fifteen years. This would result in putting on the bench men over 40 years of age, having great professional experience, giving the best years of their life and their trained ability to the service of their country and knowing that they were assured of an honorable competence upon leaving their judicial offices. The bench must be placed above and possible means of influence from the press or from the people. The bench should be above suspicion and of trusted integrity.

WAMPAS FROLIC SCENE ATTRACTS STARS

Filmdom Inspects New Palace of Entertainment

Players Given Earful

Jason Robards, Judy King and Charlie Murray all up in the air over the Shrine Auditorium's new loud speakers.

The new Shrine Civic Auditorium is geographically located on Jefferson street near Figueroa; but right now it seems to be a part of Hollywood, judging from the large number of screen stars who are continually in the building. All filmdom has rallied to the standard of support for the 1926 Wampas frolic and ball, which will be held at Los Angeles' newest temple of entertainment on February 4

The producers, directors and stars have not only bought large blocks of tickets and have promised their appearances on the stage as well as their participation in a number of the acts which will make up the show now being put together by Sid Grauman, but they are making frequent daily visits to the auditorium, inspecting its wonders and lending helping hands to the artisans who are working double shifts to finish the auditorium in time for the publicity men's annual gala event.

Roy H. McCray, manager of the auditorium, takes a keen delight in personally leading the stars' tours of inspection through the huge theater and the mammoth ballroom, both of which will be employed for the Wampas frolic and ball. The players of the silent drama were all especially interested not only in the huge theater and its tremendous stage—20 per cent larger than that of the Hippodrome, hitherto conceded to be the largest stage in the world—but also in the loud-speaker system which is installed in the mammoth ballroom to enable the dancers to hear the music clearly. Several units, each consisting of twelve large horns, hang from the lofty roof of the ballroom, so that even if its full capacity of 6000 couples is dancing on the floor, the shuffling of the feet will not drown out the strains of the music.

In addition to large blocks of seats which have been purchased by studios and individuals within the motion-picture industry, a number of society leaders are planning to have large parties at the Wampas frolic. Other groups of seats have been reserved for the Chamber of Commerce and a number of other civic organizations, the members of which will attend the frolic in a body. For this reason, Ray Perry, who is in charge of the ticket sales for the publicity men, declares that it is necessary for all who wish to attend this unique entertainment, to make their reservations in the immediate future, since all seats are reserved for the first time in the history of the frolics.

Sid Grauman and his aides are holding daily rehearsals at the Shrine Auditorium and also at the various studios, putting together what is definitely expected to be "the greatest show ever staged."

Where th' hell do ya think yer goin', hey? Who th' hell do ya think YOU are? Why don't you put that can in a garage until you learn to drive? What's th' idea cutting over on me that way, huh? $[()""!?&?$][& Get outa there an' let me look you over!....... Well, you don't look so damn bad, if you'd get a shave and take off that red tie! Go ahead, now, and watch your step and don't cut over on no more cars—get me?"

"Yes, sir!" And the reporter went on his way.

Turning at Eleventh street to Broadway, he traveled north to Seventh street where, finding the traffic somewhat congested he essayed a left turn to Seventh street, despite a signal from the presiding officer to go straight ahead. The resultant hullabaloo was astonishing. It seemed that at least ten murders, four fire alarms and a declaration of war by Turkey had occurred simultaneously. Traffic cops on near-by corners—some several blocks away—heard it and joined in the chorus, and if all the Hartz canaries in the world were turned loose and ordered to do their darndest they couldn't have equaled it.

When the dust died down, the reporter was comfortably parked in a loading zone behind a yellow cab with officers to the right of him, to the left of him, in front of him and behind him, not to mention one who had lifted the hood presumably to pull the motor out by the roots.

ENTER THE WINNER

They left H. C. Harting, Officer No. 502, doing his second day's work on the beat, to do the talking. And Harting, his bronzed face looking rather heated, took off his cap—presumably to let out the steam—and said it with smiles.

"Whassa matter with you?" he inquired curiously.

"Why—what did I do?" quoth the reporter with visions of six penitentiary sentences.

"Can't you read?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, can't you read those signs?"

The reporter gazed wonderingly in the direction of the pointed finger and noticed the 'No Left Turn" standard in the middle of the crossing.

"Yes, sir, but I wanted to go this way."

"My Gawd!" breathed Harting softly, and his voice became very gentle. "Where's your operator's card?"

"What card?" queried the driver.

"Your operator's card—got one?"

"No, sir."

'Registration card?"

'No, sir."

'Is this your car?"

"No, sir."

'Own up to that, do, you?"

"Yes, sir."

'Nothing to show who the car belongs to?"

"No, sir."

"What's your license number?"

'I don't know, sir."

"Where'd you get the car?"

"From a garage."

"What garage?"

"I forget!"

Now all of this without a break in that sunny smile and gentle treatment. Not a sign of impatience; not even a hint of anger. And then he thought a while—and looked us over.

"Listen, buddy. I don't want to lock you up—and I know you're not a crook, because if you were you surely wouldn't come down here this way to tell us about it—now would you? Did you just buy this car—or are you trying it out?"

"I guess so," answered the politeness advocate.

Thirty minutes more of this—and then he said:

HOW HE DOES IT

"Well, brother, I ought to take you in, but you laugh too hearty. Now—you run up to Central Station and get yourself an operator's card and straighten out this mess and you drop by and see me some time in the next few days and I'll hold up this ticket to see if you do. That jake?"

It was $20 worth of jake, for Harting won the daily prize.

The next left turn came at Sixth and Spring, and while the whistles blew the reporter parked in a loading zone, disembarked and began looking under the machine for what he could see. A loud voice startled him:

Say, brother, I don't know who YOU are, but what're you makin' a left turn for—what are YOU, president of a bank or somep'n?" It was Officer No. 1013 speaking. "Le's see your operator's card!" Again the examination; again the dumbbell role. "Say—you seem to think this is funny, don't you?—well, it ain't so funny as you think! I ought to make you drive on up to the station—then maybe it won't be funny! I guess I will! Let's take a ride!"

A hairpin turn at Eighth and Figueroa streets and another left-hand turn at Sixth and Hill streets brought no returns. Parking at a fire plug between First and Second streets on Broadway brought a courteous examination and an invitation to a ride around the block from Policeman No. 2040. Then a left turn at Seventh and Hill streets, with Officer No. 1105 on duty.

"Sa-a-y! Where th' hell do you think YOU'RE going? How do you get that way? Where's your operator's card? Not got any? We-ll—you'd better get one or you'll be marched up to central, see? On your way!"

"HERE'S A TAG"

Officer No. 808 between Sixth and Seventh streets on Grand avenue: "Don't you know you shouldn't double park? Don't give me no flimsy excuses. We want to treat you fellows courteously, but we want some courtesy in return—and you're just running a good thing to death! Here's a tag!"

Officer 1892, as the reporter's car slowly made a hairpin turn at Broadway and Temple:

"Hey!

"He-e-ey! You!

'H-E-E-Y! Y-O-U! Come back here!

'What th'—say—don't you know you can't make a hairpin turn up here? You don't? Well, buddy, here's a piece of paper that'll tell you all about it when you see th' judge! I'm going to quit fooling around with you birds! It don't do no good. I might as well be handing out tickets as standing up here on th' block where no one pays any attenion to me!"

Officer No. 2003, on Broadway between Temple and First street, two minutes later as the reporter's car fades down th' street:

"Th' crazy ———' Runs right over a button! Another three miles and he'll be a dead——!"

Driver of ten-ton truck, commercial license No. 30261, as reporter blocks traffic at Second and Flower streets: "Hey, get t' hell outa there, will you? "!:!$&'()$!8!! Get t' hell outa there—I wanta move!"

"Well, sir," said Officer Harting, when he won the prize, "I'll tell you. I've found out that the fellow with a smile goes a long way farther than the grouch. I've had a lot of nice things happen to me because I smile—but I can't remember a single one that came my way when I grouched! I'll tell the world politeness pays! And besides, my sergeant and my lieutenant and my captain and my chief have been arguing the same thing to us—and believe me, I know they're right! Thank you!"

STORES AND OFFICES

Plans have been prepared by J. Martyn Haenke for a five-story reinforced concrete store and office building at Sunset Boulevard and Reservoir street for H. Shapiro. The structure will cost $125,000 and will contain stores on first floor with forty offices above.

SCHOOL ADDITION

Plans have been prepared by Austin & Ashley for a $200,000 addition to the Center and Oak Knoll Junior High Schools at Pasadena for the Pasadena Board of Education. The structure will contain twenty classrooms, library offices and will be of reinforced concrete construction.

Local Concern to Fill Large Heater Order

A contract for the installation of gas heating equipment in the new Hollywood Chamber of Commerce building has been let to the Pacific Gas Radiator Company. Twenty-two cast-iron radiators will be used. They will be vented in order to assure absolute safety and freedom from obnoxious gases.

"The Chamber of Commerce officials of Hollywood chose one of the most efficient types of gas-heating equipment made," says A. J. Hartfield, president of the radiator company. "Along with its twin brother, the pressed-metal radiator, it is by far one of the most popular heaters ever introduced in California."

IF RHEUMATIC BEGIN ON SALTS

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure, Eat No Sweets

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat no sweets of any kind for a while, drink lots of water and above all, take a spoonful of Jad Salts occasionally to help keep down uric and toxic acids.

Rheumatism is caused by poison toxins, called acids, which are generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this poison, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove body waste, also to stimulate the kidneys, thus helping to rid the body of these rheumatic poisons.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.—[Advertisement.

To End Severe Cough Quickly, Try This

For real results, this old home-made remedy beats them all. Easily prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

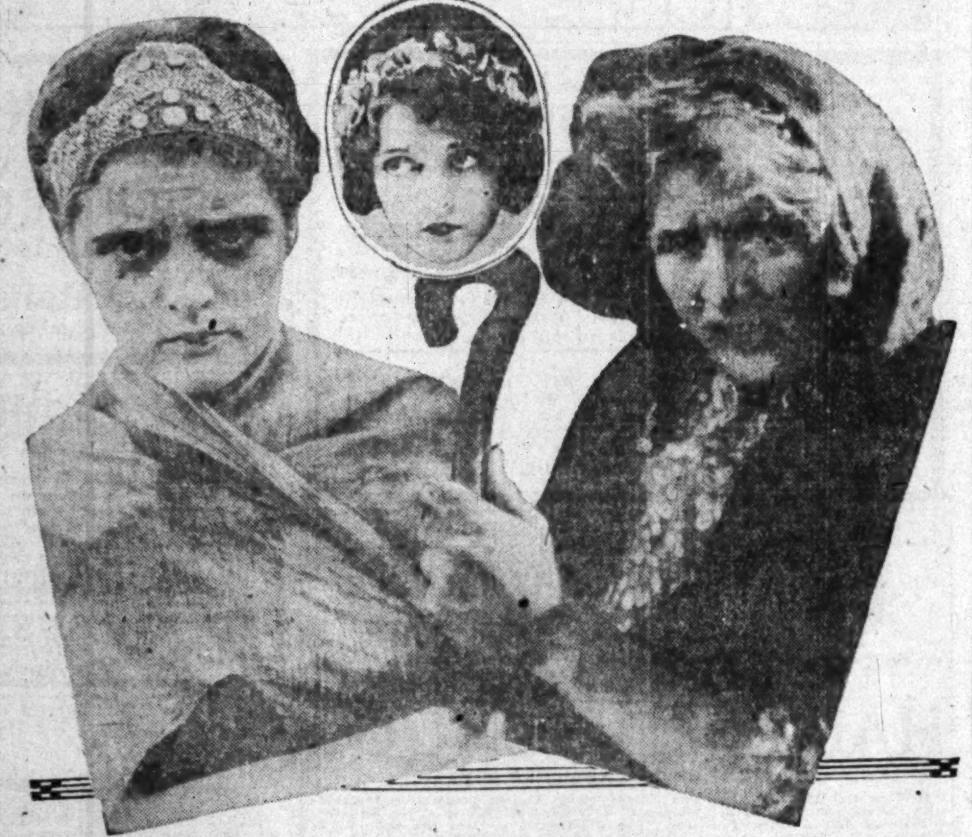
MAKE-UP COSTS ACTRESS HOURS OF TOIL

Secrets of Characterization Disclosed by Film Star



Dorothy Dwan in Two of Her Film Characterizations

WHAT a difference make-up makes!

Making up, so far as Dorothy Dwan, one of the screen's well known ingenues, is concerned, has nothing to do with patching up a quarrel. Instead, it means hours of toil with the grease paint, seemingly endless change of costume and the actual living of a characterization portrayed by her.

Here she is shown in three strikingly different poses, each demonstrating the efficacy of make-up. In one she is apparently a woman of mature years, having experienced a life replete with sorrow, indicative of the lines seen in the face. Another picture excellently typifies a hag while the third shows Dorothy as herself minus make-up, her large, expressive eyes quizzically looking from under their softly veiled lids.

Knowledge of the art of make-up has been a potent factor in the success of Miss Dwan, who has attained stardom despite the fact that she has been a screen player barely two years.

Miss Dwan, who is rapidly winning recognition as an actress jealous of her make-up, revealed a few secrets of make-up. Light eyes, she says, are the most fatal obstacle to successful screen photograph. To have them appear darker, a soft lead pencil is used, making a narrow, dark line just inside the lashes and all around the eyes.

To successfully apply mascara, thus giving the lashes a heavy, black appearance against the soft whiteness of the cheek, a needle is necessary to separate the lashes, Miss Dwan says. Mascara, if thickly used, causes the eye lashes to mat. As a consequence, screen players sit before an enlarging mirror and carefully ply the needle between each lash after they dry.

Grease paint is the first thing to apply, declares Miss Dwan. The skin must be thoroughly covered, she avers, otherwise powders will not adhere. Rouge over the eyes makes the upper lid soft and dark. Small eyes require a heavy, dark shadow made by black or blue pencils.

Less and less make-up is being used for photography today, says Miss Dwan, who believes that the time is gone when the star smeared her face with heavy coats of paint and powder. She, herself, employs nothing but cold cream, coated with pink powder, a little red over the eye and a pale red lip rouge. Mary Philbin and Lillian Gish are said to use practically no make-up because of the fairness of their skins.

Elsie Mackay, daughter of Baron Incheape of England, is the only woman member of the pilots' advisory committee of the Air League in Great Britain.

Decoration and Landscape Work Instruction Given

Edgar H. Wileman

Courses in the art of interior decoration of the home and in garden landscaping will be given to professionals and to home owners this spring at the University of California, extension division.

Edgar Harrison Wileman has been obtained by the State university to give the course in interior decoration. Mr. Wileman traveled for seventeen years in Europe and South America, studied at the Art Institute of London and in other European art schools, and for some years conducted his own art studio in Buenos Aires. He now lectures on this subject for Barker Brothers in Los Angeles. The adaptation of decoration to types of architecture will be studied in this course, the expressive value of light, color, form and texture of materials, the choice of draperies and upholsteries, furniture, accessories, wall coverings and other phases of this subject. The first meeting of this class will be the 26th inst. from 10 to 11:30 a.m. in Room 614, Hillstreet Building.

William Tyler Miller, professional landscape architect, will give the course in home landscaping. He will go into the subject of shrubs and plants best suited to the Southern California climate, and give methods of planting and care. This class meets in Room 3, MacKay Building, Friday from 7 to 9.

GROCERS PLAN AHEAD FOR ANNUAL EXHIBIT

Stressing the necessity for laying plans well in advance, S. M. White, president of the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association, announced yesterday that the third annual Food and Household Show will be held here from October 24 to 30. Ambassador Auditorium was named as the place. White declared the show will be conducted principally as an educational influence for the public. By beginning plans for the show several months earlier than last year, he said, numerous innovations could be added. Waldo T. Tupper was selected to manage the event.

NEW COURSE OPENS

The necessity for vocational and educational guidance and its application to students in junior and high schools, special and part-time schools will be pointed out in a new course in vocational guidance to be given at the University of California extension division, starting tomorrow and meeting from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 16 Woodbury Building.

COLISEUM CONCERT TODAY

Low Admission Scale Expected to Bring Crowd of 25,000 to Hear Philharmonic Orchestra

A symphony concert by one of the great orchestras of the world with 20,000 seats available for a 10-cent admission! This great musical opportunity is possible only in Los Angeles, where our unrivaled climate makes possible out-of-doors concerts in the middle of winter, when cities back East are fighting snow and ice.

Thanks to the co-operation of the Community Development Association in making the Coliseum available and the attitude of W. A. Clark, Jr., the founder of the Philharmonic Orchestra, in making it possible to have this great educational influence open to our citizens, the second season of these concerts will be inaugurated this afternoon at 2 p.m., when Conductor Rothwell waves his baton as a starting signal to the ninety men that compose this great musical instrument.

With some 20,000 seats available at 10 cents admission and nearly as many more in the 25 and 50-cent sections, it is possible to care for as large a crowd as may attend and, judging from the success of last season and the interest shown in the coming series, there will be a crowd of some 25,000 on hand to greet the orchestra this afternoon.

"The real function of a symphony orchestra," said W. A. Clark, Jr., "is to bring the influence of its artistry to as many people as possible and, entirely aside from the undoubtedly tremendous advertising value to Los Angeles and all of Southern California, that midwinter outdoor concerts have in letting the world know of our climatic advantages, these Coliseum concerts have a unique field and serve a fine purpose in making it possible for a man to take his wife and three children, for example, to them and pay car fare and admissions with a dollar. Nowhere else in the world is it possible to even approach this joining of the highest type of musical art with the lowest possible price. The response of the public last season and that which I am sure this season will bring forth more than repays our efforts in creating this great orchestra and making it a part of our civic life."

THREE ENGINEERING COURSES SCHEDULED

Three engineering courses start at the University of California extension division on Wednesday and will be taught by A. B. Pierce of the Southern California Edison Company. "Gorilla" Author Goes East

MUSEUM GIVEN PIONEER'S DIARY

Historical Jewel Presented by Translator

Unique Journal of California in Civil War Days

Author Long Identified in Los Angeles Affairs

The original letters and diary of the California pioneer, Frank Lecouvreur, together with the translation of these materials, entitled "From East Prussia to the Golden Gate," have been presented to the Southwest Museum by the translator, Prof. Julius C. Behnke.

Prof. Behnke believed that these valuable materials should be housed in a fireproof building, accessible to the public under proper supervision. With this thought in mind he gave these documents and translation to the Southwest Museum, which is becoming one of the chief depositaries in California for historical materials dealing with the Southwest.

The museum submitted the materials to Prof. Rolland A. Vandegrift, of the history department of the University of Southern California, for his opinion as to their value.

UNIQUE COLLECTION

Prof. Vandegrift returned a report to Dr. Johnson, which is in part as follows: "The Frank Lecouvreur materials, given to you for the Southwest Museum by Prof. Julius C. Behnke, are unique not only in themselves, but also in coming in the collected form as they do.

"I hesitate to place any monetary value upon them, for such materials can only be priced from what collectors will give for them when offered for sale. These items are decidedly unique and of especial value, since Prof. Behnke tells me that the original letters, with the exception of the one in this collection, were buried with Lecouvreur's mother in Germany in conformance to her wishes.

"Frank Lecouvreur was born in Ortelsburg, Prussia, June 7, 1829. His father was a French Huguenot and his mother the daughter of Mayor Minuth of Bartenstein. He received a thorough education as a civil engineer.

"Desiring a greater degree of liberty than was possible under the German government, young Lecouvreur determined to migrate to the United States and to visit California.

"The letters published in the translation by Prof. Behnke cover the period from the time Lecouvreur left home, April 28, 1851, to October 22, 1868. Gaps in the story are filled in from the diaries in which Lecouvreur very carefully detailed his voyage and experiences and life in the then undeveloped California.

CALIFORNIA DAYS

"Lecouvreur arrived in San Francisco on January 15, 1852. He spent almost three years in Northern California before coming to Los Angeles in 1855. His diaries concerning Northern California include among other things a description of San Francisco, people, work of the vigilance committee of 1851, western business methods, miners, mining experiences on the Yuba, description of land and forests, Sacramento, Indians, Alameda boom of 1853, missions.

"In Southern California, Lecouvreur soon became identified with public service. He was made deputy County Clerk of Los Angeles county, which office he held for three years. Later he served as deputy County Surveyor under Maj. Henry Hancock. He then served two terms of two years each as County Surveyor. Under his direction many important surveys were made. He declined a third term as County Surveyor and entered business as cashier in the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank.

"His diaries concerning Southern California include descriptions of great interest. Among other subjects are: "San Pedro," "The City of the Angels," "Desert Survey," (of the Mojave)—"Catalina Island in 1856," "Anaheim, a Settlement of Stockholders," "Wilmington," "Local Coal-Oil Wells Discovered in 1865," and "Chinese Massacre in Los Angeles."

Gage, Creator of Lincoln Art, to Teach Here

George Merrill Gage, creator of the Lincoln statue in the State House grounds of Topeka, Kan., and who now has a studio-home on the Sea-View Ranch of the old Huntington estate which overlooks Santa Monica Canyon, has accepted an appointment as instructor in sculpture in the school of architecture of the University of Southern California.

George Merrill Gage

Gage, who has many pieces of sculpture on exhibition at the Hatfield Galleries in Los Angeles, studied for several years under the famous Gutzon Borglum, until overseas service interrupted his work.

The sculptor also has worked with Borglum since his return from Europe, and is creator of two American Legion fountains in Swope Park, Topeka. He has decided to make his home in California.

Following announcement by the William Fox Vaudeville Company of its intensive studio expansion, the Baker Iron Works has received an order for more than seventy-five tons of structural steel from A. The contract calls for a complete sky backing frame for a daylight stage at the Fox Hill Drive studio of the film company in Westwood, including steel trusses and columns, together with trolley beams and trolley carriers, and for trusses, trolley beams and trolleys for the new dark stage being erected by the Fox company in its studio plant at 1401 North Western

The Sunday School Lesson
FOR JAN. 24, 1926

AN ORIENTAL IDYL

(The International Sunday-School Lesson for January 24 is "Jesus and the Samaritan Woman"—John iv:13-26.)

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

Beginning in Italy, and stetching eastward throughout Asia until the borders of China are reached, where men carry the water, a traveler finds one continuous panorama of women at the well, or fountain or stream. Mostly they carry large and graceful earthen jars on their heads or shoulders or hips; in India the vessels are of brass; and increasingly the hideous five-gallon tin can that originally held American gasoline is used.

At least three times in the Bible we are shown the familiar eastern scene of a woman at a well. Our lesson story is an oriental idyl; the ancient well, its stone curb worn by the ropes and thongs of centuries, outside of a city; a vigorous, strong-minded and sharp-speaking peasant woman drawing the day's water supply and eager for chance talk with any wayfarer who might use this common resting place; the flocks gathered near and the travel-stained and thirsty teacher seated on a stone hard by, waiting for the return of His friends to this familiar rendezvous. Wells are ancient landmarks in the East, and this particular one was famous as a heritage from the Patriarch Jacob himself.

LAND OF PERSISTENCES

To this day, Jacob's well, after 4000 years of almost continuous use, flows sweet and strong in its cool, dark depths. I have drunk of its delicious waters when my throat was parched and dry from a dusty summer drive over the Plain of Esdraelon. Most of the ever-increasing number of tourists to the Holy Land visit the well, now enshrined in a modest chapel kept by the Greek monks, amidst the ruins of a Crusader church. It is at the center of old Samaria, on the highway between Judea and Galilee, exactly as the lesson describes. Hard by is the traditional tomb of Joseph.

This well of Jacob is still a real well; the woman was a real woman, familiar in type, who came from a real town; every aspect of the incident is true to the persisting life of the East; and the conversation was a real conversation, with a real and human and thirsty and warm Christ. Let us not spiritualize away the simple facts of the case, which are as humanly real as an item of news in this paper. Past centuries of theology have made Christ remote and vague; our day's task is to bring back, to the help of a generation that needs Him sorely, the vivid, warm and present personality of the Son of Man.

LIFE'S TOUCH AND GO

One objection to the automobile as a means of travel, especially in the Orient, is that it keeps the traveler away from frequent and friendly contact with his fellows. The horse, the donkey and the old-fashioned "araba" wagon, were far more sociable, with their enforced frequent halts at wells and khans, where one fellowshipped with other travelers of all degrees. Those casual contacts are the richest reward of journeyings. Jesus always sought them, and improved them as opportunities for friendliness and helpfulness. Tabulated from the Gospels, those wayside meetings of the Master with men and women are seen to have formed a surprisingly large proportion of His ministry. How unlike Him in this are some eloquent platform speakers who "have no time" for individuals."

Because "He knew what was in man," and because He was fagged out physically from His journey, Jesus would have been quite justified in disdaining the pert and coarse Samaritan woman who came to the old well beside which He was resting. For, after all, He was a Jew and a man, and she was a Samaritan and a woman. But He did not; He asked for a drink, less because of what He could get than of what He could give. Although He was truly thirsty, Jesus was no slave of any need or appetite, and He could have awaited the return of His disciples from the neighboring village, whither they had gone to buy food.

The woman, to whom a man was a man, and a fit object of a flirtation, parried the simple request for water by a light conversational retort; she wanted to talk. At once Jesus made a reply that lifted the conversation to a high level of spirituality; He met all classes of folk on the plane of their loftiest needs and perceptions. Even this common woman He addressed as one capable of interest in concerns spiritual. There is real point in the similarity of His reply to the aristocratic scholar, Nicodemus, and to this loose-living, illiterate Samaritan woman. Surely. Christians are too reluctant to broach the supreme question to those whom they meet by the way.

THEOLOGY VERSUS CONDUCT

Absurd as it seems, this Samaritan woman was a bit of a theologian. She was hideously deficient in religious character; she was indeed rather a notorious sinner. But that did not hinder her, from raising doctrinal issue with this soft-spoken stranger who talked of the things of the spirit. We do not need, however, to go back 2000 years to this incident to find the same strange divorcement of theology from conduct. There are many raging up and down the land today about "orthodoxy" or "liberalism" who would be better employed in a consideration of the ethics of some of their own methods.

Instead of discussing the Samaritans or the well, or Jacob, or Jerusalem versus Samaria, the Master drove straight to the truth that is as vital and necessary today as when it was spoken beneath a blazing noontide Syrian sun; the spiritual water that is life, and the worship that is of the spirit and of sincerity. Not the outward, but the inner, is the real. "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship in spirit and in truth." That truth is the goal toward which all churches are but a route. What Jesus told one carnally-minded woman is what His friends are trying to teach the whole world today. Here in the East, where religion is synonymous with formalism, that news alone can bring life.

BEST FOR THE LEAST

Four episodes stand out in the early passages of John's Gospel which the Sunday-schools have studied thus far this year, the call of the first disciples, the miracle at Cana, the interview with Nicodemus, and the talk with the Samaritan woman at the well; and all of them affirm the Messiahship of Jesus, which is the central theme of the book. Nobody can accept John's narrative and still deny the Christship of our Lord.

Strangest of the occasions for declaring this highest of all truths is the present lesson scene. Nobody could be less worthy to hear the good news than this obtuse, frivolous, sinful woman. Yet to her, in categorical and unmistakable words Jesus declared, "I am the Messiah."

J. B. SCOTT TO DEDICATE LAW HALL

School Building of U.S.C. Will be Thrown Open Early Next Month

James Brown Scott, who for many years has occupied a leading position in the legal profession of this country, and is internationally known as an attorney, editor and educator, will deliver the dedicatory address at the new law school building of the University of Southern California on February 5.

Mr. Scott, who was the first preceptor and dean of the University of Southern California law school twenty-one years ago, served as president of the American Institute of International Law since 1915, as editor-in-chief of the American case book series, as a delegate to the second Hague Peace Conference in 1907, and to the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, and more recently has acted as adviser to the United States government on questions of international law.

Author of "The Hague Peace Conferences of 1899 and 1907," "An International Court of Justice," "Peace Through Justice" and a "Survey of International Relations Between the United States and Germany," Scott took his A.B. and A.M. degrees at Harvard University and studied in Berlin, Heidelberg and Paris. He was a private and corporal in the California Infantry in the Spanish-American War in 1898.

Members of the Los Angeles and California Bar Association will be guests at the dedication ceremonies of the new University of Southern California law school building on February 4 and 5, and Hon. Charles A. Shurtleff, president of the California Bar Association, and James G. Mott, president of the Los Angeles Bar Association, are scheduled to deliver addresses at the morning gathering in Bovard Auditorium. Other speakers will include Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Dean Kirkwood, of Stanford University; Dean McMurray of the University of California, and Dr. R. B. Von KleinSmid.

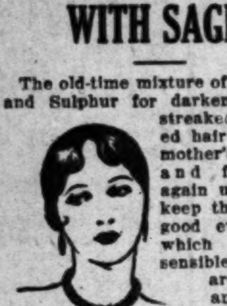
A contract will be entered into soon between the county and city for the carrying out of the terms of the new ordinance.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

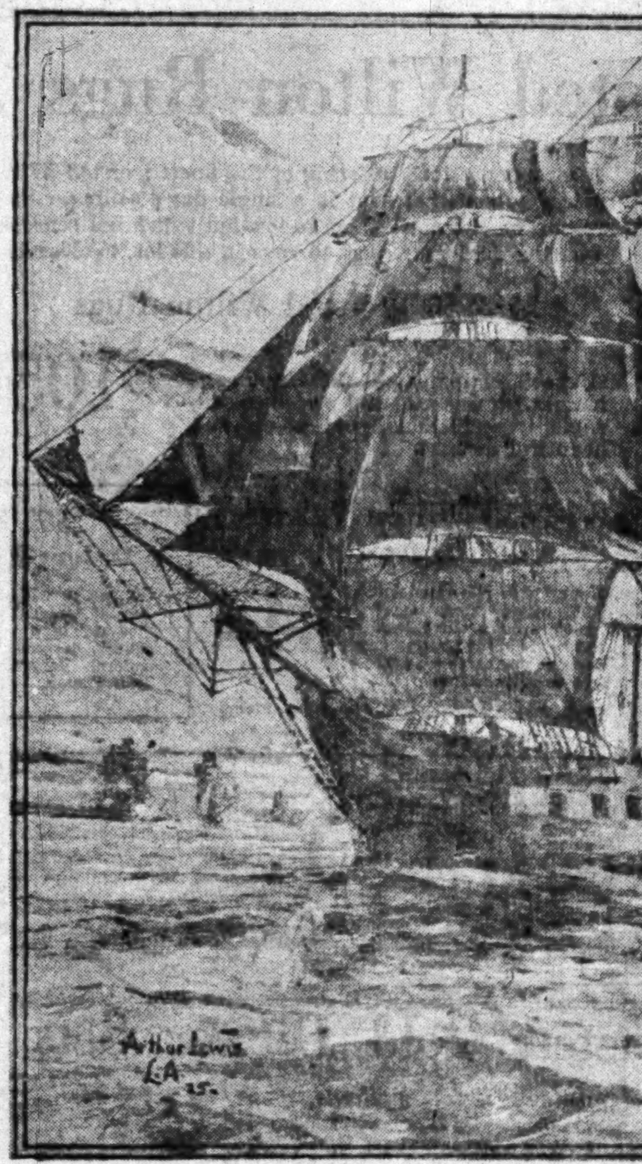
The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product for only 75 cents. It is improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.—[Advertisement]



'OLD IRONSIDES' PRESERVED ON CANVAS

Los Angeles Artist Paints Historic Frigate



"Constitution," by Arthur Lewis

A DRAMATIC incident in the glorious record of the U.S.S. Constitution (Old Ironsides) is depicted in a painting just completed by Arthur Lewis, an artist with a studio in the Southwest Building, 130 South Broadway.

Mr. Lewis plans to submit the painting to the local committee, which will supervise the collection of the Los Angeles quota of a fund for the restoration of the mighty fighting vessel, now lying, dismasted, with a penthouse over her battle-chipped deck, at a dock in Charleston navy yard, Boston.

The picture represents the Constitution, under a cloud of sail, drawing away from a British squadron off the Jersey coast during the War of 1812. The scene is just at sunset, with the British engaged in a stern chase. The Constitution has every square inch of canvas flung out to catch the light breeze. At dusk the longboats were manned by the crew and the frigate towed out of range. During the night a wind sprung up, and at daylight the British futilely scanned the sea, for the superior sailing powers of the Constitution enabled her to flee from sight.

The Constitution was withdrawn from the active list a century ago, and she has been renovated several times. At present only the staunch old hull, so constructed that it withstood the cannon balls and gained the nickname of "Old Ironsides," remains.

The fact that she stands supreme in the history of American naval vessels caused the inauguration last year of a campaign to preserve her for future generations. It was decided to raise a fund of $500,000 from the school children of the nation, and the 1400 Elks' lodges offered to conduct the campaign.

The local committee is headed by Leroy Dawson. He said yesterday that plans for the campaign in Los Angeles will be announced soon. The offer made by Mr. Lewis, he said, would be accepted.

The ship was built in Boston from the plans of Joshua Humphreys, a Philadelphia naval architect, who designed the vessel and her sister ships in 1794. The construction involved several new features which enabled her to outsail and outmaneuver her English opponents, but the superior seamanship and fighting qualities of her commanders, notably Isaac Hull, contributed to her fame. Her most noted exploit was a ninety-minute duel with the British Guerriere, a battle in which she practically sailed rings around the Britisher and smashed her with the fifty-four thirty-two-pounders. Other famous battles were the defeat of the Java and the victory over the Levant and the Cyane.

Great Britain preserves Admiral Nelson's flagship, the Victory, and it is the hope of many that the same service will be rendered by America to the Constitution.

Mr. Lewis formerly was a Times artist, and prior to that was on the staff of the magazine, Life.

"PATSY" STARS LEAVE EAST

Composer and Footlight Celebrities on Way West for World Premiere of Comedy Here

With well-known Manhattan players and directors who are to feature in the world premiere of "Patsy," the Los Angeles-sponsored musical comedy, at the Mason early in March, under contract to Patsy Productions, Inc., I. B. Kornblum, who wrote the music for the show and has been active in its organization, left New York for Los Angeles yesterday.

Kornblum and the Gotham footlight celebrities left in a special car attached to the second section of the Twentieth Century Limited, and tonight the car will be cut into the California Limited for Los Angeles. The delegation will arrive here Wednesday.

Heading the party are Dave Bennett, who will direct the dances and ensembles; Bertram Harrison, directing the book, written by E. Magnus Ingleton; Lou Holtz, leading comedian; Clifford Grey, who is scheduled as collaborator for the comedy; Gerald Oliver Smith and Allan Edwards, who will play the masculine lead.

STAR'S NAME SECRET

Kornblum, according to wires to Arthur I. Rouda and Harry D. Rouda, general manager and assistant general manager, respectively, will also bring a New York star to play the title role of Patsy, but her identity is being kept as a surprise until her arrival here.

Those who have read "Patsy" are enthusiastic over the book and lyrics as written by Mrs. Ingleton, and the music of Composer Kornblum. Mrs. Ingleton has known the world of the stage all her life, as she started her career before the footlights at the age of 9 years in her native England. While laboring under the proscenium arch, she began to write at an early age, and at 19 she had won fame as the producer of one of the best sellers of the year. She is internationally known as the author of "The Willow Pattern Plate," a Chinese opera; "The Syrens," a musical fantasy, and many other productions.

After footlight and authorship successes in London, she came to New York in 1913, with the company producing "Bunty Pulls the Strings," in which she played for two years in the Comedy Theater in that city. The films were then in their beginnings and she was persuaded to take over the scenario department of the World Film Corporation by William A. Brady, who with the Shuberts, had brought her company to America.

CAME TO CALIFORNIA

As the head of the department she personally prepared the first stories for Clara Kimball Young, Holbrook Blinn, Kitty Gordon and others, the productions for which were directed by Maurice Tourneur, Rex Ingram and others equally well known. She came to California after two years in the East and took over direction of the scenario department for Universal. Later she headed the scenario department for Thomas H. Ince, where she wrote and adapted "Below the Surface" for Hobart Bosworth, and all the Dorothy Dalton features.

Although she came to California on a six months' contract, Mrs. Ingleton states she found it so to her liking that she has remained ever since, despite attractive offers to go elsewhere. By reason of its natural climatic advantages, Mrs. Ingleton states her belief Los Angeles is destined to become a producing center for musical comedies rivaled only by New York City.

Famous Indian Chief

Red Cloud was the principal chief of the Ogalala Teton Sioux of Pine Ridge Reservation, the largest band of the Sioux nation, and probably the most famous and powerful chief in the history of the Platte River, Neb., in 1822, and died at Pine Ridge on December 10, 1909.—[Exchange.

ACTRESS DISCARDS NATIONAL APPAREL

Dolores del Rio

Dolores del Rio is becoming Americanized.

Priceless shawls, old Spanish heirloom combs and mantillas—all of these articles brought from Mexico City by her on her advent into filmland—have been discarded and have found a resting place in her trunks.

In their place comes the typical garb of the American girl and Dolores is pleased with it—very much so.

Her forthcoming film, "Heirs Apparent," which Edwin Carewe is directing, will find Dolores wearing the richest type in milady's apparel. And each garment, each gown and wrap will be of American design.

This view shows Senora del Rio in a new creation of white chiffon with a parasol trimmed with white ostrich plumes. Note the length of the skirt. Dolores says the long skirt is always appropriate. It certainly looks good to the eye in this picture of the Mexican actress.

STARS TO ATTEND RADIO BALL

Huge Celebration Will be Staged

Carolyn La Fevre, One of KHJ's Favorites, to Appear

RADIO enthusiasts of the Southwest are to be given a rare opportunity of seeing in person the stars of the air when they appear the night of the 26th inst. in the huge El Patio Ballroom, Third and Vermont, to join in the unique radio ball to be staged under the joint auspices of all the broadcasters of Southern California. Scores of the noted artists of the studios are to make personal appearances before the thousands of participants.

The massive celebration is now being completed under the direction of joint committees, with all the revenue devoted to the furtherance of broadcasting here in the Southwest and as a means of guiding protective legislation at Washington, especially the proposed adjustment of the demands made by the Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers under the present arbitrary copyright laws. Broadcasters have already given $4500 themselves for this work at Washington, and are giving the public the opportunity of aiding by taking part in the elaborate ball, the first of its kind in the history of the district.

The great dancing pavilion of El Patio will be appropriately decorated for the occasion, with accommodations for practically 10,000 persons to dance comfortably. All of the widely known announcers of the different stations are to appear on the platforms, which will be filled with the popular orchestras heard over the air from all the studios in addition to the scores of individual artists who will take part. A special vaudeville show is to be given in the middle of the evening, and again at midnight, with a host of other entertainment features. Numerous gate prizes are being arranged

Certain assurance of the outstanding success of the occasion is given by the enthusiasm which has greeted the early announcements. Studios of all the broadcasters will vie in friendly competition to entertain the throngs with specialties. Tickets are available through radio dealers and allied firms, with the Radio Trades Association lending its strong assistance to the project.

Radio's Service in Agriculture Expert's Theme

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The growing importance of radio as a factor in the future of American agriculture, emphasized by A. Atwater Kent, at the recent National Radio Conference here, is given recognition by the United States Department of Agriculture in steps now being taken to extend and improve radio service for the farmer.

Under orders of Secretary Jardine, an expert has been named to take over control of the department's radio activities, heretofore divided, and to undertake a definite, systematic development of radio service touching agriculture.

This work will not be confined to channels directly under Federal control. It will seek the co-operation of State and local agencies, both public and private, in carrying the largest possible measure of pleasure and profit into the homes of America's farm families.

Secretary Jardine himself sees the farm as the field of radio's greatest contribution to civilization. While still president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, he was instrumental in using radio, for the first time, in broadcasting the agricultural extension work of that institution.

"Radio," says Secretary Jardine, "is already a vital factor in the economic and intellectual life of the farmer. The part it will exert in the future is beyond calculation. It is easy to foresee millions of dollars added to the value of agriculture through the employment of methods imparted by radio instruction."

Amateurs Aid by Sending Season's Greetings on Air

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

HALIFAX (N. S.) Jan. 16.—A large part of the population of this community was enabled during the recent Christmas holidays to send the season's greetings to friends in all parts of the world through the medium of local member stations of the American Radio Relay League.

One of the large theaters in this city made provisions for receiving messages from all of its patrons throughout the week preceding Christmas. Free service was given on all of these messages by amateur radio stations in Halifax and vicinity. These stations through their membership in the American Radio Relay League and connection with radio amateurs the world over, were enabled to transmit all of the greetings to fellow-amateurs with stations near the people to whom these messages were addressed.

An interesting phase of this effort was the understanding of a number of broadcast listeners, that it would be necessary for the recipients of messages to have receiving sets within their own homes. League members in charge of the work cleared up this misunderstanding by pointing out that amateur message work was telegraphic and was carried on on a wave length that could not be received on the average broadcast receiving set.

GIVEN BASIC PATENT ON TELEPHONE LINES

A. E. Ravenscroft of Kierulff & Ravenscroft, has recently been granted valuable basic patents on a reel used in telephone and power-line construction which will prove a valuable adjunct to their pole-line equipment department.

The resumption of extension programs by the utility companies in California has multiplied the business of Kierulff & Ravenscroft in that department, already a prosperous one, and the demand for these reels, which are manufactured in Los Angeles and sold all over the country, is assuming large proportions.

PUBLIC BUYING STANDARD SETS

Buyers Already Educated on Sound Values

Shows Prove Intelligent View of Prospects

Cheap Constructions Are Losing Favor

America is "radio-wise." The public has become educated. In a brief span of years, from the inauguration of broadcasting to the development of the radio industry into a $500,000,000-a-year giant, millions of people at first knowing nothing whatsoever about the science and principles of wireless communication, or about the products used in this service, have learned much.

Americans are all "from Missouri"—and once "shown" they are not lured by pretensions, misrepresentations, or the like. That is why the radio industry has made splendid strides toward stabilization. That is why definite leaders in the field of manufacturing have been recognized already. Likewise, it holds true that it is because the public has become acquainted with the facts, that the era of nondescript apparatus, just made to be sold, has passed and that fly-by-night firms cannot hope to get much share of the immense business that is being done and will be carried on.

The Chicago Radio Show revealed this attitude on the part of the public. More than 150,000 visitors passed through the gates, and they made it clear that they were tired of misleading advertisements and "gyp" dealers and—by bitter experience, many of them—they knew where to look for additional proper information to guide them in their choice of receivers and accessories.

Judging from what these visitors said—and also the dealers from the Middle West, who were there—public opinion has settled firmly behind a small number of sets for which no extravagant boasts have ever been made but which have produced results that if heralded would put to shame the "records" supposedly created by apparatus which is slowly but gradually being removed from the market.

It is the old story of the survival of the fittest, as far as the radio industry is concerned, but the situation is quite a revelation of the public's ability, under proper facts and experience, to judge accurately as to the quality of merchandise required for their everyday convenience. Radio was a strange topic indeed four years ago. Now the average man and woman is familiar with broadcast programs and beyond that knows the names of the leading receivers, the same as the best-known automobiles are recognized.

The people realize, in general, just what a good set is capable of, under proper installation, maintenance and operation. They know that atmospheric conditions and many other factors enter into loud speaker reception of stations 1000 miles or more off—and that the manufacturer who advertises that his sets at all times and under every condition can bring in fifty stations a night, "from coast to coast," is just spoofing. Firms making the sets which achieve really marvelous results, under favorable environment, do not advertise in this manner, simply guaranteeing satisfaction and letting the thrills come in due season, as the owners of their sets tune in.

The public may now make a safe prediction regarding the manufacturers who are in business to stay, who have invested immense sums in plants and advertising, who are devoting days and nights to research and who are incorporating in their products no devices with fancy names but equipping them with the parts and methods that have been tested by time.

Liquid Used in Device to Help Banish Static

Since the dawn of radio science has endeavored to find a means of overcoming static. Practically everything that seems plausible has been tried. Still we have static with us. However, in recent weeks a device has been developed that reduces static to a minimum, to a point where in most instances it is no longer bothersome, it is claimed.

It is known as the Wilson Static Eliminator and operates on the principle of passage of the radio energy received through the aerial through a liquid that clarifies the sound and eliminates most of the static. With this device it is possible to operate 400 feet of antenna with the same efficiency as fifty feet or less. It clears up the cracking and popping heard on distant stations so that the station may be heard more clearly. Stations whose call letters could not be understood because of the noise are brought in clearly with this device.

This eliminator does not decrease the volume of broadcast music or speech to any extent. It has the effect of improving the selectivity to some extent. The eliminator is small, has but one control, a plunger, is easily attached to any set and sells at a nominal price. It is manufactured by the Wilson Static Eliminator Co., Ninety-fifth and Budlong, Los Angeles.

Coloring Lobsters

Lobsters may be colored to any hue desired to suit the particular scheme of dinner decoration simply by putting coloring matter in their food, according to a well-known German scientist. He discovered that they turn red after they are boiled because of the action of the heat upon a chemical in their shells.—[Popular Mechanics Magazine.

ROLLER CANARIES EXHIBITED

Tiny Songsters Vie for Trophies

Insert of Louise M. Blakely, President of Association

THE most melodious spot in Los Angeles is the music room of the Biltmore, where several hundred roller canaries, the aristocrats of featherdom, are assembled for the second annual roller canary show and singing contest, which opened to the public yesterday afternoon and will close this evening. From all over the State have come these songsters, and from outside the State; while four contestants have journeyed all the way from Germany to compete for honors.

Uncle John formally opened the exhibition last evening, assisted by Uncle Remus, Queen Titania of radio fairies, the Sandman and other members of KHJ studio. The children's hour from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. preceded the formal opening, and before that hour had arrived the music room was crowded and many had to be turned away.

The entire program, including the bird symphony, was broadcast through KHJ's remote control system. It was KHJ that first blazed the trail of broadcasting the song of birds and looks upon it as one of the fine achievements in the field of wireless telephony. It is for this reason that the KHJ studio birds are the honor guests of their kind at the show, and together with the favorite pet of Queen Titania, known as Silver Throat, occupy a special platform. In their midst stands the handsome perpetual trophy cup donated by The Times in honor of little Kindness, Happiness and Joy, the birds that have sung their way into the hearts of all Radioland. They are on exhibition only, not having been entered in the song contest.

The breeding and training of roller canaries is a science and an art, in connection with which there is, to the uninitiated, a language that seems full of technicalities. They are bred wholly for song, and an insignificant appearing bird may score the highest number of points wholly on his musical artistry. Peter Greenall, an English authority on the song of the roller canary, is here from Vancouver as official judge of the entries. To lend importance to the occasion there is an imposing array of ribbons, silver loving cups and other articles, and these will be awarded this evening to the winning birds.

The special feature of the exhibition is a little yellow canary by the name of Yankee who has been trained to whistle the entire tune of Yankee Doodle. His cage stands in an elaborate special setting with Old Glory floating over it. Promptly on the hour the doors of his tiny cage are opened and his mistress, Mrs. F. D. O'Brien, speaks gently to him, whereupon he promptly whistles the air as perfectly as any human being can do, to the amazement and delight of his audience. Yankee will be broadcast this evening from KHJ studio.

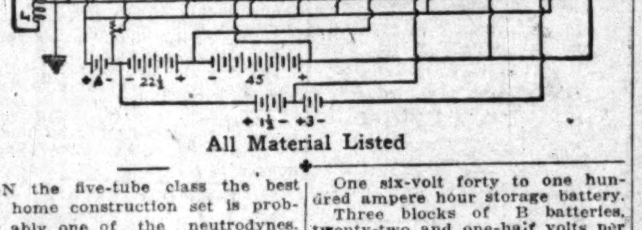
There are other features at the exhibition among which are several roller canaries of unusual plumage, from Cassel, Germany, which were brought to Los Angeles especially for the show. Four little songsters have come from the Little Church of the Flowers to impart their mission of peace and joy.

The "bird orchestra" will be broadcast from the Biltmore several times today, beginning at 10:30 a.m. to be followed by a special organ recital on bird themes, arranged and to be played by Mr. Arthur Blakeley and broadcast from the Methodist Episcopal Church through KHJ remote control. This special program will include the "Nightingale Chorus" (Solomon's Lullaby) by Handel; the "Cuckoo" by Lemare; "Woodland Echoes After the Storm" and "The Meadow Lark," both compositions of Mr. Blakeley; "O, That I Had Wings," by Mendelssohn; "Songs of Gladness" (hymn), and "The Nightingale and the Rose" by Saint-Saens. At the conclusion of the church service the birds will again be on the air and a few minutes again at 4 p.m. and from 5 to 5:30. Two tenor solos by William Steffen, "Trees" and "Four Leaf Clover," followed by a brief talk by Detective Nicholas B. Harris. Mr. Harris is an ardent bird lover and a great believer in the ameliorating effect of birds with respect to crime.

Letters received from fans all over Great Britain show that London programs are preferred to those of any other British station. Country fans are unanimously of the opinion that 2LO is better than their local stations.

HOME-BUILT 5-TUBE RECEIVER

Neutrodyne Type is Best Set



All Material Listed

IN the five-tube class the best home construction set is probably one of the neutrodynes. These sets are available in knockdown form, complete and ready to assemble, or the purchaser can buy the neutroformers (coils) and the neutrodons (neutralizing condensers) as a unit and purchase the rest of the apparatus separately.

You will need the following material:

Five standard tube sockets.
Five UV201-A or C301-A tubes.
One ten-ohm rheostat.
Two two-circuit jacks.
One open-circuit jack.
Three neutroformers.
Three .0005 mfd. variable condensers.
Two midget neutralizing condensers having a maximum capacity of about .00005 mfd.
One grid condenser of .00025 mfd. capacity.
One two-to-ten megohm grid leak for same.
One .002 md. by-pass condenser.
Two audio frequency transformers of the low turns-ratio type.
One six-volt forty to one hundred ampere hour storage battery.
Three blocks of B batteries, twenty-two and one-half volts per block.
One four and one-half volt C battery, tapped at one and one-half volts.

In addition to the above, and in addition to the list of material given in connection with the sets described for the past five days the following materials are required: One panel, baseboard, seven inches wide and an inch and a half shorter than the panel; about twenty feet of No. 14 square or round buswire, miscellaneous wood screws to hold transformers and sockets to the baseboard, machine screws (usually supplied with apparatus) to bolt condensers and rheostats to panel, cabinet; antenna wire (about 150 feet of Nos. 12 or 14 single strand enamel copper wire;) a ground clamp and sufficient antenna wire to run from the set to the ground; an A battery charger, preferably of the tube type; a hydrometer, ten feet of No. 18 paired lamp cord to connect the batteries to the set, a lightning arrester and a headset or loud speaker.

Dealers Show Custom Built Radio Outfits

"Engineering, science and art have at last joined hands in building what may aptly be termed a custom built radio receiver," according to Mr. Braden of the Fitzgerald Music Company, who has placed on exhibition the latest design of the DeForest Radio Company. The new set is known as the hand-carved, self-contained DeForest W6-F, capable of reproducing the finest quality and greatest tonal range in operatic, orchestral and voice broadcasting.

The new Renaissance model, according to the DeForest engineers, "is not just another radio set, but truly a revelation. Not something mechanical, rugged and ugly, but a finished product artistically superb in beauty and electrically and mechanically perfect. Harmonious symmetry of design is moulded into this masterpiece from the massive scroll design of the grill reproducer to the tuning control knobs on the cabinet. Actually a custom built receiver, hand-built throughout. Appealing in its splendor, of course, but also in its compactness.

"The DeForest company in producing this model have incorporated into its design all that is possible from an engineering as well as an artistic point of view. The W-6 is a highly selective, sharp-tuning radiophone of unusual sensitiveness, yet very easily controlled. The owner of this receiver can expect of it truthful reproduction over the entire musical range."

When using battery chargers it is absolutely necessary to connect the positive terminal of the charger to the positive terminal of the battery.

Gas Flame Led to Invention of First Radio Tube

"Twenty years old in 1926" says the birthday book of science in noting the invention of the now famous, the long unrecognized, audion tube, which Lee DeForest christened the "audion," and which, in these intervening years, has made possible a startling series of events in the way of human progress—the radio telephone, transcontinental telephony, world-wide radio telegraphy reception, the transmission of voice and music from broadcasting stations, multiplex telegraphy, or "wired wireless," the transmission of pictures by wire, talking motion pictures, a revolution in the art of the phonograph, and many other marvels too numerous to mention.

"The real story of the audion," says J. T. Fitzgerald, of the Fitzgerald Music Company, local dealers, "goes back to September, 1900, when DeForest worked for the Western Electric Company in Chicago, at a salary of $8 a week, doing French translation at night for the Western Electrician, and three nights a week teaching classes in mathematics at the Lewis Institute. An accidental observation of the fluttering gas flame above his little study table in his $2 per week room gave him the idea that heated gas around incandescent gas mantel or incandescent lamp filament could be made sensitive to hertzian waves, and thus provide a detector more sensitive than anything conceived of, employing solid or liquid media."

The Royal Bird of the Thames

The swan was brought to England about the time of Richard Coeur de Lion and was regarded as a rare and precious bird. It was used much at royal feasts and acquired a reputation for delicacy which modern cooks have not maintained. At the present time the Thames has about 600 swans, of which half belong to the Crown and half are divided between the Vintners' and Dyers' Companies. In former times the numbers were much greater, for the Vintners' alone possessed 500 birds. But in the last century the swans have thriven. There were only 437 in 1841, against the 600 now.

Wood Shingles Barred

It is entirely probable that the use of wooden shingles for roofing will be prohibited by the building laws of New York City. Such a measure has been introduced into the municipal council and has been aproved by the proper officials and also indorsed by several organizations representing different branches of the building trades. The proposed regulation not only prohibits the use of wooden shingles for roofing, but also provides that all existing shingle roofs shall be replaced by some noninflammable material within ten years.

Electric Work in Africa

The largest automatically equipped railroad electrification in the world has been installed on the Natal main line of the South African Railways. The road experienced such an increase in business that extensions of facilities became imperative. There was a choice between double-tracking or electrification, and the engineers decided to electrify for a distance of 171 miles, between Glencoe Junction and Pietermaritzburg. This is the first railway electrification in South Africa and is being followed by the electrification of the Capetown suburban lines.

PHILOSOPHER'S STONE THEORY MAY BE RIGHT

The ancient alchemists thought there was a substance that would convert all baser metals into gold. This substance went by the name of the philosopher's stone, although it generally took the form of a powder or amalgam, which was meant to drive out the impurities of the baser metals and leave them in the form of pure gold.

For ages this so-called delusion persisted and the old alchemists spent many hours over their crucibles in a vain search. It was not really fruitless, however, for the search for one thing led to the discovery of many other things.

It was in searching for this illusive treasure that Bottcher stumbled on the invention of Dresden porcelain, Roger Bacon on the composition of gunpowder, Gebar on the properties of acids, Van Helmont on the nature of gases and Dr. Glauber on the famous "salts" that bears his name to this day. The search for a method of transmuting metals to gold, in fact, laid the foundation of modern chemistry and metallurgy.

With the discovery of radium and radio-activity, however, began a new scientific era which has made some of the dreams of the old alchemists appear more reasonable, for it visualizes the time when all substances may be proved to be but manifestations of one elemental substance. Now a claim has been made by a group of French scientists that the feat of transmuting silver into gold has been actually accomplished.

The recipe is quite straightforward. There is no magic in it. The ingredients, too, are simple. One hundred and twenty-five parts of chemically pure silver are melted in a clean crucible. To this is added seven parts of yellow orpiment (arsenic trisulphide) and three parts of antimony sulphide. This is fused together for about four hours at 1000 deg. of centigrade, and the result is a yellowish ingot.

This ingot is melted again and ten parts of orpiment and five of antimony are added, little by little, to the "stew," which is kept at the same temperature as before another four hours.

Then comes the last process of fluxing the ingot. Ten parts of saltpetre, and the same amounts of salammoniac and borax mixed with a paste of scraped white soap are added to the "pot." This cleans the molten metal, which again changes color from gold to white. It is then poured out and cooled.

The investigators claim that the mass now consists of silver with an alloy of gold, the latter amounting to no more than one-quarter per cent of the silver employed. It is said that the result has been tested and found invariable by many competent chemists, including qualified chemical engineers, and in view of the amazing developments of late years in the realm of chemistry the most conservative men of science are loth to deny this new one.

Indeed, quite recently, Dr. Miethe of Berlin transmuted mercury into gold in a mercury vapor lamp, and we know that diamonds of minute size were produced in a laboratory years ago.

These experiments may be the prelude to a discovery that would knock the "gold standard" all awry, and, possibly, the bottom out of international exchange.—Vancouver Province.

FLY-FISHERMAN'S CREDO

The confirmed fly-fisherman listens to the wondrous tales of 400-pound swordfish and 300-pound mako sharks with polite attention but without envy; and gives credence, according to the moral character of the tellers of the tales.

But for him (this mild, though incurable, type of anglimaniac) no fishes seem truly worthy and desirable unless they may be taken with the artificial fly. It is an irrational prejudice, an artistic bigotry, a fantastic fad, a harmless hobby—call it what you will. But the man who is afflicted with it cannot shake it off, even if he would. He does not defend it with shrewd arguments such as the superior skill required to cast the feathered lure afar upon the waters, the joy of seeing the fish rise to take the fly, the swift, nervous reaction needed to connect the thrill of that vision with the automatic strike of the wrist which hooks the fish, the delicacy of the tackle suited to this sport, and the consequent difficulty of playing and landing the fish.

All such reasons for his preference he could well adduce. But to what purpose? They might not convince, they might even annoy, fundamental addicts of the worm, the live bait, and the troll. So he keeps his own counsel and remains rooted in his belief that fly-fishing is the "top-hole" form of angling.—[Henry Van Dyke in January Scribner's Magazine.

WEAVERS WHO GROW WOOL

A little Sussex community which breeds its own sheep, washes, shears, spins, dyes and weaves the wool, was represented at the Englishwoman Arts and Crafts Exhibition, which opened recently in London.

Another ancient art which has been revived is that of wax portraiture. Society, having tired of conventional camera portraits, of paintings, and even of sculpture, has now turned to miniature portraits in colored wax.

Perhaps the newest art in the exhibition is that of taking twisted heather roots which grew on Serpentine rock in Cornwall, and making them into all kinds of attractive fairylike conceits.—[Vancouver Province.

Locke Gives the Key

W. J. Locke: "Thousands of women maintain the happiness of married life by dint of viewing their husbands through the God-given prism of a sense of humor. But they have to be married first before God gives it them. Wanted to Know

Six-year-old Edward, writing to Santa Claus to tell him what would be appreciated as gifts by him and his smaller brother, was puzzled as to how he should sign the letter. He turned to his mother and inquired: "Shall I say 'From your loving little friend, Eddie?' or shall I say, 'Amen,' as I do to God?"—[Boston Transcript.

WEALTH OF RED CEDAR IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Few, if any, of the residents of British Columbia have failed to notice, at some time or other, the graceful foliage of our most valuable and romantic tree—the red cedar. The uses to which this desirable and pleasantly scented wood has been put would fill a volume.

Even before the days of the white settler in Canada, the Indian tribes found this wood invaluable for their "dug-outs," paddles and a hundred different articles, whilst later their white brothers made heavy inroads on the monarchs of the forest for their supply of split cedar for fences, shakes, posts and articles of every description. Lately, however, with the reaching of the telegraph and telephone line to every hole and corner settlement, the "baby" or second growth cedar has been in ever-increasing demand for "poles."

Where steel posts are too cumbersome and costly for this vastly important industry, the cedar pole has been found ideal, and is universally in demand throughout the continent.

Many thousands are employed annually, cutting poles by hand in the forests of British Columbia, and many thousands are shipped to the eastern provinces and the United States annually.

The manufacture of the "cedar pole" is very simple and it is done entirely by hand. In the summer months, when the "peeling" is good, a standing green tree can be changed into a graceful clean pole in a remarkably short time. Very few districts of British Columbia are without their pole camps, these camps generally being run by subcontractors. From the Kamloops, Fraser Valley, North Thompson and the Skeena districts, shipments are by rail, whilst from the coast they are dispatched to their loading point by raft and boom.

One of the busiest districts in this respect is the Skeena River district—from Prince Rupert to Smithers. Olaf Hansen, known from Prince Rupert to Fort George as the pioneer of the pole industry of the North, and the Skeena River, treacherous and uncertain in the season of melting snows, takes us back through canyon and rapids, to be harvested at the main boom at Cedarville. These poles, ranging chiefly from twenty-five feet to sixty feet in length, are collected at this point by the boom men, and the manner in which some of them "ride" these small seven-inch top poles would have put De Rougemont of magazine fame out of business as a log "roller!" The cedar poles, after being cut, are taken to their nearest shipping point by the quickest and easiest method.

Many and varied are these methods; the old farm horse team of the settler, putting out a few poles daily, while the gasoline "donkey" of the larger concerns—a very economical and effective power in this particular work—is extremely popular. On the steep hillsides a "chute" has been used with great results. This is simply and easily made, consisting of two side logs and a floor of smaller skinned poles. The cedar poles are skidded to the mouth of these "chutes" and in a few seconds are shot into the river or bay, whither their destination may be, after a lightning run of several thousand feet.

Those shipped from the interior are loaded on "flats" or cars adapted to this particular class of freight. The loading is done by a "crane" when available, but in the out-of-the-way districts, by a gin-pole or "jammer" with blocks and cable and team. The "man on the spot" at the loading point is the pole inspector—a man viewed with awe and respect and sometimes no little ire by the shippers, as his task is to "will" any poles with defects; this process being costly to the maker. A fine-looking, clean, graceful pole to the unskilled eye will often contain several defects, important enough to make the difference of a nice profit or a total loss to the owner. Defects are many and varied—"worms," "cut faces," sweeps, butt rot and saw not being a few of the most common, though the "worm," common in the south is almost a complete stranger in the north.—[E. W. Baker in Vancouver Province.

ELEVEN COMETS WERE DISCOVERED IN 1925

The eleventh comet of 1925 recently was picked up by G. E. Ensor, an amateur astronomer, at the Cape of Good Hope, where a southern branch of the British Royal Observatory is maintained. It is now in the constellation of Reticulum, the net, and is moving northeast into the neighboring constellation of Horologium, the clock, according to Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard College Observatory. Both of these constellations are far south of the equator and can only be seen easily from southern latitudes. Its motion, however, may bring it into view in the Southern United States, and as it is now of the eighth magnitude, it could be seen with small telescopes.

With eleven comets discovered, some of which were new, while others were old friends returning for one of their periodic visits, 1925 will go down in history as one of the most prolific years for comets on record. The nearest approach in recent years to this record was in 1921, during which seven were found, but two of these were doubtful objects, whose cometary nature was not fully established. All found so far this year with the exception of the last one, have been observed by many astronomers, and their orbits have been accurately computed. Doubtless other southern observatories will make observations of the new visitor, and as soon as its position at three different times is found, its path can be calculated.

This is the second comet to be discovered in South Africa in 1925, for on March 24, William Reid, an amateur astronomer living near Capetown, discovered a comet which now bears his name. Another South African of the year was the star in the constellation by R. Watson, astronomer and a ator by profession, a strange star in when he was returning his work in the Two other of the were found by American George Van Biesbroeck Yerkes Observatory and Peltier, an amateur while two others were Russia.

VALLEY AWAITS EXPOSITION

Construction of Setting For Ten-Day California Fruit Show Complete Tomorrow

In anticipation of the opening of the California fruit exposition at Valley Boulevard and Garfield avenue in Alhambra next week, a fiesta atmosphere has become evident throughout the San Gabriel Valley during the past few days. Old and beautiful Spanish costumes are being brought forth from cedar chests to be worn by hundreds of girls of the Alhambra and San Gabriel section, for the prevailing atmosphere of the exposition is to be Spanish-Moorish, it was stated yesterday by Fred M. Renfro, general manager of the show.

"The California fruit exposition not only will comprise the largest and most comprehensive display of all fruits grown in California and the biggest and most beautiful midwinter flower show ever held in Southern California, but from the standpoint of elaborate architectural and decorative detail, will be one of the most colorful and spectacular shows of the kind ever held in the Southland," said Renfro.

SETTING BEAUTIFUL

"The impressive main entrance, 160 feet in width, and with a main gateway thirty-five feet high, is typically Moorish in architecture with a color plan of red, blue and gold, following faithfully the detail of the famous old Palace of the Alhambra of Granada, Spain. Varicolored concealed lights of ever-changing hues will at night create differing color effects that will delight the eye. The entrance on either side is flanked by long colonnades of Moorish arches, above which are towers and minarets, gay with pennants and banners, while from the balconies facing on the outer court of the entrance visitors will be serenaded by troubadors and singing girls. In the center of the court will be a huge incense cauldron, the ascending smoke from which will be thrown into changing shades of color by indirect illumination. A battery of powerful searchlights will pierce the darkness above the exposition at night with rays of amber, old rose and green, which will be visible for miles.

COMPLETE CONSTRUCTION

"The fruit exhibits department, to which entrance is gained from the main gateway through a conventionalized replica of the court of the Myrtles of the Old Alhambra, will present a bewilderingly beautiful appearance. Extending entirely around the pavilion, which is 250 feet in length, and 130 feet wide, will be Moorish arches of great beauty, through which the mammoth displays of quality fruit will be seen. As a background for the fruit exhibits will be a panoramic oil painting of California's mountain, valley and seacoast scenic attractions that includes many of the famous points of interest from Glacier Lake in the north to Imperial Valley in the south.

"Construction work on the exposition, which will be housed under five acres of canvas, will be completed tomorrow. Practically all of the exhibit space in the various departments has been taken. We expect to have an attendance of 250,000 people during the ten days of the exposition, which will be open from the 21st to the 31st insts., opening next Thursday evening."

Happy Endings Win

Patrons of motion pictures in Australia greatly prefer American films to the home product. The happy ending seems to get the money all the world around. Though the unhappy ending may be logical and artistic, most human beings seeking in places of amusement a refuge from the harsh realities of every-day do not care for them.—[Exchange.

FAMILIAR NICKNAME BAFFLES HISTORIANS

"Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" Laid by Some to Cartoon

The origin of "The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," the nickname of the Bank of England, never has been definitely established, but "the London Economist" traces the appellation back as far as May 22, 1797, when William Pitt induced Parliament to suspend cash payments at the bank.

This moved Gilray to draw his famous cartoon, which shows an old lady, seated on a chest labeled "Bank of England," being savagely attacked by Pitt. The drawing was published on May 22, 1797, with the caption: "Political Ravishment, or the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street in Danger."

But, it is argued, Gilray may have made use of an old idea. As early as 1695, a medallion appeared, and still appears, on the bank's notes. It consists of a seated, draped figure, with the head uncovered, holding a sprig in one hand and a spear in the other, and throughout more than 200 years it has remained substantially the same.

"In this medallion," says a writer in a recent number of the bank's staff magazine, "if only by reason of the extraordinary persistence of the essential details, we have a perfectly reasonable explanation of the origin of the phrase, 'The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street.'"

Moreover, he adds that it is not unlikely that the medallion was the bank's sign when signs were universally used, and that in the archives there are old letters addressed to the bank "at ye sign of the (Old) Lady in Threadneedle (or Threeneedle) Street." On the whole, the medallion provides the most acceptable explanation of the origin of the familiar phrase so often attributed to Cobbet.

So prolific in new departments has the "Old Lady" become under the stress of new functions forced upon her by war and post-war financial developments that her children became too numerous to be housed under the roof of the old name. Now the famous premises are being rebuilt in magnificent fashion to provide all necessary accommodation. When the new imposing structure has arisen, may we not expect the old name to give way to a new one—perhaps "The Belle of Threadneedle Street?"

CAN'T FEED HONEY BEES OATS

SCIENTISTS HAVE NOT YET LEARNED FOOD CHEMISTRY OF THE INSECTS

There may be some substitute foods that are "just as good" as pollen for baby bees to grow on, but the bee culturists cannot seem to locate them. Attempts to vary the honey bees' diet by oats, corn, wheat and other things were reported by Ralph L. Parker, apiarist of the Kansas State agricultural college, at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here recently. But larvae in the bee nurseries that were fed on the unaccustomed rations died.

Food chemistry of the bee world was not yet understood thoroughly, Mr. Parker told the zoologists. The bees are able to digest and use certain proteins found in pollen, but as yet these proteins are not identified.

"Beekeepers in regions where there is likely to be a shortage of pollen in the brood-rearing season should preserve combs of pollen for use at such times, since they cannot depend on the use of the substitutes here studied," he said.—[Kansas City Star.

MINNIE FLYNN

by FRANCES MARION

THE CAST

MINNIE FLYNN, 18 years of age, petite, red-haired and pretty shop-girl product of New York's Ninth avenue; carefree, not quite heartwhole, victim of all the romance and glamour of youth.

ELSIE BICKERS, a fellow-worker in the Fashion Department Store; scrawny and sickly and homely, a yearner for good times and men.

"MA" FLYNN, Minnie's mother, the result of a poverty-stricken marriage.

MICHAEL FLYNN, Minnie's father, a nondescript plumber, who loves his family and his work, but knows neither.

NETTIE FLYNN, Minnie's sister; a bulk of blowsy femininity.

PETE FLYNN, eldest son; just a bully and a bum.

JIMMY FLYNN, the other son; a male edition of Minnie.

BILLY MacNALLY, Minnie's butcher-boy sweetheart; just what he sounds like.

Minnie Flynn, pretty and 18, meets Al Kessler, movie actor at a dance. He persuades her to break into the movies. Billy MacNally, Minnie's butcher boy sweetheart, protests, but her father and mother, Michael and Annie Flynn, her two brothers, Pete and Jimmy, and her sister Nettie support her. She gives up her job as a shop-girl, and is introduced by Kessler to Sam Binns, casting director, who sends her to the dressing-rooms to make up for an extra part. While there Minnie meets Eleanor Grant, former mistress of Beauregard, the producer, who lends her a glittering evening gown. Minnie repulses an attempt at familiarity on the part of Yetcher, an assistant director, but retains her standing with him because of her beauty. Bacon, the director, sends her to a side stage seat to wait.

"Camera!" Minnie watches the rehearsals and the first scene with wide eyes. Comes a sudden explosion; the cast is petrified with fear; Bacon curses.

At the end of the first day Minnie has vamped Letcher to a state of incoherence; earned the right to a second day's work and has seen Hal Deane, noted director. She returns to the dressing-rooms with Eleanor, where the two girls discuss Minnie's serious need of a wardrobe.

Eleanor said if she were only in a position to give Minnie the evening gown she would do so gladly, but under the circumstances she felt that she couldn't afford such generosity. The gown had cost her—at a sale—$55. The sum made Minnie gasp, for in the second-rate department store where she had worked the most elaborate evening gown had never been marked over $40. Eleanor explained that because she knew she and Minnie were going to be friends, she would let her have the gown for the trifling sum of $15.

After much figuring Minnie saw how she could pay for it in ten working days. That was fair enough, Eleanor said and it also gave Minnie the chance to buy some other things she needed. Eleanor knew of a shop where Minnie could get an afternoon frock (she simply must have an afternoon frock in her wardrobe,) an evening cloak, extra slippers and lingerie. Minnie laughingly repeated the word "lingerie" several times before she could pronounce it. Funny word to call underwear. Eleanor explained that all the girls had their own wardrobes. If they were called for costume plays the company would supply the costumes, but there would be dozens and dozens of other calls for afternoon teas, garden parties, boarding-school scenes and dance halls.

That evening when Minnie signed the voucher slip and was given $3.50 for her day's work, she paid $1.50 on account to Eleanor.

"I feel as if I was cheating you to get that classy dress for $15," she said. "I never dreamed of owning anything like it. I'll take it home and show the folks. Bet it'll be an eye-opener for them, too."

Minnie's name was on the callboard for the following morning.

"That makes $7 in two days," she figured, "and I've been slaving for a whole week in that rotten basement for only $9."

She thought of what a contrast Eleanor was to the girls she'd been going with; Elsie Bicker and her friends of the basement. Not that she'd throw over her old friends because she had found new ones, but they could never interest her again. They didn't know anything, when she compared them to Eleanor who had been everywhere, who had seen so much of life and had known so many of its experiences. For Eleanor had traveled to California and back; she had gone up to Maine on a picture, and had been out on ocean boats many times. And how wise she was, how well she knew men. Eleanor had had a flat with three nigger servants in it. She was also going to make it clear to Minnie how it was possible for her to have all of that, too—and clothes with spangles on—and silk things next to the skin, lingerie.

"Oh, God, I'm lucky," cried Minnie to herself as she hurried from the studio to wait at the street corner for Letcher. "Just as Nettie says, I was born with a gold horseshoe in my mouth."

Minnie and Letcher held hands as they stood in the prow of the Fort Lee ferry boat; Minnie, because she thought it was through Letcher she would make another step toward her goal, and Letcher because he was always pleased to be seen in that intimate gesture with a pretty girl.

"I thought you was Al Kessler's sweetie," he told her, when he saw she wasn't going to draw her hand away from him. "Al stands ace-high with the ladies. I didn't think a poor fat slob like me had a chance."

"Say, you ain't so indifferent to the girls yourself," she said, recalling how he had half-way made love to all the girls in the dressing-room.

"I don't do it because I really care about 'em," he replied. "It's just because I don't want to hurt anybody's feelings. It's part of my business to kid 'em all along and keep 'em happy. But on my honor, Mineola, I'm not a fellow that often falls for a girl. She's got to be some baby when I do."

"Yeh?" she smiled archly, "and what kind of a girl do you fall for?"

"The real kind, sweet and innocent. Say, do you know you made the biggest kind of a hit with me today when you got sore at me for pullin' your dress away. I wouldn't of blamed you if you'd given me a good slap in the face."

"Is that the kind of a girl men really like, even in the movie business?"

"Sure it is. I've known some hard-boiled guys in my day. They hate a woman that's common. You'll see a lot of 'em in this game too, fresh and vulgar. But that don't get 'em anywheres. Look at the men, how they fall for the innocent sweet girls. Look at me, for instance. I'm sure gone on you."

He drew her closer to him and she could feel his warm breath on her cheek. She wanted to play up to him to stimulate a response, and she couldn't understand why his advances seemed repulsive to her.

Letcher went as far as One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Broadway, where Minnie was to take the subway downtown. In the jostling crowd they paused to say good night, Letcher still holding her hand in his.

"There's such a mob around here nobody will see you," he laughed. "Kiss me good night, will you, dearie?" he bent his fat face toward her, his lips puckered ludicrously.

Minnie quickly tempered her action with Letcher's advice. "You know I ain't that kind of a girl," she said, looking hurt.

"But just a little one. There's nothing wrong about a little one."

"I don't think me and you are goin' to be very good friends if you keep this up," she said, drawing away from him, upturning her face so he could see the hurt deepening in her eyes.

"Oh, come now, dearie, I didn't mean anything by it. You're a sweet little kid and I respect you. On my honor, I'd die rather than lose you for a friend."

Minnie smiled charitably and pressed his hand.

"Of course, we'll be friends," she said, wondering if she had gone too far, "I'd love to have you come to my house some night and meet my old lady, Mr. Letcher. Ma's an awful good cook. Let me know a day or so in advance and I'll have her get up a chicken stew or some little simple thing like that. She'd be very pleased to meet you. So would my old man."

"Look here," said Letcher suddenly. "You might as well know it right now. I'm married."

"Married!" echoed Minnie. "Honest, you're kiddin', ain't you?"

"Wish I was sometimes. Married and got a couple o' kids, boy and a girl. Look!"

He drew from his pocket a thumbed photograph of two fat youngsters.

Minnie felt a hot wave of nausea race over her. It blurred out the image of his grinning face.

"Oh," she cried. "Oh, I never would of guessed it. Why didn't somebody tell me before? Why didn't Elinor tell me?"

"You won't be shocked by a little thing like that after you've been around the studios awhile," Letcher laughed. "Funny little kid you are. Well, good night, dearie. There's my car. Got to beat it or the wife's goin' to meet me on the top step with a flatiron. So long, Mineola, see you tomorrow!"

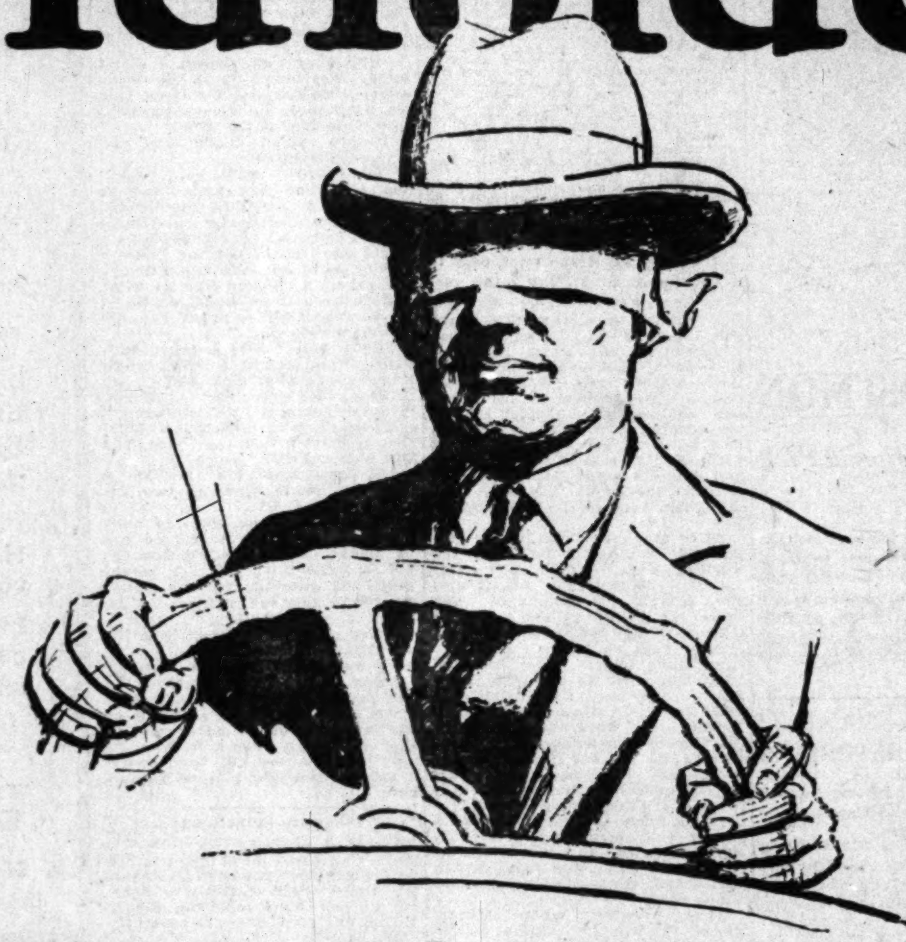
Are You Driving Blindfolded?



ARE you driving your car blindfolded?

Can you see the other fellow crossing your path when he is just two seconds away?

Are there moments when you feel panicky and helpless at the wheel when you can't see the pedestrian crossing the street?

Wooden corner posts in the old type of body are blind spots in the driver's vision. They hide the on-coming car at just the moment when full vision is most needed.

When you drive the new Jordan with the all-vision, all-steel body, the slender steel pillars give full driving vision in the traffic and eliminate what is probably the greatest cause of accidents.

Besides, the new observation Sedan gives you a broad, delightful view of the country through which you are passing.

The new Jordan is a modern, up-to-date car—the lowest priced light eight Sedan on the market.

The motor is a marvel of speed, power, smoothness, economy and simplicity.

In the body you have the same type of construction that has brought safety to railroad cars, ships, bridges and buildings—you have sturdiness, strength, vision and long life, combined with light weight and economy.

Steel protects when accidents do occur—no wood to smash or splinter—and it's the splinters that kill.

Slender steel pillars instead of old fashioned wooden posts mean more light, more air—an open car outlook with enclosed car comfort.

Such a body is more silent.

It is the loosening up of glued and screwed wooden joints that causes squeaks, rattles and creaks.

Just like the old rocking chair.

That's what makes most bodies noisy.

The Jordan all steel body is quiet just as steel Pullmans are more quiet than the old fashioned wooden ones.

Steel is riveted and welded into one solid unit.

That's silence.

Of course it is stronger. Under shock, steel is forty times stronger than wood.

Remember the Jordan that went over a ninety foot embankment and came up with every passenger unhurt?

Think that over if you have a family.

The Jordan body is beautiful because steel permits graceful curves and soft contours. It does not warp or crack.

Dodge has used steel for years and Dodge owners know.

Ford has adopted it for economy.

Rolls-Royce and the style leaders have adopted the all-vision idea for style and safety.

Jordan leads the field with a quality car of the all-steel, all-vision, modern, light, eight cylinder type.

Take a foot rule to any sales room. Measure the pillars of the car you are considering.

Then drive the Jordan and you will know what we are talking about.

Sedan $1845, Playboy $1695.

Affairs of the Week

by Juana Neal Levy

[illegible] usually there is a brief lull in the social activities following [illegible] and New Year's festivities, this year there seems to be [illegible] in any of the functions, each week bringing in its wake [illegible] of affairs which include weddings, engagement announcement [illegible] dinners, debutantes "formal" bows to Dame Society and other affairs too numerous to schedule.

[illegible] although The Bache- [illegible] is the main topic of con- [illegible] among the younger sets, [illegible] of the debutantes [illegible] are now thrilled with the news which came officially Wednesday from New York telling them that at last there will be a Junior League in Los Angeles and the dream of the League for Convalescent Children is at last realized.

There are, perhaps, 100 of these Junior League organizations throughout the United States, although previously California boasted of but two, one in San Francisco and the other in Santa Barbara, the original Junior League being formed in New York City by a bevy of society debutantes twenty-five years ago, and the League for Convalescent Children, which was organized nearly a year ago, was organized along the same lines as these others, as the members were sure that in time Los Angeles would be admitted to the much-longed-for and coveted circle.

The home is located in Ingraham street, and was started by thirty-one young debutantes and matrons, who each pledged herself for $100 to be turned into the treasury by Easter Sunday, making a fund of $3100, which was its nucleus, and which has grown by leaps and bounds, and at present writing there are twelve kiddies being taken care of there, who, as soon as they are well enough, will be taken home and room made for others who are dismissed from the Children's Hospital, but not fully recovered.

Another source of income which adds greatly to the fund will be the Horse Show which is being given again at Flintridge, the date being scheduled for May 15. Many novel features are being planned to help swell the coffers, among them being the Punch and Judy show, as well as a pole game for the girls during the luncheon hour.

Mrs. Charles Gardner Bullis (Helen Hanna) is president of the league and Miss Katherine Thomas its efficient vice-president.

As the by-laws and constitution were drawn up with the expectation of this great hope, there will not be much to be done in the changing of the present organization into a Junior League.

Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Harold Stuart Parsons, whose wedding was one of the beautifully appointed events of the month, are motoring through the north and are expecting to arrive in their future home in Toronto, Can., in about ten days.

Mrs. Parsons was formerly Miss Helen Elizabeth Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hall of Plymouth Boulevard, whose home was formerly in Belfast, Ireland, and Pittsburgh, Pa. The attractive young bride is an alumnae of Thurston's in the latter city and the Cheltenham School in England.

Col. Parsons is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Parsons of Admiral Road, Toronto, Can., where he has taken his bride to live.

Mrs. Margaret Jones of New York assisted as matron of honor at the ceremony, while Miss Mary Leonard of Tulsa, Okla., was maid of honor and Gerald MacLean of Pasadena, formerly of Toronto served Col. Parsons as best man.

Among the many attractive hostesses of recent date is Mrs. Sarah Hunter Reinberg, daughter of Lieut.-Col Joseph L. Hunter, D.D. ranking chaplain of the United States Army, who entertained with a delightfully planned bridge-tea at her home in Twenty-third street, San Pedro, thirty guests being bidden wives of the army officers at Fort MacArthur and of the officers of the battle fleet anchored in the harbor.

Mrs. Reinberg was assisted by her sister, Miss Margaret Hunter. Col. Hunter is stationed at Fort MacArthur.

Of more than usual interest to local society was the recent announcement of the marriage of Miss Lela Mae Sutherlin, charming young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Russell Sutherlin of Hollywood, to Gordon Easton Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gordon Young of Portland street, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride's parents. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Young left for their honeymoon in Honolulu.

After their return they will make their home in Pasadena.

Mr. Young is the grandson of the late Gen. L. C. Easton, U.S.A., and belongs to one of the old pioneer families of the Southland.

Miss Mildred Finley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Finley of the Rex Arms, in Orange street, has been the charming hostess at several delightful affairs since her return from an extensive trip abroad. Among the recent events was that with which Miss Finley and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Mark Finley (Anna Judge of San Francisco) entertained the 7th inst, in honor of Miss Loretta Schults, who has been visiting Mrs. Richard Bruce Hay Chapman at her home in Beverly Hills.

Pink and lavendar sweet peas and roses were effectively combined with ferns and foliage in the decorations of the tea table and living-rooms of the apartment.

Among the many visitors from foreign shores (if we may call Canada a foreign shore) who come every winter to pass several months in Southern California are the Hon. and Mrs. A. F. Healy and their attractive daughter, Miss Margery Healy, of Windsor, Ont.

Mr. Healy is a member of the Canadian Parliament and, with his family, came to Hotel del Coronado early in November, planning to pass the remainder of the winter at the fashionable watering place

Miss Healy, who is one of the most attractive and popular young belles of the Canadian city, made her formal bow to Dame Society of Windsor at a brilliant debut tea with which Mrs. Healy entertained October 17.

To be twice a bridesmaid within a week is the fascinating privilege of Miss Louise Mitchell, who yesterday assisted at the ceremony which united Miss Marjorie Susanne McLouth and Carroll Judson Pierce, the ceremony taking place in St. John's Church, West Adams street. Wednesday, the 20th inst., she again will be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding of Miss

The Bed Room Should Be Furnished To Express Repose and Beauty

The bed room, more so perhaps than any other room in the home, affords the opportunity for the real expression of good taste in its furnishing.

Through the correct use of colors and the proper selection of furnishings it is possible to create in the bed room an atmosphere that fairly breathes the spirit of quiet restfulness and relaxation. To the extent this is accomplished can the furnishing of the bed room be said to be successful.

To accomplish this result does not necessarily involve lavish expenditure, for even the modestly furnished bed room may be impressive in its simplicity and beauty, and it may measure up to the highest expression of harmony.

The helpful suggestions and friendly counsel of experts in the art of home beautifying are always available to you at the "California" without obligation. This cooperation will be found very helpful in the furnishing of the bed room.

You will find here very extensive selections in bed room furniture of the most desirable types, all personally and exactingly selected—the moderate in price as well as the very finest masterpieces. A very attractive bed room suite of seven pieces, splendidly built of walnut in combination with gum wood may be had for as little as $400.00. And every price from this on up into the thousands represents real honest sound merchandising value, which your own comparison will verify.

The "California" invites you to come and see the interesting bed room furniture offerings here and to make critical value comparisons.

An unusual display of bedroom furniture is shown in one of our windows this week.

Miss Lucille Trafford

CELEBRATING her birthday anniversary, Miss Lucille Trafford, the charming young daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Trafford of La Mirada Way, Hollywood, was the honor guest at a supper dance given by her parents in the Cocoanut Grove at the Ambassador Friday evening, the 8th inst. Other guests included Miss Betty Tisdale, Miss Mary Newcomer, Miss Melva Bland, Richard Hardout, Walter Strohm, Walter Reichardt, William Weller and Carl Bloom. Miss Trafford is a senior at Hollywood High School, to be graduated next June.

In Realm of Society

Ruth Graydon and Harry Lee MacBeane.

Miss Mitchell gave two charmingly arranged afternoon affairs recently, one in honor of Miss McLouth and the other complimenting Miss Graydon, the former being a luncheon at the Wilshire Country clubhouse, when Miss Alice Campbell, another of the bridesmaids at the wedding was cohostess and the guests were all Phi Mu Sorority sisters of the honor guest and hostesses at University of Southern California.

One of the most popular members of the young college set is Miss Alice Smith, attractive daughter of Mrs. Ed T. Smith of Occidental Boulevard, who entertained during the Christmas holidays with a beautifully appointed bridge afternoon party, the guests being members of the Chi Omega Sorority.

Miss Smith was graduated from Stanford University and is now planning an extended European trip, leaving here some time in the early spring.

Home Wedding

The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Huntington, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Brehm, to Richard Hoagland Hinckley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Barton Hinckley, was one of the beautifully appointed events of yesterday, taking place at the home of the bride's parents in San Marino at high noon, with Rev. John Atwill of San Gabriel officiating in the presence of intimate friends and relatives.

The house was beautifully decorated with a profusion of exquisite blossoms, including heather, acacia, roses and trailing feathery ferns. The bridal party stood in the living-room, the bride being given in marriage by Mr. Brehm. Miss Harriet Huntington assisted her sister as maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Gertrude Macy and Miss Louise Macy of Pasadena, while two little sisters of the bride, Leslie Alice Huntington and Jean Ethelyn Brehm, in dainty white frocks held the broad satin ribbons which formed the aisle through which the bridal party passed for the ceremony.

The bride wore an exquisite creation of white chiffon and lace, her veil of tulle and lace being held in place by sprays of orange blossoms and she carried a white prayer book with sprays of lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor wore a frock of periwinkle blue chiffon with hat to match, while the bridesmaids were attired in gowns of ashes of roses, chiffon with hats to match and all the attendants carried arm showers of pansies and sprays of maidenhair ferns. Gerald Hodgson served Mr. Hinckley as best man and the ushers were Tyler Woodward and Eyten Lytle.

The honeymoon will be taken by way of the Panama Canal, en route to Mr. Hinckley's new detail at Havana.

The bride, who is the granddaughter of Henry E. Huntington, was educated at Miss Ransom's School in Piedmont before going to an eastern school in Washington. Mr. Hinckley, who is an alumnus of Stanford, is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. Mrs. Brehm was assisted yesterday by a group of intimate friends and a wedding luncheon followed the ceremony.

Cole-Bodrero

Another wedding of yesterday which is of much interest to local society was that of Miss Eleanor Cole, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Seward Cole, and James Spalding Bodrero, the ceremony taking place at the home of the late Senator Cornelius Cole, grandfather of the dainty bride, on Lexington avenue, Colegrove, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, with Rev. J. Arthur Evans, an old friend of the Cole family, officiating.

The old Cole home, which is rich in its living-room of old California redwood, was beautifully decorated in heather and pale pink blossoms and ferns, tall cathedral candles lighting the improvised altar where Mr. Cole gave his daughter into the keeping of the bridegroom.

The bridal gown was of white satin and lace, with tulle veil falling in graceful folds from a coronet or orange blossoms, and she carried an arm shower of orchids, gardenias and lilies of the valley. The bride's only attendant was Miss Julanne Johnston of Hollywood, one of her childhood friends and a schoolmate at Hollywood School for Girls. Miss Johnston was attired in a gown of blond lace and gold with hat to match and carried blossoms to harmonize with her gown. James Spalding, uncle of the bridegroom, was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Bodrero left after the wedding supper for a short motor trip in the north, planning to take an extended wedding trip later in the season.

The wedding, which had been scheduled for the last week of January, was hastened on account of Mrs. Clearwater's plans, as she is leaving this week for her New York home. Mrs. Clearwater, mother of the bridegroom, who has been visiting in San Francisco, came down for the ceremony as did Neil Cole, brother of the bride, who is a student at University of California in Berkeley.

Mr. and Mrs. Bodrero will make their home temporarily in Pasadena until the completion of their home in the Crown City, for which plans are being drawn and which will be commenced as soon as they return from their wedding trip. The Seward Cole home is on North El Centro avenue, Hollywood.

Mrs. Seward Cole received her guests in an imported French gown of silver cloth over lovebird green, with trimmings of fur. The guests were members of the two families and a few most intimate friends only.

Afternoon Tea

One of the prettily appointed teas of the past week was that with which Mrs. William Spencer Hook, Jr., entertained Wednesday afternoon at her home on West Adams street in honor of Miss Rose Garland, who is returning shortly to her eastern home after a delightful but brief visit with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William May Garland on West Adams street.

Birthday Party

One of the prettily appointed events of recent date was the surprise supper-dance at the Cocoanut Grove Tuesday evening, which was given by Mrs. Merton Adams of Portland street in honor of her charming young daughter, Miss Evelyn Adams, the occasion celebrating her birthday anniversary. The ice palace decorations, which were silvery in all the appointments, made an attractive background. The party was chaperoned by Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Thomas Wright. The decorations of the table and place favors of pink and green were accentuated by the huge birthday cake ornamented with dainty dancing girls. Those included were friends at the Los Angeles High School, where Miss Adams is a senior, including Miss Evelyn Adams, Miss Virginia Wright, Miss Nathalie Hutchinson, Miss Carol Rice, Miss Eleanor Law-

YOU need not endure another day the embarrassing blemish of unwanted hair on face, arms, under arms or any other part of the body. Already women numbering thousands have been permanently freed from this vexing beauty problem.

By a remarkable process, discovered by Jules M. Marton, Ph. D., noted Chemist and Physician and graduate of Berne and Prague Universities, while a chemist for one of Europe's largest toilet preparation manufacturers, superfluous hair is removed from the treated surface as completely as if it had never grown there.

Six Reasons
Why the Marton Method Should Be YOUR Choice

1. The removal is positively permanent, never again returns to the surface treated.
2. The treatment is accomplished without pain.
3. It will not injure the most delicate skin.
4. The Marton Method leaves no marks or scars of any kind.
5. A money refund guarantee is given in every case.
6. The Marton Method is the choice of the most fastidious, the most cultured, the most beautiful and the most refined women, and is within the means of all.

Gala Fetes in Society

Herriott Hawk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Stanton Hawk, to Arthur Male, was one of the events of Thursday, the 7th inst., the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of the two families only. The bride wore an old-fashioned gown of pale blue satin which had been worn by her aunt, Mrs. George W. Price, at her own wedding, with high-waisted bodice and full skirt, and her sister's wedding veil (Mrs. Roy Hershberger), carrying roses and lilies of the valley. She entered on the arm of her father, who gave her into the keeping of the bridegroom, Rev. Dr. Hugh Kelso Walker officiating.

The house was decorated with baskets of pink snapdragons, orchid stock and pink larkspur. Supper was served following the ceremony, the tables being adorned with pink sweet peas and maidenhair ferns. Mrs. Faith Guy Knudson, cousin of the bridegroom, sang two solos preceding the ceremony, accompanied by Miss Grace Rowell, who also played the wedding marches.

Following a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Male will be at home after February 15 at 1623 South Orange Grove avenue, Los Angeles, where a new home just completed awaits their occupancy.

Birthday

chapter of the Alpha Epsi-of the University of Southern Branch, cele-
first birthday anniversary appropriately with a "kid party" during the Christmas holidays. The girls were all dressed in kiddie clothes and most of the evening was passed in playing games. Prizes were given to those winning the games and to those wearing the best costumes, Miss Ethel Wolf, Miss Dorothy Sklar, Miss Harriet Schoben and Miss Rose Schaumer.

The serious aspect of this memorable evening came when Dorothy Brown, past dean of Phi chapter, gave a brief review of the starting of the chapter and of its installation which took place in the holidays of 1924 at Beverly Hills Hotel. She also told what the chapter had accomplished during the brief period of its existence and commended the girls upon the rapid growth of the group. She was followed by Helen Feinstein, the present dean, who expressed a few of the future aims of Phi chapter. Sylvia Livingstone then gave a report of what occurred at Berkeley December 21 and 22, last, and she was followed by Lillian Lederer, who made out the favors which were different for the charter members, the first initiates and the pledges. The most important ceremony came toward the end of the evening when the birthday cake, with its inscription "Phi Chapter First Birthday" upon it in the sorority colors, green and white, was cut and a piece given to each of those present. Refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening enjoyed in music, playing games and dancing.

Dinner-Musicale

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bush were charming hosts at a dinner party at the University Club recently, which was followed by a musicale at their home, 158 South Serrano avenue. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Eastman, Dr. and Mrs. William M. Happ and Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. D. Briois. The program at the Bush home was given by Mary Bothwell, Joseph Blondin, Dr. Marian Tracie Whiting and Mrs. Bush.

In Hawaii

Among the Angelenos who are enjoying an extended sojourn at the Moana Hotel in Honolulu are Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Springmeyer, who arrived at Waikiki aboard the SS. Calawaii, several days after Christmas, planning an indefinite visit.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Weldon and Mrs. Kate Ward are also visitors at the Moana from Los Angeles, as are also Charles Shaw, Robert E. Stephens and G. A. Thompson, who stopped for several weeks' sojourn there before continuing on their tour around the world.

Birthday Anniversary

The first birthday anniversary of Master Franklin Louis Mayer was celebrated at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Mayer 812 South Citrus avenue, Saturday the 9th inst.

Among the guests were Mrs. Gus Arnheim and daughter, Valerie, Mrs. Jefferson Asher and son, Jefferson, Jr., Mrs. J. Bothmason and daughter, Barbara Jean, Mrs. Edward Gray and daughter, Ileen, Mrs. L. A. Lewis with Louis, Jr., and daughter, Yolande, Mrs. Joseph Chapman and daughter, Mildred, Mrs. Arthur Granas and son Morton, also Mrs. Sydney Mayer, Mrs. Henry Haves, Mrs. M. Franklin Kline, Miss Babette V. Kline, Mrs. Irwin Mayer and little Franklin Louis Mayer.

Delightful Program

The pledges of Sigma Alpha Iota sorority entertained the active and alumnae members with a musicale and tea at the home of Margaret K. Maslen in Beverly Hills, the 10th inst., when the program was given by Miss Alta Rich and Miss Emma Bauers, who gave violin numbers; Miss Mary Wilkinson, Miss Bernys Grozinger and Miss Annett Rees at the piano, while Miss Margaret Maslen sang. Miss Martha Teach played all of the accompaniments. Among the guests were Miss Marie Hiebsch, Miss Betty Ruppech, Miss Matilda Sweet, Miss Nellie Winslow, Miss Antoinette Sabel, Miss Mabel Stewart and Mrs. Schwankovsky.

Luncheon Guests

One of the enjoyable luncheon parties given at the southern luncheon of the United Daughters of the Confederacy at the Biltmore yesterday afternoon was that at which Dr. and Mrs. Albert S. Johnson were hosts, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. Hughes Carr, Miss Jeanette Campbell, Mrs. Mary Marshall Wiley, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Miss Frances B. Roberts, Mrs. E. F. Scattergood and Mrs. Lucile Gibson Pleasants.

Engagement Announced

Among the enjoyable affairs of recent date was the tea with which Mrs. Clifford Barbee entertained in honor of her daughter, Nuss Lorena Lee Barbee, at her home, 7301 Hollywood Boulevard, the occasion serving to announce the engagement of Miss Barbee to Andrew Dossett, son of Mrs. A. J. Dossett of Waco, Tex. Miss Barbee was graduated from Ogontz Seminary, Philadelphia, and has been living in Los Angeles during the past six months. She is a grand-daughter of the late William Randolph Barbee, sculptor of Virginia, and is herself a native of that State. Mr. Dossett attended the University of Texas where he was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity. The wedding will be one of the events of February.

Entertains Cousin

One of the prettily arranged affairs of the month was the bridge-tea with which Miss Eleanor Heppenstall entertained at her home, 1184 Fourth avenue, honoring her cousin, Miss Marian Cook of Avon-by-the-Sea, N. J., who is her house guest and will remain until February. Those invited were Mrs. F. M. Brown, Mrs. C. U. Driver, Mrs. Wilton Heppenstall, Miss Ethel Driver, Mrs. Helen Trovis, Miss Olive Boden, Mrs. R. J. Lupfer and Miss Edith Emery, who presided at the tea urn.

At Beverly Hills

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Law, Jr., of New York City are expected within a few days at the Beverly Hills Hotel to pass some months there. They retain their private saddle horses in the Beverly Hills stables and obtain a great deal of pleasure through riding and on the golf links during their yearly visits in Southern California.

Wedding Anniversary

One of the season's smartest affairs was the celebration of the twentieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wells, 217 West Santa Barbara avenue, when 150 guests were bidden for the occasion and called between the hours of 2 to 10 o'clock. The floral decorations of the reception room were of pink carnations, in the den crimson was used with asparagus ferns, while a gorgeous centerpiece of various colored flowers made bright the dining-room, where dainty refreshments were served. Mrs. Irvin Greathouse of Reseda presided over the tea urns, assisted by Miss June Park, Miss Carol Probst and Miss Gretchen Larsen, while Mrs. A. B. Crow, sister of Mrs. Wells, assisted by Wilton and Stillman Wells received and made welcome the guests.

In the afternoon Mrs. Warren Rogers, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Fred Stewart, sang a group of songs appropriate to the occasion and Miss Louise McNabb of Pittsburgh gave two piano numbers.

In the evening, Gage Christopher, accompanied by Mrs. Irving Weiss, entertained with a number of solos, then to the strains of the "Lohengrin" wedding march, which was played by Mrs. Weiss, the six sisters of the host and hostess, acting as matrons of honor came down the stairs each carrying a beautiful bow of pink tulle forming an aisle through which the bride and bridegroom of twenty years ago approached the improvised altar, where Rev. F. D. Seward, who had officiated at the former ceremony, again read the marriage service. The matrons of honor were Mrs. Delphena Fowles, Mrs. George B. Wells, Mrs. A. B. Crow, Mrs. Jaspar Osborn, Mrs. Irvin Greathouse and Mrs. Phil MacPherson. Following the ceremony, Gage Christopher sang several numbers and Wilton and Stillman Wells gave several numbers on the trombone and cornet.

Morning Talks

Among the charming and interesting events of the season are the morning talks which Mrs. Jack Vallely is planning to give the third Thursday mornings of each month at the Flintridge Country Club, current events and art and literature being the subjects discussed. Among those sponsoring these events are Mrs. Forest Stanton, Mrs. Louis Cass, Mrs. Henry Mackay, Mrs. Ralph Reynolds, Mrs. Jack Phelps, Mrs. Stuart Salisbury, Mrs. Douglas Mitchell, Mrs. William R. Flint, Mrs. Percy Eisen, Mrs. F. A. Henderson, Mrs. C. E. Bradburn, Mrs. Arthur R. Smiley, Mrs. George Bemus and Mrs. E. B. Yoakum. Mrs. Vallely is also giving a series of morning talks at the home of Mrs. A. Bartlett Ross in South Plymouth Boulevard.

For Bride-Elect

Miss Ruth Graydon, attractive daughter of Mrs. Ridley Taylor of Hollywood, whose marriage to Harry Lee MacBeane will be one of the events of the 20th inst., has been the guest of honor at numerous delightful affairs, among those of recent date being the luncheon given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Edward McClure at her home in Clarissa street, when the guests included Miss Graydon, Miss Louise Mitchell, Miss Alva Woodhouse, Mrs. Albert George Ralphs, Miss Vivian Foy, Miss Marjorie Harris, Miss Edith Maude, Mrs. Leroy Eskew, Miss Lorraine Harris, Mrs. Kenneth Carraher, Mrs. Kirk Lewis, Mrs. J. S. Armstrong and Mrs. Ridley Taylor.

Mrs. McClure was assisted by Mrs. Ray Mitchell, Mrs. Harold Chambers, Mrs. Lawrence Ernst, Mrs. Edgar B. Hervey and Mrs. J. Hugh McClure. The decorations were carried out in the pastel shades of spring flowers. Miss Graydon was charmingly entertained by Miss Marion Blair of Hollywood with a smart bridge-tea and lingerie shower Monday afternoon when spring blossoms and ferns adorned the tea table and the guests included Miss Graydon, Miss Alvah Woodhouse, Miss Ruth Quayle, Miss Edith Maude, Miss Vivian Foy, Miss Lydia Smith, Miss Beatrice Chambers, Miss Virginia Wheeler and Mrs. Harold Spielman.

Saturday afternoon, the 9th inst., Mrs. Charles F. Smith gave an attractively appointed tea in honor of Miss Graydon, while Friday afternoon Miss Beatrice Lester was hostess at a bridge-tea at her home in South Windsor Place, and Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Harried Penman entertained with a luncheon in her honor at the Writers' Club in Hollywood. Miss Alva Woodhouse was the gracious hostess at a supper party for Miss Graydon and her bridal party, those included being Miss Genevieve Johnson of Madison, Wis.; Miss Louise Mitchell, Miss Jean Melville, Miss Marion Blair, Miss Lorraine Harris, Everett Taylor, Charles MacNieledge, Harvey Priester, Tom Combine and John Nason.

Distinguished Visitors

Much interest has been manifested in university circles in the visit of Mrs. Carl McDonald of St. Louis, Mo., who is the national grand president of the Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority. Mrs. McDonald arrived in the city Tuesday evening, became the guest of Kappa Theta chapter in 718 Heliotrope Drive, and has been the incentive of many lovely dinner parties and teas during her brief stay. The distinguished guest is at present touring the principal cities of the United States and visiting both the active and alumnae chapters at the different universities. She has been on her journey since the latter part of December and does not expect to arrive home until March or April. Mrs. McDonald has just come from Randolph Macon College, where she was enthusiastically received by the faculty and by Kappa chapter, of which she is a member. While there she spoke to Pan-Hellenic, the meeting of all the national sororities of the campus, and is making it a point to do so in all the universities.

Thursday afternoon the active chapter of the University of California of this city honored the guest with a most delightful tea. Invitations were extended to 150 guests, these being members of the faculty and presidents and representatives from the fraternal organizations. Hostesses of Kappa Theta were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Helen Laughlin, dean of women of the university; Mrs. Bertha Vaughn, member of the faculty; Mrs. Robert Benkert, president of the alumnae chapter of Alpha Omicron Pi, and Mrs. Hiram Edwards and Mrs. Roland Harvey, wives of faculty professors.

Decorations were charmingly carried out with a profusion of Jacqueminot roses together with ferns and cyclamen. Corsages of orchids and lilies of the valley were presented to the honor guest and the hostesses.

Members and pledges who assisted Miss Dorothy Graham, president of Kappa Theta, were Miss Doris Cannon, Miss Lillian Byrne, Miss Freeda L'Allemand, Miss Cornelia Christmas, Miss Eleanore Corwin and Miss Maxine Webb.

A most attractive feature of the decorations was the huge basket of vivid red roses with sprays of delphinium, which adorned the serving table at which Miss Margaret Schlinkman and Miss Elizabeth Maybery presided at the tea urns.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS of THE NAVY

With the date set for the sailing of the battleship fleet (February 1, next) so rapidly approaching, the general topic of conversation in navy circles has become . . . Panama, to go or not to go.

At first a large percentage of the wives of the officers had planned to make the trip, then suddenly appeared a cable from the authorities in the Canal Zone, explaining that no accommodations would be available. So, one by one, the Panama exploitation and explication contingent has grown less, until now those actually planning to sail February 1, next, on the Finland are Mrs. Louis R. de Stiguer, Mrs. Ralph Hyde, Mrs. Theodore R. Chandler, Mrs. Robert Flemming, Mrs. Andrew D. Denney, Mrs. Homer H. Norton and Mrs. Frank E. Beatty. Mrs. Norton and Mrs. Denney will make but a short stay in Panama and continue around to the East Coast, joining their husbands in Puget Sound in the spring.

Mrs. Alan Goodrich Kirk and Mrs. Powell, wife of Commander Halsey Powell, U.S.N., are planning to pass the months the battleships are away from port at the Ojai Hotel in the beautiful Ojai Valley.

But there will be quite a colony of navy families who remain at home, in Long Beach and San Pedro. Among those who will stay in Long Beach until spring are Mrs. George F. Neal, Mrs. Thomas T. Crayen, Mrs. Karl Shears, Mrs. Alfred Howe, Mrs. John T. Bowers, Mrs. Harlan P. Perrill, Mrs. Frank Brumby, Mrs. Robert Cary, Mrs. Clifford Van Hook, Mrs. Oscar P. Badger, Mrs. E. H. Jones, Mrs. William W. Meek and her mother, Mrs. W. M. Meek, and Mrs. George C. Simmons. Saturday evening of last week the junior officers of the U.S.S. California entertained a party of friends aboard ship at an interesting dinner-dance.

The guests were asked to appear clad as gypsies or pirates, an unusual uniform for a battleship. The affair was chaperoned by Lieut. and Mrs. Frank E. Beatty and Lieut. and Mrs. Fred D. Kirtland.

Lieut. and Mrs. Dallas D. Dupre are leaving soon for Paris, France, where Lieut. Dupre will be attached to the staff of the American Embassy.

Mrs. Dupre is a native of Paris, being the daughter of Admiral Grout of the French navy. Admiral Grout was in the United States last month, in the French cruiser Jeanne d'Arc.

Lieut. and Mrs. Edward H. Jones entertained a small company at dinner last Saturday evening at their apartments in Fifth Place, Long Beach. Among those present were Commander and Mrs. Homer H. Norton and Commander and Mrs. Hermann E. Welte.

Another small party was given Saturday by Lieut. and Mrs. Richard Webb in honor of Lieut. and Mrs. Dallas Dupre, who are sailing soon for France.

Wednesday evening Commander and Mrs. F. J. Wille entertained at dinner at the Hotel Virginia, taking their guests later to the navy ball. Those included were Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. C. L. Montgomery, Miss Elizabeth Clark, Ensign Davis, Mrs. C. R. Kloman, Ensign Owden, Miss Elizabeth Keeney and Lieut. Kenworthy. Mrs. Aille is sailing February 1, next, in the Finland for a visit of several months in Panama.

Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. J. R. Weeks have taken an apartment at Burnett, at 1528 East First street, Long Beach. Lieut. Weeks has been ill for several months at the Naval Hospital at Mare Island and has come to Southern California to convalesce.

Lieutenant-Commander and Mrs. William Woodruff Meek have taken an apartment for the winter at the Commodore on Ocean avenue and have with them their mother, Mrs. William M. Meek.

Capt. Raymond Hasbrouck, in command of the U.S.S. California, was taken suddenly ill last Tuesday and carried "big tug" to San Diego, where he is now a patient at the Naval Hospital in that city.

The wives of the officers of the U.S.S. Arizona have inaugurated the pleasant custom of meeting together for luncheon every other Tuesday. Last week's reunion took place at the Virginia Country Club, Long Beach.

Tuesday evening Capt. and Mrs. George F. Neal were hosts at a delightful buffet supper at their home in East First street.

Commander and Mrs. Richard F. Bernard have gone to San Francisco and have taken an apartment there at 3559 Jackson street.

Capt. Thomas T. Craven of the U.S.S Maryland has issued invitations for a large tea-dance to be given in honor of Vice-Admiral Richard H. Jackson commanding the battleship division. This affair will take place on board the Maryland tomorrow from 3 to 5 o'clock. Boats will be in operation during these hours from the Fifth-street landing, San Pedro, and Pine-street Pier, Long Beach.

La Venta Inn, Palos Verdes, is frequently the scene of parties given by our naval visitors, Mrs. James Van De Carr and Mrs. James Maloney recently being hostesses at a large luncheon-bridge there. Among those enjoying their hospitality being Mrs. Henry Joseph Ziegemeier, Mrs. Russell Willson, Mrs. Hermann Walte, Mrs. Karl Shears, Mrs. Richard Webb, Mrs. James Spore, Mrs. Frank Talbot, Mrs. Marshall Arnold, Mrs. Elmer Henning, Mrs. Harold Roberts, Mrs. Penn Carroll, Mrs. Felix Gygax, Mrs. Edward Short, Mrs. Hugh Le Clair, Mrs. R. B. Dere, Mrs. Franklin Van Valkenburgh, Mrs. Paul H. Rice, Mrs. Harold Eberhart, Mrs. C. F. Passmore, Mrs. Eric Barr, Mrs. George H. Armstrong, Mrs. H. M. Armstead and Mrs. O. S. Kincaid.

Lieut. and Mrs. Elmer Tiernan are being congratulated upon the recent arrival of a tiny son who came the 5th inst. at the Seaside Hospital, Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Gevytier entertained a number of their navy friends at supper, followed by bridge, Monday evening, last.

The Diamond of Promise

The engagement ring that bears the mark of Donavan & Seamans Co. is rich in all the particulars that mean so much to a ring of this nature. It is a gem of absolute perfection with majestic color, while the mounting comes from a collection which is noted for its artisticness and fine workmanship.

One might be misguided by the impression that such a house shows only pieces which are priced beyond the majority, but upon investigation—this vast assortment will appear most favorable to everyone.

For example we quote this all platinuum ring, set with a blue perfect diamond, the mounting contains 14 diamonds and 10 oriental sapphires, priced at $475.

This gem diamond is set in a handsome platinum mounting which has 16 diamonds and 6 emeralds priced at $550.

Then there is this perfect diamond over one-half carat in size, set in a fine all-platinum mounting priced at $350.

An engagement ring supreme is this gem of exquisite beauty, set with a mounting which is paved with small stones priced at $950.

Our series of these fine quality gems at $200, $225, $240, $250, $275 and $300 mounted in platinum is most interesting.

A courteous showing by experts is always awaiting you, nowhere can finer gems be shown you; and upon comparison the price asked will be found to be most reasonable.

One of the delightful events of the week was the shower at which Miss Nancy Forker entertained on Thursday evening at her home on East Kelso street in compliment to Miss Sarah Towle of Los Angeles, whose marriage to Mr. Ernest Daniels was solemnized yesterday. A delicious supper was served at a table effectively decorated in pink and lavender. Sweet peas in a huge bowl formed the center piece, and the place cards, nut cups and other individual motifs were carried out in the prevailing shades of pink and lavender. Tiny dolls were used as favors and that of the bride was gowned in nuptial robes. A deluge of pretty gifts was showered upon the bride immediately after the dinner.

JUNIORS AID IN RETAINING CLUB IDEALS

Auxiliaries Organized to Provide Training for New Federation Leaders

Visualizing the future benefit to be derived from trained, efficient leadership to carry on the aims and high ideals, not only of the individual clubs but the department work of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, junior auxiliaries are organized with this ultimate intention—in fact they are one of the primary objectives for this year's work, as outlined by the general federation.

No longer are the juniors compelled to look on from the outside, at the worth-while work accomplished by the grown-ups, anxiously waiting for the time when they, too, can become club women. Many clubs in the district boast of junior clubs, composed of daughters of members and their young friends, which are officered as the parent club, but have fewer committees and activities. As a rule these junior auxiliaries concentrate their efforts on philanthropic work, sewing for the children at the children's lodge at Sawtelle; making layettes for the maternity home, or helping in some line of charity work, in which the parent club is interested.

Under the leadership of the senior club adviser, the girls acquire dependability of poise, personality and purpose, and learn the true meaning of co-operation; to bow to the will of the majority and respect the rights of the minority. Juniors are always looking to the older club women for inspiration, whose duty is to help mold the women of tomorrow; each in turn profits from this close association: The young girl benefits from the experience and wisdom of those older in the work, and the older woman needs the energy and boundles enthusiasm of youth. Every federated club should have its junior auxiliary.

Los Angeles Ebell

Mrs. Roberts Burns entertained the activities committee of Ebell at a buffet luncheon at her home, 673 South Hobart Boulevard, Tuesday. At the meeting conducted by Mrs. W. J. Wilson, chairman, which followed the luncheon, final arrangements were made for a bridge tea to be given at the Biltmore February 11. Thursday morning the Bible department will meet at the Ebell clubhouse Mrs. Lena Leonard Fisher, curator, will speak, her topic being "A Love That Lived: A Study of Sara." Mrs. Alvin W. Ault will tell about current religious news.

SCHOOL FOR BLIND AND DEAF IN HONOLULU DOING NOBLY AMONG HAWAIIAN CHILDREN

BY BARBARA MILLER

Leaving far behind Honolulu's narrow, slanting streets — quaint mixture of Orient and Occident—the careless sweep of beach that is Waikiki, the Moana Hotel, center of the city's gayety, and turning from the summer sea toward the hills, one comes upon a little group of cottages, clustered about an old plantation house—the Territorial School for the Deaf and Blind.

Decidedly, there is more than a touch of incongruous in the very presence of this school in such a radiant land, where dark, painful happenings must be so rare.

But the women of Honolulu have refused to close their eyes to the unpleasant reality and, as the result of their efforts during the last ten years, fifty-nine cruelly handicapped children are being fitted to take their places in the world, to become useful members of the community, rather than burdens upon their parents, or mere family drudges, as so often has been the case in the past, especially among the girls.

NEW ERA BEGUN

Since last September, Mrs. Mabel Lacy has been superintendent of the Territorial school. While taking a summer course at the University of California, she heard of the opening here and applied for the position. For ten years she was prominent in such work in Grand Rapids, Mich., and more recently served as head of speech-correction in the city schools of Madison, Wis.

With her coming, a new era for the Territorial school has begun. As has never been the case in the past, public demonstrations of the work of the children are being given. In this way the parents, as well as the various teachers, who must place similarly afflicted children, are becoming acquainted with school methods and achievements.

The first move in her campaign was a Thanksgiving party, held just before that holiday. One of the most pathetic parties imaginable, because of the very unconsciousness of the children of their plight. But highly enlightening, nevertheless.

The Territorial school is a real melting-pot, characteristic of Honolulu, where Japanese, Chinese, Koreans, Hawaiians, study and play together, all Americanized, all struggling against a common handicap.

At this Thanksgiving party children who had never heard a sound—of church bells, of haunting Hawaiian music, of negligent surf—sang, "Lord, We Thank Thee." And other youngsters, many blind since birth to the unthinkable beauties about them, "read" tales of the first Thanksgiving, while their classmates presented the old Puritan story in semipantomime, with bits of guttural conversation.

TAUGHT SOUNDS

The first-graders gave a typical class demonstration, showing how, regardless of age, they first are taught sounds by a series of voice exercises. Words follow, then the correlation of names and the objects they represent.

"The greatest force we have to combat is the mistrust of the parents, themselves," explained Mrs. Lacy. "They hesitate to let their babies go so far away from home. And who can blame them? This is particularly the case when the children must be sent from other islands.

"But we are gradually gaining their confidence and by such demonstrations as the one today are showing the parents just how much we are able to help their children. At Christmas another demonstration was given before members of the teachers' institute attended by teachers from all the Hawaiian Islands. They went back to their school and explained our work to parents who should send their children to us.

"See that little boy over there? The one in the long trousers. We call him 'Cowboy,' for he is always playing at being one. That child has been deaf all his life. His mother died when he was born and the father carried the baby on his back while he worked in the cane fields. The father moved over to this island so that he can see the boy often."

With the overwhelming majority of Japanese in Hawaii, it is not surprising that they outnumber other nationalities at the Territorial school. The enrollment includes Japanese, 40 per cent; Chinese, 15 per cent; Portuguese 11 2-3 per cent; Porto Rican, 6 2-3 per cent; Filipino, 11 per cent; Hawaiian, 5 per cent; Chinese-Hawaiian, 5 per cent; German, 3 1-3 per cent; Spanish-Hawaiian, 1 2-3 per cent, and miscellaneous, 5 per cent.

Of these, seven are blind and fifty-two deaf.

MOVE STARTED IN 1912

The same sweep is noted in the religions of the students. Enrolled at present are five Buddhists; thirteen Catholics, twenty Protestants and twenty-one whose religion is unknown.

The movement which finally resulted in the Territorial school was started in 1912. Among its most devoted workers was Mrs. Fred-

HARVEY TO GIVE FOURTH PEACE TALK

Women's City Club Will Hear Lecture Tomorrow on "World Today"

Paul Harvey, lecturer on international affairs, will present his fourth lecture on "The World Today" and international relations tomorrow, at 12:45 p.m. before the Women's City Club and many prominent business men who are attending the Harvey lectures in the Playhouse each Monday.

Harvey will continue his discussion on the "Path of Peace," which he touched last Monday in connection with the economic restoration of "The World Today," and he will talk on the "Problems of the Pacific," with a plan for the rehabilitation of China; he will tell about the new Asia, or the awakening of the Orient. He will also suggest some interesting plans in connection with these problems to obtain and maintain a world peace.

"International co-operation or agreement must be sensitive to the will of the governed, unless it is to be a brooder of war," says Harvey. "We have a world of sixty-seven nations each of a different philosophy of life and co-operation must develop a common viewpoint, a common philosophy, and a common standpoint of life." Harvey continues, "The continent still thinks somewhat in terms of government to control, while America has always thought in terms of government to liberate, and to enlarge the freedom of action of the individual."

This will be the last but one of Paul Harvey's lectures before the Women's City Club. Mrs. J. T. Anderson will preside.

Dick Richards, representative of the International Press Bureau, will be the breakfast speaker at 10:15 a.m., his subject will be "Good Citizenship." Mrs. Charles McDevitt will be the breakfast hostess and the menu will be a manufacturers' "Made in Los Angeles" one.

Mrs. M. E. Green announces that the birthday table, of which she is hostess, will be ready for all members who have a birthday in January, on the third Monday of the month; she requests that reservations be sent in as soon as possible.

University Book Club

A benefit card party will be given at the home of Mrs. Florence Call, 2090 Miramar street, on Tuesday afternoon for members of the University Book Club and their friends. There will be a charge of 50 cents, proceeds to go to the child welfare section.

OPERA CLUB ACTIVITIES ANNOUNCED

Fine Arts Group Meeting in Barker Brothers' Building in Future

The Los Angeles Opera and Fine Arts Club, of which Mrs. J. T. Anderson is president, is announcing several interesting changes in connection with its programs and activities during this new year.

The club, for its first meeting of 1926, will assemble Friday evening, the 29th inst., in the beautiful auditorium which is a feature of Barker Brothers' new building on Seventh street.

A large reception room adjoining the auditorium will serve as a social gathering place for the members on their meeting nights, while the customary dinner events can be enjoyed as formerly, these being given in the new Vanity Fair tea rooms which are being opened on the same floor of the building, and will connect with the big reception hall.

Another announcement which Mrs. Anderson makes for the club is the amalgamation of the Los Angeles Opera Reading Club with the Los Angeles Opera and Fine Arts Club's opera-reading department. The enlarged department will have William Tyroler as its director and Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith as reader.

Announcement is also made at this time of the election of Paul H. Ehlers as a member of the club's board of trustees.

For the program of the 29th inst. —this event initiating a Friday-evening program instead of Saturday evening as formerly—the club members will enjoy many interesting and representative features from the various departments, including drama, music, dancing and literature.

One of the novelties of the drama program will be the presentation of "The Bathroom Door," the sketch in which the Prince of Wales played the leading role on his trip across the Atlantic to America recently. William Hullinger's flute quartet will present several numbers.

Reservations for the dinner may be made of Miss Belle N. Hall, 1131 Elden avenue.

Euterpe Opera Reading

Richard Wagner's "Lohengrin" will be presented at the next meeting of the Euterpe Opera Reading Club, to be conducted at the Ambassador Theater, Tuesday, the 26th inst. at 10:30 a.m. The public is invited. Admission will be charged.

Mrs. Hazel Bartlett Stevens will read "Bernice," by Susan Glaspell, before the drama section and Mrs. Harry E. Fisher, curator, will discuss the classic form of music before the music section.

Clear and concrete word pictures of the people of France, England and Germany and other countries were drawn by Lyman Lloyd Bryson, A.M., widely known author, traveler and lecturer, in his address Tuesday morning on "The Average Citizen and Our Foreign Affairs." Preceding the lecture, Mrs. John Henry Van Dugteren, pianist, played a nocturne, "Reminiscences of Chopin," by Naprawnik. Miss Adeline Prouty, mezzo-soprano, pupil of Mrs. Van Dugteren, sang several attractive songs. They were "Pale Moon," (Logan,) "Elegie," (Massenet,) and "Wake Up," (Phillips.) Miss Winifred Rouzee reviewed the book of I Samuel, chapter by chapter, before the Bible section. Mrs. Mary D. Howard is curator of the section, which is one of the best attended in the club.

Women's Democratic League

Mrs. Leon Hamlin Hurtt will be the principal speaker at the Woman's Democratic League regular session Thursday at 2 p.m. in the conference room, woman's department, Bank of Italy, at Seventh and Olive streets. It is promised that the speaker will bring an inspiring message of world peace. Together with her mother and sister, Mrs. Enoch Pepper and Miss Pepper, Mrs. Hurtt has recently returned from a trip to Europe, where, with letters of introduction from New York, they were able to make many interesting international contacts to observe and enjoy; among them a week spent at Geneva attending the institute held there in August out of which so much of world importance has come to pass.

West Ebell

For the benefit of the endowment fund the West Ebell Club will hold a luncheon Wednesday at Marchetti's, 501 South Western avenue. A dance and card party is planned for Saturday, the 30th inst.

Santa Monica Club

One of the outstanding services of the Santa Monica Bay Woman's Club to the community is the presentation of a series of symphony concerts by the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, the second of which will occur Tuesday at the Municipal Auditorium. Soloists have been selected from among bay district musicians, the artist for this event being Carolyn LeFevre, a young violinist who has recently made her first appearance with the Philharmonic Orchestra in Los Angeles. This is the fourth season of the club's sponsorship of symphony her home last Monday evening she found a number of her friends assembled to help her celebrate her birthday anniversary. Cards were played and a delicious midnight supper was served by the guests, who included Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Carl, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Cloud, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Miligan, Mrs. Elizabeth McCord, Mrs. J. H. White and Dr. Paul J. Holmes.

Activities of Hosts and Hostesses in Society's Week

Mrs. Frank Salmacia was the charming hostess for the Y.L.I. dance and entertainment given Friday evening at the Holy Family School auditorium. A clever skit, "Squaring It With the Boss" was enjoyed immensely by the guests. The proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Knights of Columbus baseball team.

Imperial Valley

"Missions of California" was the subject selected by the members of the history section, in charge of the program of the El Centro Woman's Ten Thousand Club Thursday afternoon. The auditorium was transformed into a beautiful Spanish setting and members of the dinner committee, in charge of Mrs. N. A. Contos, presided at the Spanish luncheon that preceded the program. Pictures of the different missions marked the places for nearly 106 club members. Following the luncheon members of the history section took charge of the meeting. The rising of the curtain revealed a typical scene of old California days—a rude cross had been erected, a mission bell hung, and an Indian hut stood amidst the rustic setting. At the back of the stage was hung a map of El Camino Real,—the king's highway. Ross T. Hickcox, in the opening number, gave the pre-mission history of California. Mrs. Hugh T. Osborne, accompanied by Mrs. George A. Hartman, sang "La Golondirna," and Mrs. Charles E. Sones read John Steven McGroarty's poem, "The King's Highway." Mrs. Ray Edgar told of the establishment of the missions, and members of the history section, dressed in robes of Franciscan friars, described briefly the various missions. Those participating in this event, included Mmes. Vern Bishop, W. F. North, I. W. McGrew, G. W. Nance, U. L. Martin, T. H. Gebbie, F. D. Jacobs, H. C. Cee and Neil Hickcox. Throughout the program the choir of St. Mary's Catholic Church sang the cant, "Kyrie Eleison," and others, off stage.

Among the attractive affairs of the week in Calexico was the bridge-luncheon with which Mrs. Kyle McBratney, Mrs. S. H. Lockett, Mrs. John C. Anderson and Mrs. I. L. Foster entertained Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. McBratney. Red and green formed the color note in the decorations. Those present were Mmes. Malcolm H. Huey, Gilbert W. Stevens, O. A. Pratt, F. Herbert Reddish, Frank Danino, W. H. Goode, Lee Little, B. L. Brady, Frank E. Raab, S. H. Lockett, I. L. Foster, J. C. Anderson, H. C. Hier, Kyle McBratney and Miss Pauline Hartman.

Rose-colored carnations and greenery formed the attractive decoration for a delightfully informal party given Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Foster in Brawley. Those attending the affair included Mr. and Mrs. Alton Jeffus, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Arntee, Mr. and Mrs. Rex Tabor, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Hoopes, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Coffey, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Noah Garick, Mr. and Mrs. George McLean, Mrs. Huey Van Hern, Mrs. D. Lobe and Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Foster.

Mrs. Virgil Edwards of Meloland was hostess at a pretty bridge party Tuesday afternoon, at which desert flowers and foliage were combined in effective decoration. The prize scores at bridge were made by Mrs. Fred Walker and Mrs. W. O. Pond. Other guests attending the party were Mmes. Claude Smith, William Johnston, Dan Scott, Ben Christian, Arthur Farley, Ward McGrew, Earle Summers, Rueben Neifert, Wilmen Swerdfeger, Homer Spear, Ralph Engebretson, John Zenos and Ethel V. O'Neil.

Fifty couples attended the opening event of the 1926 season held by the Entire Nous Club Tuesday evening at the Woman's clubhouse in El Centro. The auditorium was transformed into a midwinter snow scene, juniper and cedar branches, sparkling with "snow," icicle laden boughs ornamenting the chandeliers and a snow scene on the stage with a little house and snow man, all lending a realistic touch to the setting.

Unusually attractive features of the ball were the sleigh bell dance and the snowball dance. Miss Lucille Huebner of Holtville entertained with solo dances which received much applause.

The committee who arranged the charming affair included Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Kenyon and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Smith.

Of interest to their friends in Calipatria was the wedding of Miss Bessie Watkinds, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cash Watkinds, and William J. Young, which was solemnized Saturday evening at the home of Judge and Mrs. P. N. Meyers. Miss Grace McDonald was the bridesmaid and Thomas Harvey acted as best man. Relatives and a few intimate friends were the only guests. On their return from a honeymoon trip to San Francisco Mr. and Mrs. Young will be at home to their friends at their new home on Barbara street.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Johnson of Brawley entertained at dinner Thursday evening at their home on K street. After the dinner a theater party was enjoyed. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Born, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Dietheim, Mrs. Marie Born, Mr. and Mrs. L. I. Pritten and Joseph Thompson.

Venice

Mrs. Persis Wise of 806 Woodlawn avenue, was the charming hostess at a delightful affair recently when she entertained eighteen Past-Matrons of the Eastern Star with a four-course luncheon followed by an enjoyable social afternoon at her home. Calla lilies and poinsettias were employed in the decorations of the house and the beautifully appointed luncheon table and made a most effective combination. Following the delectable luncheon, the guests participated in a literary program, each one contributing something of real interest to her fellow-guests. A paper was read by Mrs. Isobel Vawter, president of the club, composed of Past-Matrons. The guest of honor was Mrs. Agnes Blackborn visiting in Venice from Portland, Or.

On the occasion of the ninth birthday anniversary of her daughter, Betty Lee, Mrs. Daisy Whitaker of 763 Nowita Place, entertained with a delightful dinner party for a group of intimate friends. Fragrant flowers of the season decorated the prettily appointed dinner table with harmonizing favors marking the places for Mrs. Peggy Swall, Elnora May Swall, Janice Whitaker, Clifford Valley, the honoree and the hostess. Following the delicious dinner the guests were further entertained by Mrs. Whitaker with a theater party at the Egyptian Theater.

Complimenting her daughter, Miss Barbara Sanderson, who is also her house guest, Mrs. John Sanderson entertained most charmingly on Thursday week with a luncheon at her home on Avenue 25. The guest of honor, who is a teacher, is visiting her mother during the winter holidays in Helena, Mont., where she is employed. Covers were laid at the attractively decorated luncheon table for the honoree, Mrs. George Easterbrook, Miss Barbara Esterbrook, Mrs. Donald Schlatter, Mrs. Lucian Zander, Miss Martha Sanderson and the hostess.

Society of Venice is happy over the acquisition of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Davis who have recently made their home here, locating on Elm street. Mr. Davis is prominent in construction engineering circles of Los Angeles and comes formerly from Cambridge, Mass. Mrs. Davis already has many friends in the Bay District as she lived in Venice for several years prior to her marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Davis entertained recently with a delightfully informal dinner party at their home. The guests around the artistically appointed dinner table included Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Racek, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Racek and their son, Scott, Mr. and Mrs. George Diamond and their daughter, Betty, of Long Beach, and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Racek.

Santa Monica

"Caederwen," the attractive home of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Davie in Topango Canyon, was the setting recently for a jolly picnic in which a number of socially prominent Santa Monicans took part. There were about sixty who enjoyed the outing. Games were played at the Girl Scout camp which is on the property belonging to "Caederwen," and the children enjoyed horseback riding along the bridle trails. Among the families present were Dr. and Mrs. Robert O'Neal, Mr. and Mrs. Leland M. Ford, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Vallat, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Frese, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Gage, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Maskey. Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Clay H. White of Long Beach; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hawse of Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. Davie's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Reid from Marinette, Ariz.

A delightful compliment of the week was given by Miss Arta Rogers at her home on Fourth street, when she entertained for Mrs. Marx A. Postlewaite, Jr., on Friday evening. Mrs. Postlewaite is a recent bride now living in Los Angeles and adding to the happiness of the evening for her was the presence of her sister, Mrs. Lillian Watts from her former home at Vancouver, Wash. Mrs. Watts is the house guest of Mrs. C. C. Crawford of Santa Monica. Bridge was provided by the hostess for the entertainment of her guests. After a pleasant evening spent at cards the guests were served by Miss Rogers with a dainty repast. The home was effectively decorated with marigolds and cornflowers. Guests for the happy affair besides the honoree were Misses Mary Billings, Doris McCready Margaret Hills, and Dorothy Warren, and Mmes. Lillian Watts, C. C. Crawford, Henry Grinnell, Chancellor Griggs, Armin Schreiber and Sam Kelly.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Carrillo of Georgina avenue, have as their house guest, Mrs. J. D. Genger of Oakland, who will be with her for ten days. Mrs. Genger's mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Genge, was also a house guest of the Carrillos the first of the week. A lovely little farewell dinner party for eight was given by Mr. and Mrs. Carrillo on Tuesday evening in honor of Mrs. Elizabeth Genger, who left on Wednesday morning for her home in Philadelphia, and they are planning a number of delightful affairs for their present guest.

Eagle Rock

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Witcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Sheridan Witcher of Highland View, to Lieut. Harvey Walsh last Monday came as a surprise to friends of both. No formal announcement of the engagement had been made because both the young people wished to avoid the formality of a Navy wedding. The ceremony took place in the Lady's Chapel of St. John's Church at 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon with only the family and a few very close friends witnessing it. Mrs. Frank Watkins was the matron of honor. She is a Kappa Delta sister of the bride. Lieut. Watkins, U.S.N., acted as best man. The bride wore a frock of lovebird green with a black picture hat. Her flowers were camelias and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Watkins wore orchid chiffon with a large black hat. Lieut. Walsh and his bride went to San Francisco for a honeymoon and upon their return will make their home in Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Eugene Yates have returned from their honeymoon and are at home to their friends at 1335 Indiana avenue, South Pasadena. Mrs. Yates is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. E. Sinclair Smith of Ellenwood Place and her recent marriage was a social event here.

Mrs. Ada Tinker of Berkeley who has been the house guest of her daughter, Mrs. H. I. Cruzan of Oak Tree Trail, has returned to her home. Mrs. Cruzan's brother, George Burnham of Searles Lake, who was her guest over the holidays, accompanied his mother home.

Mr. Albert and Mr. John Luethold, 18-year-old twin sons of Senator Henry Luethold of Columbus, Mont., have been visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Emma Luethold of Ridgeview. Mrs. Luethold's daughter, Mrs. R. Sheldon of Bakersfield, also has been a guest at her home.

San Pedro

In compliment to Mrs. Kate L. Thompson, District Deputy President of the Rebekahs, and Mrs. Emma McLin, Grand Marshall, a dinner of charming appointments was given recently by the former's staff, at a San Pedro cafe, preceding annual installation of the officers of the Ocean Queen Rebekah lodge. The lodge colors, pink and green, were predominant in the decorative arrangement. Covers were laid for Mmes. Kate L. Thompson, Emma McLin, Cora Burton, Hattie Midkiff, Hulda Sessions, Pearl V. Clark, Della Goodrich, Ollie Wood, May Northway, Carrie Lenhouse, Maline Sandstrom, Ermina Eaton, Jessie Shehl, J. Fitzgerald (nee Ruth Cartwright,) who were wedded during the Christmas holidays. The trophy for high score was awarded Mrs. Jeanna Scott, while the consolation prize went to Mrs. E. L. Wheden, and lovely gifts were presented to Mrs. Fitzgerald by the participating group. Guests numbered twenty-four.

Honors were shared by Mrs. B. L. Fitzgerald (nee Ruth Cartwright,) and Miss Jean MacGillivray at a delightful affair given Monday night at the Y.W.C.A. building by the Blue Monday Club. Mrs. Fitzgerald's recent marriage and Miss MacGillivray's coming departure for Panama afforded the incentive for the affair, at which both were given gifts. Those attending were Mrs. B. L. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Paul Eckerson and Misses Jean MacGillivray, Minnie Williams, Mildred McPherson, Mary Hackerman, Katherine Chan, E. Schenzel, Irveena Morris, Lyda Snodgrass, Myra MacMillan, Etta Williams, Elizabeth Carlisle, Edith Jack, Anstis Tucker and Sybil Morisset.

The participants entered through the back door and the dessert course of the 7 o'clock dinner was served first. A feature of the dinner, which preceded lively games, was the presentation of an attractive gift to Miss MacGillivray. Mrs. Paul Hastings, Mrs. Fred Williams, Miss Lottie Mae Boyd and Miss Ruth Limecooly served as hostesses.

Beauty Can Be Multiplied

By Edna Wallace Hopper

I have proved that beauty can be multiplied and youth extended. For 40 years I have searched the ways, largely through scientists of France. They made me a famous beauty, gained me a glorious career. And they have kept my youth. At a grandmother's age, thousands see me daily on the stage looking like a girl.

I am placing the best helps I have found at every woman's call. All toilet counters supply them in my name. Each one combines a number of the best helps modern science knows.

One is my White Youth Clay. I have seen it bring to countless girls multiplied beauty in one-half hour. And many women, in 30 minutes, seem to drop ten years. I want all to learn what White Youth Clay can do for them, and quickly.

Another is my Youth Cream. It combines in one cream a dozen of the best helps I have found. It fosters, feeds and protects the skin like nothing else I know. Night or day, I never go an hour without it. Nor should you.

Another is my Powder — the finest powder we have found in Moviedom and Stagedom. I used to pay $5 per box to obtain it. Now the makers supply it to you, in my name, at very little prices.

The coupon with a dime will bring you liberal samples of all three. Enough to show you what they mean to girls and women. My Beauty Book will come with them. If you want the utmost in beauty, at any age, clip the coupon now.

Society of Cinemaland

by Isabel Stuyvesant

For the most part it is the smaller, more intimate social affairs of Cinemaland and the premieres of great productions shown exclusively in Hollywood or on Broadway that are the highlights to be projected first in Society of Cinemaland. But last week an affair of brilliance and at the same time a delightfully informal function captured the attention of all cinema folk. Indeed to mention the list of guests at the inaugural ball of the Two Hundred and Thirty-three Club at the Biltmore Thursday evening would be to name virtually every star that has risen on the horizon of Cinemaland, who are now in Hollywood. It was a gala throng of more than 2500 in attendance, to make room for whom in dancing officials hurriedly made arrangements for another ballroom in addition to the magnificent gold and blue room of the hostelry, while beautifully gowned women and their escorts promenaded the Galleria Real.

One of the first to greet me was John Ince, who was rustling around, as they say in the westerns, making everyone feel at home in the old-fashioned way. And he did it; for his smile, his handshake and his calls to the various committee heads to put the ball in motion were delightful, breezy and even charming as befits an occasion that is designated on engraved invitations as a "formal inaugural ball," Bryant Washburn sporting a mustache and doubling for a perfect host was shadowed by the genial Jean Hersholt. T. Roy Barnes as master of ceremonies was, of course, about the whole show. He was too busy to be much of a host, though no one expected that.

"NAMES" GALORE

Ernest Torrence nevt appeared in my range of vision, but he was too engrossed in a tall blond whom he escorted to see my nod over the heads of the intervening. Of Walter Hiers's adored wife I could see little for the man of capitalized corpulency remained so close by her side that it was impossible. Pride in her was in evidence, however. Henry Walthal, correct in attire, quiet as usual with a sort of Peter Pannish quality of never seeming to grow old came next and then Roy Stewart, busy hosting and talking to all of his old friends.

Ruth Clifford with friend husband, who directed her movements with some gruffness as befits a caveman stunt, was striking in a crimson red velvet dress, but otherwise nondescript in her very blondness, her very youthfulness and her very I-don't-know-what-to-do look. Walter Long with his usual pool-room look of sophistication was met by everyone and made a fuss over, proving that the pool-room look is only veneer, not pool-room polish. Maurice Costello was with his two daughters, one whom whose name I do not know, looked fragile and beautiful in a green georgette gown and her slenderness silhouetted in a shawl closely wrapped about her and designed with the ultra-futuristic confusion.

HOSTESS BUSY

The only woman formally introduced to the guests was Jule Power, wife of Edwards Davis, who is president of the club, which is Masonic in its origin. She was chief hostess of the evening, a difficult position tactfully and charmingly filled. She was gowned in chiffon heavily beaded with crystal. Her lovely gray hair was unadorned without bandeau or flower which made her striking among women.

And these are only a few of the many with whom we talked and danced and ate at the buffet during the evening. One there is outside the circle of cinemaland who compelled attention. It was Rex Goodcell, who made a speech. A speech at a ball!

Masons connected with the motion-picture industry and who were members of the Masonic Lodge, 233, New York City, are members of the club now numbering 1350, though organized less than a year ago. There is a waiting list of more than 300.

GRANGE IN CINEMALAND

Bears and Tigers, "Red Grange and football." Just how do they connect with society of cinemaland? I'll tell you. As many of cinemaland as could make it went out to the Coliseum yesterday to see on a June day in January under a blue sky the great game of the Pacific Coast, not only for this year but for many years past. Among the 75,000 present were a comparatively large number of cinema stars. Indeed, several types of stars were in the ascendancy—stars of the grid, stars of the screen and the stars seen by both the Bears and Tigers when tackled. But for me, and here, it is for the stars of the screen to be projected.

What a piquant array of sport suits and furs the latter quickly discarded. Constance Talmadge was her usual striking self bubbling over with enthusiasm contagious to those exposed, who yesterday were sister Norma and Joseph Schenck, both of them spirited by the effervescent Connie. There, too, was blond Marion Davies and Corinne Griffith with friend husband, Walter Morosco. I never had seen her excited before except on the screen in "Classified," but yesterday she tempered her enthusiasm as exquisitely as she does everything else. To her belongs the adjective incongruous with football—exquisite. Theda Bara loved the suspense of the miraculous passes. She would half rise, use her lorgnette, give a subdued yell that in a flapper would be called a squeal, and sink back until the next of her favorite plays was about to begin. Charlie Chaplin was there, too. I didn't see his wife but Charlie was interested enough for the whole family.

I was told that Mary and Doug were there, but I did not see her in her white sport suit and that sweet smile that belongs to her and to her alone. Among others noted were: Al and Charles Christie, William Beaudine, J. L. Warner, Frank Borzage, Raoul Walsh, John Ford, Alfred Green, Mahlon Hamilton, Lew Cody—"Hold that line! Oh, you beautiful pass, why don't you complete it—ball won't bite. We want a touchdown—Come on!" Lew is good at that. Then there were: Charles Ray, George Hill, Reginald Barker, Robert Z. Leonard (just Bob at the ball but Robert at football.)

MARY PICKFORD CHIEF

Not for some time until last Monday evening had Our Girls' Club enjoyed their cozy clannishness; for this organization of beautiful young women whose honorary president is Mary Pickford have been taking a holiday. Monday, however, Carmel Myers was the charming hostess to the group, entertaining at her Ambassador bungalow until a late supper hour, when loveliness in the aggregate as embodied in Mildred Davis, Virginia Valli, Laura La Plante, Patsy Ruth Miller, Pauline Garon, Gertrude Olmstead, Ruth Roland, Carmelita Gerahty, Gloria Hope, Virginia Fox, and the hostess went down into the bright lights of Cocoanut Grove to sup and eat salt together, that thereafter they might never speak evil of one another. To be sure they had other things to eat than the proverbial salt, and spice was added to the affair and fare by a happy surprise. Bob Leonard had marshalled enough bachelors and husbands together who descended in mass formation as partners of the dance and for other more novel features of entertainment planned beforehand by Mr. Leonard. This group included: Harold Lloyd, Norman Kerry, King Vidor, Lloyd Hughes, Richard Roland, Jack Conway, Jack White, John Gilbert, Daral Vanuck, Douglas Gilmore and James Bard.

Mah Jongg Party

Virginia Lee Corbin was the hostess yesterday at her home, 2028 North Beechwood Drive, entertaining with a mah jongg party. All the appointments of the card tables, the refreshments and place cards were carried out in the Chinese motif, while the waiters also were from the Flowery Kingdom and dressed as others from the great empire across the Pacific Ocean. Even the ice cream had a curious Chinese design, which meant happiness and good will. Those who enjoyed Miss Corbin's hospitality included: Marceline and Alice Day, the former soon to be known almost exclusively as Barbara Worth; Mary Brian of "Peter Pan" fame to begin with; Dorothy Dwan, Joyce Compton, Joan Meredith, Marion Dixon, Rachel Smith, Marcella Le Vine, Alberta Vaughn, Dorothy Manners and Ann Cornwall.

Entertainments

Frank Dazey of Hollywood, playwright, and author of a new play, "The Wasnout," and his wife, Agnes Christine Johnston, noted scenario writer, were among the recent guests at the Casa de Manana, La Jolla, Cal.

When Adele Whitley Fletcher, well-known magazine editor, arrived in Hollywood last week, she found the elite of Cinemaland ready to welcome and entertain her. During her week's stay she was entertained at luncheon by Ruth Roland, with Vilma Banky, Corliss Palmer, Mrs. Conway Tearle and Mrs. Henry King as guests. On Sunday evening, Mrs. Antonio Moreno opened her lovely hilltop home to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Morosco (Corinne Griffith,) Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lloyd (Mildred Davis,) Florence Vidor, George Fitzmaurice, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ray, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Nagel, Helen Carlisle, Ernest Vadja, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Franklin, with Miss Fletcher and her husband, Robert Domiston, as guests of honor.

Corinne Griffith's luncheon to Miss Fletcher was held at the Montmartre, and was attended by Claire Windsor, who, by the way, seems lost without her husband, Bert Lytell, since he has been playing matinee and evening performances in "Silence;" Mrs. Carey Wilson, Leatrice Joy, Carmel Myers, Anna Q. Nilsson, Norma Shearer, Gertrude Olmstead, Florence Vidor, Mrs. Antonio Moreno, Helen Carlisle and Mildred Lloyd.

Miss Fletcher expressed delight at the warm hospitality of her Hollywood friends, and at the lovely atmosphere of the Hollywood-Plaza Hotel, where she stayed.

Mrs. Frank Fee and her son Edward, gave a delightful dinner party at the Edgewater Club last Friday evening, in honor of Mrs. Vernon Murray, a recent arrival from London. Among the guests were Mrs. Calhoun and her daughter Alice, J. J. Curl, Huston Ray, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Boyle.

Mrs. Wallace Reid entertained a party of four at a box party at the Morosco Saturday night.

Walter Purcell entertained at a charming breakfast party at his home Sunday morning. Alice Calhoun was the guest of honor. Other guests were Ruth Roland, Ben Bard, Huston Ray and Blanche Merrill, the writer.

Dorothy Dunbar entertained Wednesday with a dinner party at the Montmartre at which her guests were Mr. and Mrs. Reed Howes, Jowitt Anthony and Mr. and Mrs. Renaud Hoffman. Miss Dunbar's regal type of beauty appeared to an advantage in a gown of silver.

One of the most charming dinner parties given during the season was the one at which Pauline Pane, the attractive young woman from New York, entertained a number of prominent cinema writers at the Montmartre Wednesday evening. The guests included Whitney Williams, Dorothy Manners, Dorothy Spensley, Margaret Reed, Mr. and Mrs. James Starr, Dorothy Marquette, Mrs. Mann, Jack Townley, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Westrate, Mrs. Myra Nye, Carroll Nye, Myrtle Gebhart, Mr. and Mrs. Don Krull, Harriette Penman, James Nagel, Dorothy and Mrs. Wooldridge.

Atmosphere of the days when the great musicians of the world met in cafes in Paris and other musical centers of the old world pervades the home of Alice Calhoun on Sunday afternoons. Famous musicians, artists, and writers meet there to talk over their latest compositions, and to play them for the pleasure of those present. Last Sunday Miss Calhoun entertained Dr. Rathstein, Dr. Trattner, Mr. Tresser, Huston Ray, Miss Zubrinsky, Mr. George Achorn, Mr. Len Achorn, Mr. Rosenthal, Mr. and Mrs. Abdo, Mr. and Mrs. Eduard, Mme. De Lante, Mr. Carl Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Thomas and Mr. Ben Bard.

Here and There

Mr. and Mrs. William Russell (Helen Ferguson) and Mr. and Mrs. A. Carlos arrived in Los Angeles last week after a long absence in Gotham. After pictures are commenced here the Russells plan a trip to Paris, where they will take over the Concordia interests. Mr. Carlos will begin production of eight pictures here.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cruze (Betty Compson) arrived from Europe having sailed from Southampton and coming into New York Harbor yesterday.

Ralph Spence has temporarily closed his apartments at the Hollywood Plaza Hotel and gone to New York for a stay of three weeks.

Damascus, Bagdad and the Holy Land have been added to the itinerary of Fred Niblo, director of the screen spectacle "Ben Hur," and his wife, Enid Bennett, according to word received by cable by friends in Hollywood. Mr. and Mrs. Niblo are enjoying this vacation voyage after the New York premiere of "Ben Hur." They will visit London and other large European cities, thence to Italy, where many of the scenes in the big picture were taken, and thence to Damascus. They will return by March 1, for the Los Angeles opening of the big production.

Mrs. Rex Ingram (Alice Terry) will return to Hollywood as soon as she has finished the picture in which she now is working, but friend husband will remain in Nice. It is Hollywood for Alice and Nice for Rex, but no divorce is implied. Ultramarines of Italy do not make up for her for the ultramarines of California.

Ena Gregory has received a cablegram from Australia telling her that a baby kangaroo is being sent to her by some Australian friends. Ena, the baby star, was born in Australia and much of her fan mail as well as the kangaroo comes from the biggest island.

John Roche recently has returned from New York.

Helen Lee Worthing will arrive in Hollywood this week. She has been in New York for several weeks.

Vadin Uraneff, one of Russia's best-known actors, has come to Hollywood and will be seen first in "Siberia," being produced for Fox Films.

RETURNS FROM DESERT

H. B. Warner has returned from location on the Mojave Desert, where the final scenes for "Whispering Smith," a Metropolitan production, were filmed. In this film drama Warner spent fourteen days in the saddle. George Melford is directing. Lillian Rich plays the feminine role.

SUB-DEB-ROSA

by Peggy Nye

Last week Babs, my chum, and I went out to Hollywood to catch stars in their native haunts and news about them in its more or less hokum and accuracy. Of course, we couldn't agree as to just which place in the pool to cast our fly. Now my English teachers says never to mix metaphors, but stars, trout, pool, sky and fly sound well together—and you know what I mean n'everything.

Anyway Babs wanted to plant herself patiently in front of the Montmartre corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Highland, a little study in static, watching the world go by. But I wanted to bring the world to me by prancing down the boulevard. Ever since I took that scenic excursion I told you about a week ago I have a peculiar fondness for the boulevard. So we arbitrated and sat down, Babs winning, and another world peace declared.

Ricardo Cortez went by in a foxy, low-slung roadster. That was enough to make anyone stop arguing about a little thing like star-chasing, and besides we were so thrilled about seeing Ricardo that we just had to sit down on the corner bench and rave. Babs breathed a rapturous sigh about his eyes. I mean by that she liked his eyes and said so, but I didn't see any use in gazing at his eyes when there was the rest of his face and his smile to look at. However, we did agree that we didn't blame Alma Rubens one bit for being the future Mrs. Ricardo Cortez. It happens next month.

Babs's static had it again. We were too excited to move. We just sat.

We were just drifting off into that dreamy bliss that romps along after such a series of passes when Lewis Stone drove by in a—oh, I don't remember what make the car was, and that doesn't mean that I'm crawling out of admitting that Lewis was sporting a Ford. He really wasn't, but I can't be expected to remember what its last name was in a time like that!

I tried to tell Babs casually and condescendingly that Mr. Stone was passing, but all I could manage was an excited hiss that I'm sure everyone on the boulevard must have heard. For crying out loud! I always do show my 16-year-old age!

We saw Wallace Beery and his most-awfully-pretty wife, too. They came out of one of the book stores, and I saw a copy of Anatole France himself tucked under Wallace's arm. As I've said before, I keep my shock absorbers well trained. Wallie and Anatole—oh, dear!

And now what do you think? We saw Hallam Cooley! I had been aching to see the Warren that could speak so crossly to his Helen, and kick such a darling cat as Pussy-Purr-Mew round. He was walking along talking to another man, and I'm glad he was so interested in his conversational topic that he didn't see the adoring looks tendered him by two Sub-dued Roses. We were agreeably surprised with Hal.

Then came the convention. Of course, I don't 'spose it really was one. There were five men all crowded into one nondescript gray coupe, and one of them was Doug Fairbanks. He looked so businesslike and practical that Babs asked me if it was the same Fairbanks who played in that fairy-tale picture. My scathing look as I answered in the affirmative squelched her unnecessary ignorance (I hope!) but it really made me a hardened hypocrite. I was in doubt about the same thing.

Just as we decided to call it a day we saw another hero of Cinemaland. However, he wasn't on the boulevard, so he is in the category of my next week's explosion, namely, cinema homes.

Anyway, to finish up the day the duet of us (that sounds strange, but you know what I mean) decided that we would have been sufficiently satisfied to have just seen Mr. Pony Express Cortez, we'll exist on that thrill for the next week, at least.

As for the news I gathered here there and everywhere, it follows with a semicolon or colon. News always does follow a fellow about, just like gossip, good or bad.

Barbara Le Marr is reported to be improving rapidly at her home in Altadena. Last week no hope was held out for her by the attending physicians, but through their unceasing efforts her condition has steadily gained. We are glad. Barbara doesn't deserve a relapse after her sporting attitude to all bad luck.

By far the most distinguished guest of the week was Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Hays was most favorable in his comments on the screen productions of the past year and stated that many of the late pictures compare favorably with the best in art, in drama, and in literature. All of which served to make him even more beloved to his cinema friends.

Alma Rubens, Ricardo Cortez and Leonia Frucht, cook of Miss Rubens, were the participants in a most interesting and technical little argument about appetite and ducks, early last week. Miss Frucht cooked three ducks. Alma invited Ricardo to dinner and they ate two. Ricardo was hungry. Alma went to get the other bird. It was disappearing swiftly into the mouth of Miss Frucht. Miss Frucht was turned out of the house, sans possessions. Thereby hangs a legal question—without an answer.

A campaign for beauty is being conducted in Los Angeles. Not the natural beauty, but the man-made structures that might be so much more pleasing to the eye. Mary Pickford once wrote to The Times some remarkable suggestions for the beautification of the city, saying that Los Angeles Harbor could be made one of the most beautiful in the world should steps be taken to eliminate the hideous warehouses and put in their place more sightly structures. Harry Carr tells us that he passed these suggestions on to a well-known shipping man. "What's she want to do, plant geraniums?" he snorted. "From which," says Harry, "I was forced to conclude that while God may have distributed other things equally, He was singularly choosey when he sorted out the brains of the world."

Little Marie Prevost has returned to her home in Beverly Hills from the Hollywood Hospital, where she underwent a minor operation. She will not be able to leave her home for a week or ten days, but her friends have many plans to keep her from any lonely hours.

The Pickford-Fairbanks hegira to Europe will not take place until March 2, says reports from Pickfair. Business and the convalescing of Miss Pickford's mother are the reasons for the postponement.

Gaston Glass has just returned from New York. That is, officially. Rumor has it that he has been in town for some time.

Mississippi has again lost the tiny Johnsons, the kiddies who appear in Mary Pickford's forthcoming production. They were duly sent back home with their mother. But when Miss Pickford found that she had a few more scenes to take, the tots were shipped back to Hollywood, where they now are. And the names of those small Johnsons, as I know well, being acquainted with them all, are: Kenneth, Dick Winslow, Cammilla, Leessel and Baby Carmencita, who is now nearly 3 years of age. They are the children of Sidney K. Johnson and Wynonah B. Johnson, the former a newspaper man and the latter a writer.

A colonial motif will be carried out at the next ladies'-day event, which is scheduled for February 23, when Mmes. W. J. Towner, L. G. Stone, J. D. Slemons and J. S. Dutton will be in charge.

HAWAII SCHOOL TEACHES BLIND

erick E. Steere. At that time, the superintendent of public instruction did not consider the matter of defective children a public-school problem.

It was not until 1914 that the first school was established. Seven children, deaf, blind, feeble-minded and epileptic, were enrolled, under the direction of the first principal, Miss Gertrude Mason. The first schoolroom was in an old Chinese hospital.

In 1922, a legislative ruling was passed making the institution a boarding-school and opening it to children from all the islands. The feeble-minded were also eliminated at this time and the present name assumed the next year.

According to Mrs. Lacy, the average child does not go beyond the eighth grade. But if a deaf student has been trained for eight years in such a school, he is perfectly capable of entering the public high school and keeping up with his classmates.

But the main hope of the teachers at the Territorial school is to fit the children for useful lives, during which they will have no stigma of helplessness upon them. Vocational training is especially stressed.

A remarkable place, this little school up in its green valley—far from the Honolulu known to the casual pleasure-seeker.

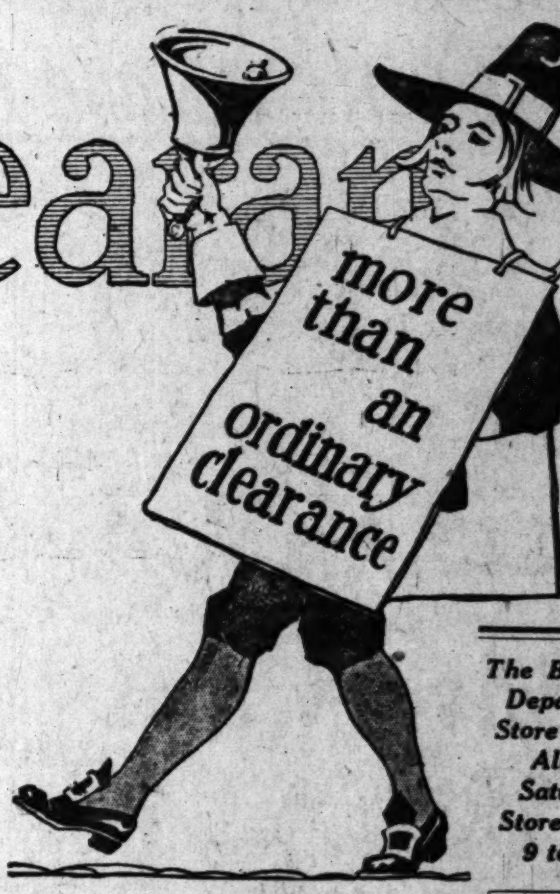
Annual Clearance



more than an ordinary clearance

—With almost an entire change of program

The Broadway's Only Clearance of All The Year Enters Its Third Great Value-Giving Week Monday, January 18th

This, "more than an ordinary" clearance, is now entering its third week and we are broadcasting by means of this 4-page advertisement a synopsis of Monday's offerings. Many, many other items are equally as attractively priced.

Watch the Broadway's display windows on Broadway—on Fourth Street—on Hill Street—the evening papers throughout the week and make it a point to come into the store and look for the Annual Clearance signs.

As to a general comparison in the amount of building done in the two States, the latest figures for Florida at hand are the total for five of her cities for the year 1924 amounting to $35,197,682. For the same period in California the total for fourteen cities was $298,093,855. The figures must be given that way here because they are the only general totals available for the two States covering a similar recent period of time. No effort was made to "hand pick" the cities in either State so that the figures represent a general average. More recent building figures covering Los Angeles and Miami will be presented further on in this article.

The above constitutes a general picture of the two States. Now for a few "close-ups."

It may be thought that in presenting the above general picture of the two States an unfair advantage has been taken of Florida because geographically California is much larger than Florida. Well, let's just narrow California down a bit, to meet that possible objection and note the result.

The ten southern counties of California have nearly three times as much farm produce as Florida, about three and one-half times as much manufacturing as Florida, and about five times as much minerals alone as Florida's combined mineral and forest productions. And that means the entire State of Florida.

The matter of climate is important, of course. The average or mean temperature of a community tells little of the whole story of climate. The extremes of temperatures in a given community tell more. Climatically, the year 1923 is considered as a fair average "climate" year over the country. For that year the lowest temperautre at Jacksonville was 10 deg. For Los Angeles, 28 deg. And it gets decidedly hotter in Jacksonville than in Los Angeles. For instance, for thirty-eight days last year the thermometer at Jacksonville stood at 90 deg. or above. And at Los Angeles during the same year there were only nine such days. Jacksonville had 102 clear days in 1923 and Los Angeles had 225 clear days. Jacksonville registered 29 per cent sunshine and Los Angeles 72 per cent sunshine. There were four times as many rainy days in Florida (129) as in California (thirty-three) in 1923. The highest wind ever recorded in Los Angeles was forty-eight miles per hour, whereas in Jacksonville the highest wind blew at seventy-five miles per hour.

Of course, the comparative prices which land brings in both places has been discussed from all angles, an oft-repeated statement from Florida being that land in Miami brings higher prices than does land at Seventh and Broadway, in Los Angeles. And your Los Angeles realtor and banker remarks: "Yes, it merely goes to show how highly inflated Florida land values in Florida are."

In the matter of the future of Florida industrially, the question is fairly asked: "Has Florida really an opportunity for an industrial growth at all comparable to her present real estate 'boom'?" Economic experts point out that Florida is poorly situated for industrial growth. For manufacturing she is "out of luck," both as to raw materials and as to power. She has neither steam, coal or fuel oil for power purposes. Nor has she water for hydroelectric development.

California has a great "hinterland" to draw from and to market to industrially. And she has fuel oil and countless dam sites for hydroelectric power development.

In some quarters Florida is frank to admit that she has not much of a future for industrial or great agricultural growth; that she has launched forth on a gigantic scale selling a mammoth playground to the rest of the country. In other words, that her growth is merely a "tourists' growth." But the economic experts step forward again and point out that a tourist business makes Florida subject to large fluctuations due to the economic business cycles of the entire country.

California not only has a playground where to entertain the tourist, but she has a workshop in which she is constantly working — a workshop that is constantly growing. A workshop built at the threshold of the Orient with its endless markets.

As to cold cash and its distribution, here is a picture of the two States: The income-tax returns for California for 1925 amount to twice those of Florida. (And that means Federal income tax, which is operative in Florida as in the rest of the States, regardless of impressions to the contrary.) The tax returns per 100 families in California are almost two and one-half times those of Florida per 100 families. And the passenger automobiles per 100 families in California are over twice the number per 100 families in Florida.

Another indication of the comparative wealth of the two States is seen in the following statement: The purchasing power of California is six times as great as that of Florida, basing this purchasing power on the values added in manufacturing processes in the two States, plus the value of mines and fisheries products, plus crop values, plus live-stock values.

To indicate the vast superiority of California over Florida as a manufacturing State, the following figures show clearly that the value added by manufacturing in California — $762,346,000— is six times that of Florida —$120,646,000. (The latest figures along this line are from the year 1919.)

And speaking of great building booms, here are the figures on building in the two leading cities of California and Florida—Los Angeles and Miami—for the years 1924 and 1925 (save that the figures for last December are not available:)

The above is the story as told, in general, by the figures. It is the story told from the point of view of agriculture, industry and natural resources—the foundations upon which the economic structures of communities are built.

"But our great 'playground'—" Florida protests.

Does Florida's playground include the wonders of mountain ranges with their beautiful snow - capped peaks, lakes, mountain streams, resorts, and countless trails inviting the tourist and resident alike? Does the enhancement of the desert abloom in spring belong to Florida? Ocean and beaches she has, and so has California. But can the Florida family in their cottage by the sea take their morning dip, hop in the family flivver, drive through miles of fragrant orange groves, skirt the desert with its unmatchable panorama, hit the mountain road, have lunch under the big pines and get back home—all on a Sunday?

That's just a sample of California's playground.

Navy's New Repair Ship Is "Floating Navy Yar

Medusa's Crew Can Fix Anything From Big Gun to Finest Chronometer

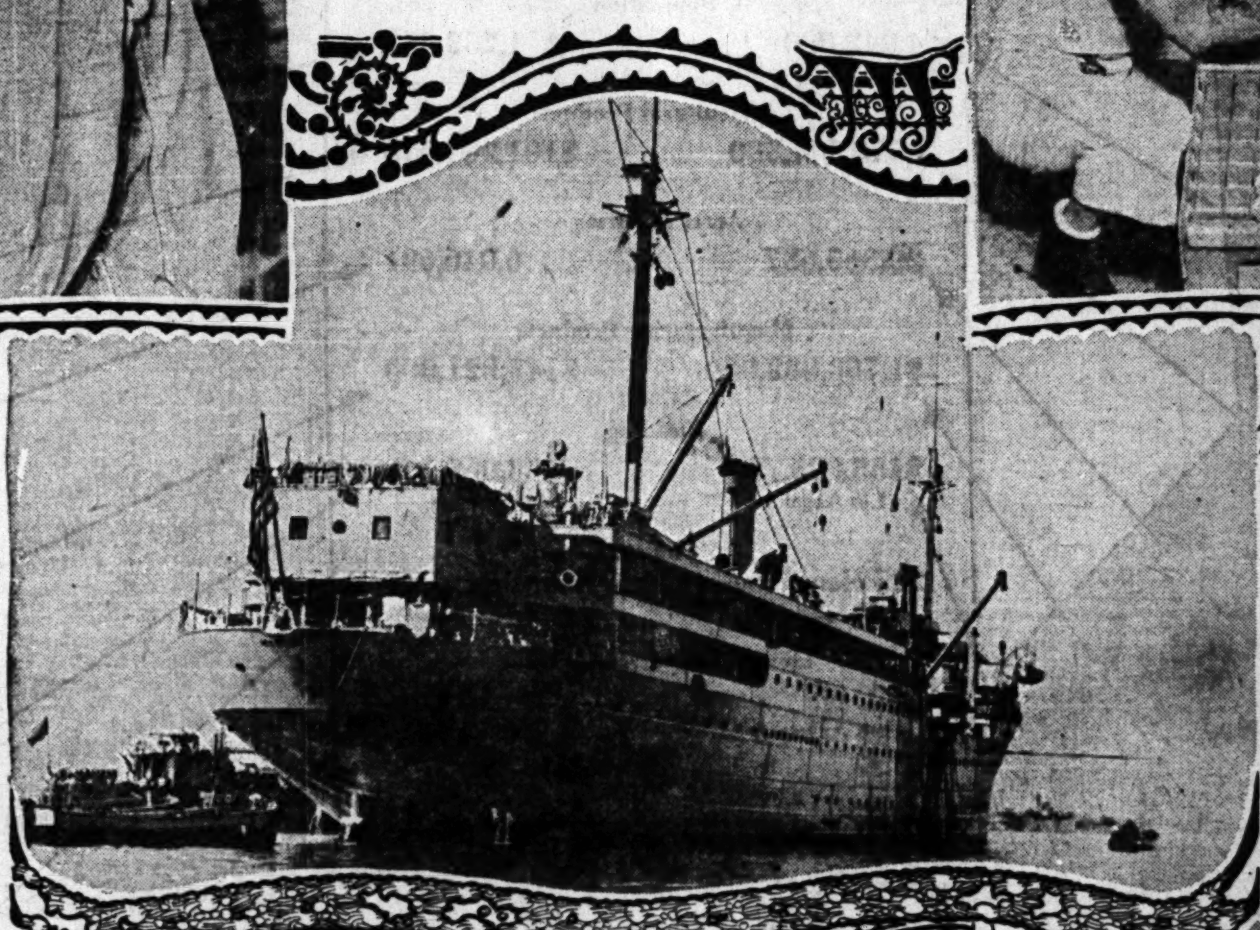
Hhe ship carries in her hold more than $1,000,000 worth of stores, ranging from costly jewels for the repair of watches to the heaviest and most bulky machinery parts. (P. & A. Photos)



By Logan E. Ruggles, U.S.N.

NO VESSEL of the United States Navy has created more interest among citizens of mechanical tendencies than the repair ship Medusa, a unit of the battle fleet with Los Angeles Harbor as its home base. The huge vessel was commissioned as repair ship No. 1 October 4, 1924, at Bremerton, Wash., having been built at the Puget Sound Navy Yard at a cost of more than $5,000,000.

The ship is commanded by Commander Milton S. Davis, who relieved Capt. R. T. Menner, her first commanding officer. The Medusa took the place in the battle fleet of the old repair vessel Prometheus, a familiar sight around San Pedro for several years, as she was then the only repair vessel. The Prometheus, however, was constructed as a navy collier and was relieved as a repair vessel when the new ship was commissioned.

The Medusa, like the hospital and train vessels, accompanies the fleet on long cruises and is equipped with the latest apparatus and machinery for repairing the large jobs on board our battleships and destroyers as well as the very smallest work, such as watches, range-finders, submarine periscopes and chronometers, delicate but vital additions to the efficiency of our fighting craft.

This great repair vessel is known throughout the fleet as a "floating navy yard," for her equipment includes a machine shop second to none afloat. It embodies a mechanical force and equipment never before placed on a vessel of the Navy, and every nook and corner of the 11,000 tons' displacement is given over to repairing of some machinery of a navy vessel.

The vessel saves many thousands of dollars to the government in repairing vessels that would otherwise be sent to navy yards. Not only would the vessel to be repaired be absent from the fleet, but cruising expenses to navy yards would be felt in this day of short appropriations and limited personnel in the fleet, particularly expert mechanists such as the Medusa has in her crew.

Prepare for Cruise

During the past few weeks the big repair vessel has been stationed at San Diego. Her duties have been to repair certain destroyers of the fleet and get them in readiness for the coming cruise to Panama, starting from Los Angeles Harbor February 1, 1926. But upon arriving back with the battleship divisions the crew of the Medusa will be busy with the larger vessels. Instead of sending the larger ships to the Navy Yard at Puget Sound, they are sent to San Francisco and docked at Hunter's Point, and then the crew of the repair vessel take up the duties of navy-yard workmen in repairing and installing machinery that would be done at navy yards.

One of the outstanding features of the repair vessel is the amount of stores and supplies for handling the class of work which is daily charged to the officers and enlisted men assigned to her. Over $1,000,000 in spare parts, taking in everything from the finest jewels of a watch to a six-ton turbine rotor. The workshops and storerooms take up the space given over to guns and fighting machinery of the battleship.

Record for Travel

Proving that she was the most efficient vessel of her type in the world, the Medusa accompanied the fleet on the Australian cruise and never suffered a single breakdown nor missed a beat of her own 7000-horsepower geared turbine engines. She carries 1800 tons of fuel oil in nearly 100 separate tanks, giving her a cruising radius of 13,500 miles at a speed of eleven knots, although she made seventeen knots on her speed trials off the Washington-Oregon coasts before having been accepted by the board of naval officers who inspected the big craft after her "shake-down" cruise.

By throwing a small switch, two interlocking gyro-compasses, either of which can be utilized, the course of the vessel can be determined. The Medusa is said to be the only ship in the world so equipped. The condensers of the vessel are capable of providing 54,000 gallons of fresh water from salt sea water every day if that much is used by the boilers and ship's company. There is no "fighting" for a red "E," significant of engineering efficiency, on the repair ship, as the crew have hot and cold showers the year 'round.

"Chow" Is the Best

One of the big items in the life of the navy man, as their many friends on the shore can verify, is the "chow," our word for eats. The Medusa is not only equipped with a galley second to none but carries a supply of choice viands that will last for several months in the event that it is necessary to cruise that long. Her storerooms have space for meat, fresh provisions and dry foods that will last the ship's company of thirty-three officers and 480 enlisted men, most of whom are highly trained mechanics, nine months.

The vessel is 484 feet long, has a width of seventy feet, draws nineteen feet of water, and displaces 11,000 tons. Her armament is very limited. She carries but four five-inch, two three-inch anti-aircraft, and two six-pounder saluting guns.

The mechanical equipment of the Medusa cost the government upward of $1,000,000. The vessel is equipped throughout with electrical fixtures of the most recent design, there being over 500 motors of all types to run the many intricate pieces of machinery that are used in repair work. As an indication of the expense of this great floating navy yard, the monthly pay roll and operating expenses reach $70,000, a great deal of which is spent for supplies and stores to replenish the stock maintained.

Miniature City

No city of 10,000 or more souls is maintained on a more efficient basis than this "wonder vessel." A laundry, printing plant from which is issued the weekly newspaper, the Medusa Mechanic; bakery, and many other modern conveniences are noted.

The galley, the sailor's word for kitchen, is of interest to the lady visitors to the big ship. One thing that usually catches their eye first off is the big egg-beater, standing six feet high and taking a whole case of eggs at one "beating." This same machine is used to whip the cream, two gallons being handled at a single operation.

Of more interest to the layman who is mechanically inclined is the big machine shop, covering a space 200 feet long and seventy feet wide. The latest type lathes, drill presses, shapers, boring mills and grinding machines may be seen. More than sixty of these modern mechanical devices are in every-day use by trained mechanics who take care of the repairs of the fleet, having as their motto: "We serve the service."

Traveling cranes to lift the heavy rotors, parts of engines, gun mounts and, in fact, any job, are maintained in the machine shop. One has a lifting capacity of one ton and two lift a ton each. No job is too large or too small for the Medusa mechanics.

For instance, the vessel's repair men have just completed repairing the low-pressure turbine rotors of the destroyer Moody. This is the first time in the history of the Navy that this character of repair work has been done outside a navy yard. A small repair job just completed was manufacturing the delicate springs for several chronometers, repairing delicate parts of submarine periscopes and adjusting a trio of great range-finders, a tricky piece of business for any watchmaker.

Complete Foundry

In connection with the machine shop, there is a first-class foundry where large and small castings are made and where several molders hold forth, and where castings up to five tons are made. The foundry has three cupolas, two of which are small, but will cast brass fittings up to 3000 pounds. Most of the metal for the foundry is reclaimed from scraps "donated" by the fleet, old cylinders having an edge in supplying this "raw pig-iron."

Along the same line as the machine shop, but on a finer scale, is the optical shop and the fire-control repair shop. Fine glasses, clocks, watches and every manner of parts for same, not only are repaired but maintained on board in case of a shattered part that cannot be made over. It is said that $5000 worth of jewels for watches are carried in store for these instruments, and the amount of fine glasses for binoculars and long glasses is enormous. Every type of instrument used to navigate a big ship, including the gyrosope compasses, is repaired by this department.

Artistic Carpenters

Allied with all these important repair units is the carpenter shop, where woodworkers and patternmakers "hang out," but keep busy as do others of the ship's company. About twenty men are employed in this shop and they make everything from small cabinets for the admiral's office on the "big flag" to heavy main and quarter booms for the battleships' boats to secure to. The very finest woods from all parts of the world are carried on this ship, including rosewood from Mexico, ebony from the Orient, and teakwood from India.

Among the many important shops is the electrical repair unit of the vessel. Every conceivable repair job on motors, electric drives, great rotors in the battleships, rewinding armatures, installing switchboards, caring for communication lines, electric lighting plants in all types of vessels, fire-control apparatus, control tower conduit and wiring, and in fact a general "electrical contractor" is the best word for this busy shop.

Four great oil-burning forges are located in the blacksmith shop, said to be the most modern afloat. Annealing furnaces, gold and nickel-plating machines, silver-plating apparatus, resilvering searchlight mirrors, and many other kindred jobs are done in this interesting shop. Indeed, it would take one a week to go over the vessel and visit the many places of interest, not only to the man who is interested in mechanics, but to the layman who is interested in what our navy is doing.

Good Work Demanded

Ninety per cent of the men of the Medusa are skilled mechanics. They work but six and a half hours a day, unless in the case of extreme emergencies. Ample living space is enjoyed by the crew of the big vessel despite the fact that every inch of her decks and storerooms are utilized.

The mechanics are instructed to turn out good work rather than poor jobs hurried through. Not a few men of the Medusa's crew are from big factories in civil life, such as the Elgin Watch Company, General Motors Corporation, Ford's auto plant and many others. In fact, the crew might be called the greatest assemblage of skilled craftsmen under the American flag.

Almost nightly a movie show is seen on board. Mechanical demonstrations are often shown on the silver-sheet, and technical problems of everyday life on board are solved by the film operator who grinds off the reels—with an electric motor. The crew space is a model of cleanliness and comfort. Standee bunks are utilized, the messing facilities are of the best and the commissary department is aware of the words of wisdom of both Napoleon and Kipling and what they had to say about an army "marching on its stomach."

BY AGNES ELDING PALLEN

OMANCE is the jewel in the heart of California. It is her food, her drink; she clothes herself in it. It is her veritable existence.

Artists from all over the world have been fascinated and drawn California because of her rare romantic history, her marvelous scenic and her incomparable climate. Some of them have made their per- homes here and immortalized on their canvas not only the beauty of California, but her historic missions, Pilgrim padres, plodding peons, Indians and Spanish dons—and no wonder—for the history of California spiritual as it is fascinating and adventurous — but it differs from all States in the nature of its evolution in yet another way.

Commercialism was not the motive for the settlement on this sacred soil. her roots sink deeper. Her backbone is religion, coupled with the love nature—and when her sons sought gold, builded, painted, danced or , the spirit of romance so pervaded her that it left its stamp on every- she touched.

Now, in the latter day, modernism has, of course, had to make entrance. The world had read of the land of merriment and gilded glory. A bitter gle set up for the division of the vast wealth the land affords, so that rdly, except for the persistent efforts of old loyal citizens clinging to old traditions, her individualism might have been almost completely lost.

One of these loyal ones, who met the trend of progress a mind able to transmute it into the old glory, is Burnett Benton, famous California architect, poet, painter and sagacious business man, who has achievements to his credit. Through him California color and charm to all the wealth within her borders. Among the various structures created by Mr. Benton, Riverside Inn, the adjoining monastery, Arlington Hotel ta Barbara, which was partially destroyed during the earthquake, and the Y.M.C.A. of Los Angeles stand questionably among the best examples of the genu- mission type that we have in modern architecture.

A marble bust of a young girl, with her hair parted in the middle and a wreath around her head, is the outstanding feature of the room. There is something in the expression of her face that is sweet and calm; a face that expresses perfect harmony with the old traditional surroundings of another age. Mr. Benton calls her "Miss Innocence." She fits the name.

The home of Francesc Cugat, the famous Spanish painter, on Gracioca avenue in Hollywood, is the center of many social gatherings of the art and literary world. Ruth Cugat, the painter's wife, is not only a charming hostess, but one of the most brilliant women I have met. A painter herself, a musician of note, she has been of tremendous value as an inspiration to her talented husband.

The house stands on the brim of a hill, overlooking the valley below. It is almost impossible to describe the unique and artistic furnishings of the house, with its balconies, Spanish shawls and old master paintings. Through a double French window you step out from the living-room on to the veranda, which overlooks the city of Los Angeles. I don't know of another place in Hollywood where you get such a magnificent view; you stand there awed, almost in worship—thousands of lights twinkling below; above the huge dome of the universe seems to fairly tremble—so numerous are the stars.

It is on this veranda that Cugat has treated several of his paintings. Cugat's portraits are different from those of any other portrait painter in the world. In his conception of a portrait, interpretation and background are judged by some to surpass the work of Betram Masses; his portraits have a great deal more spirituality and softness—perhaps a radiance of his own magnetic personality.

Cugat was born in Barcelona, Spain, in 1893. He was a student at the art school at Rheims, France, and Beaux Arts of Paris, where he won the bronze medal. In Spain, where his work was recently exhibited, the art critics proclaimed him not only an individualist in his style of fantastic and symbolic paintings, but one of the greatest living painters of the age.

Gordon Coutts, who has leased a magnificent house in Palm Springs, has enriched art circles here by announcing that he was to make his permanent home in California. It is very seldom that we have the opportunity to meet a painter who does great distinct work and who is also a story-teller. Tall, lean and lanky, with a decided English drawl and humor, Mr. Coutts relates the numerous incidents which he encountered during his several years' stay in Morocco. I have sat for hours and listened to his yarns, enchanted by his descriptions and details of his subjects and places.

Mr. Coutts has traveled extensively and during his life has established a reputation of merit and worth in London art circles. He is a native of Glasgow, Scotland, where he first studied art, and later in London and Paris he received a number of medals for his work on the canvas. He resided for several years in Sydney, Australia, where he held the post of instructor of painting at the government school of arts.

Melbourne, Sydney and Adelaide art galleries possess some of his finest works. During his residence in Australia, he painted, among other celebrities, Sir Samuel May, Chief Justice of Australia; Sir John Patterson, Premier of Victoria; Sir John Reid, Premier of New South Wales, and Lord Tennison, Governor of Victoria.

For many years Coutts's work has sold from the walls of the Royal Academy of London. Many national art galleries throughout England possess examples of his work.

Oriental Spirit

In recent years he has devoted his attention to Tangier, Morocco and the Near East. The "Call of the Orient" placed on canvas forms the keynote of the many pictures Mr. Coutts has brought with him to America. He has reproduced some of the tortured religious ceremonies common in the Near and Far East. The snake charmers attracted him and their performances on the market places of the Near East cities have been well reproduced.

Joseph Sigall, a Polish painter of note, family history, traditions and distinction, arrived from South America several weeks ago and leased a house in Hollywood, where he is hoping to make his permanent home. All of his private art collections and family relics are being shipped here from South America.

It is almost impossible to give the slightest conception of Mr. Sigall's personality, his charm, temperament and moods—which are characteristic of every great Polish artist. There is in Mr. Sigall something of the patriotism, tragedy and melancholy of Chopin—grace and charm of Paderewski—impatience and temperament of Dmowski.

While Mr. Sigall's portraits are a breath of the past masters, there is something in his composition that is decidedly his own. It is without doubt, after seeing a number of his portraits, that one can note that he did not have sympathy with all of his sitters—the elegant shallowness of some of the portraits illustrates that Sigall is not part of the world in which he plays so conspicuous a part.

The thing that I appreciate most deeply in his portraits is the fine taste with which he creates environment for his conception of the subject. Each sitter is characterized by grandeur of line, suppleness of arrangement and fascinating surprise of detail, used with extraordinary originality, balance and rhythm.

Edgar Alwin Payne, whose studio is at 134 South Reno, Los Angeles, has just returned from Europe, where he spent four years and received much recognition as a great American painter.

Mr. Payne was the organizer and first president of the Laguna Beach Art Association. He is a graduate of the Art Institute of Chicago, member Chicago Society of Artists, member Union International Des Beaux Arts et Des Lettres, California Art Club and Art Institute Alumni.

Mr. Payne took first prize at the Pallette and Chisel Club, Chicago, in 1913, received gold and silver medals in Sacramento in 1918 and 1919, the Martin B. Kahn prize for contemporary American painters, Chicago Art Institute in 1920, and honorable mention in Paris Salon in 1923.

For the past ten years Edgar Payne has given us an accurate interpretation of the splendor and loftiness, with great masses of lights and shadows, in paintings of the High Sierras. He is one of our best-known California artists. Payne may be recognized in most of his subjects in the snow-clad Alps, with the quaint Alpine village, the mirror lakes and woods of Italy, and the picturesque Riviera, by his display of selection in beauty of subject and all contain his own individuality in rare charm and color.

On his recent trip to Europe Payne gave us many paintings of the fishing boats, being quite famous for his handling of boats just off the southern coast of France. Also the Italian merchant boats with their cargoes of merchandise. He spent most of his time in Switzerland painting the Alps, and after seeing one of his canvases of snow-covered mountains you feel actually chilly because of his beautiful handling of pigments in depicting snow, it is so realistic.

William Wendt, who is making his home in Laguna Beach, the artists' colony of the Pacific, has just won the Balch purchase prize of $2500 at the Pan-American exhibition at the museum on his beautiful canvas entitled "Where Nature's God Hath Wrought."

William Wendt was born in Germany in 1865, came to Chicago in 1880, and there among the art influences of that city developed his own talents without the assistance of either teachers or schools. In 1893 he won the second Yerkes prize in Chicago.

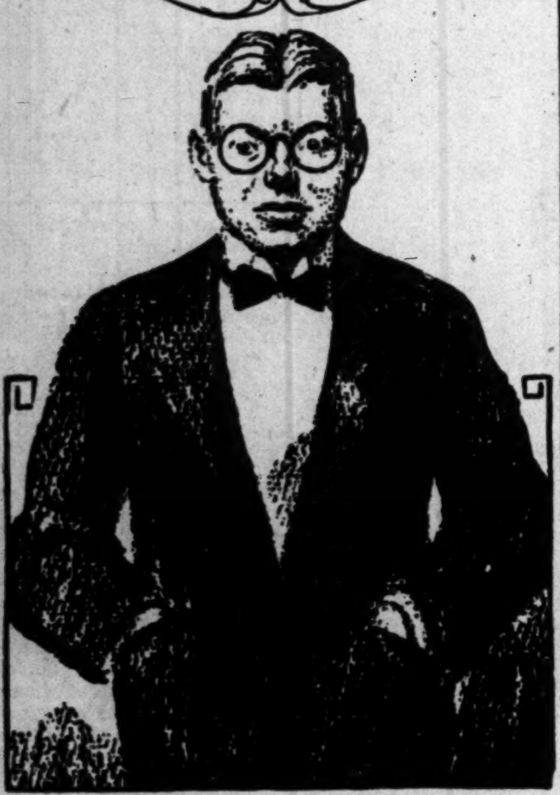
Mr. Wendt specializes entirely in landscape paintings, making no attempts at portraiture and, although he lives at Laguna Beach, he seldom depicts the Pacific unless it is to be used as a background for a vista of red roofs or cottages nestled among the trees on the cliffs.

I am very sorry the home of Stanislaus Poceha, famous for nature painting, is not completed so we might have had the opportunity to reproduce it. Mr. Poceha has designed it, and is building it himself with help of a carpenter, in the heart of sycamore trees in Hollywoodland. The interior will be a miniature reproduction of a Japanese temple. Mr. Poceha has spent several years in Japan, where he painted the Imperial family and everyone worth while in Japan. The distinct works of Mr. Poecha are his nocturnes; two of them, which he exhibited recently at Cracow, are the finest things of that kind that I have seen done. He is now painting the Spanish missions, and those which I have seen completed differ in composition and originality from other paintings of Spanish missions. This is due, probably, to Mr. Poceha's conception of romance in California's early history.

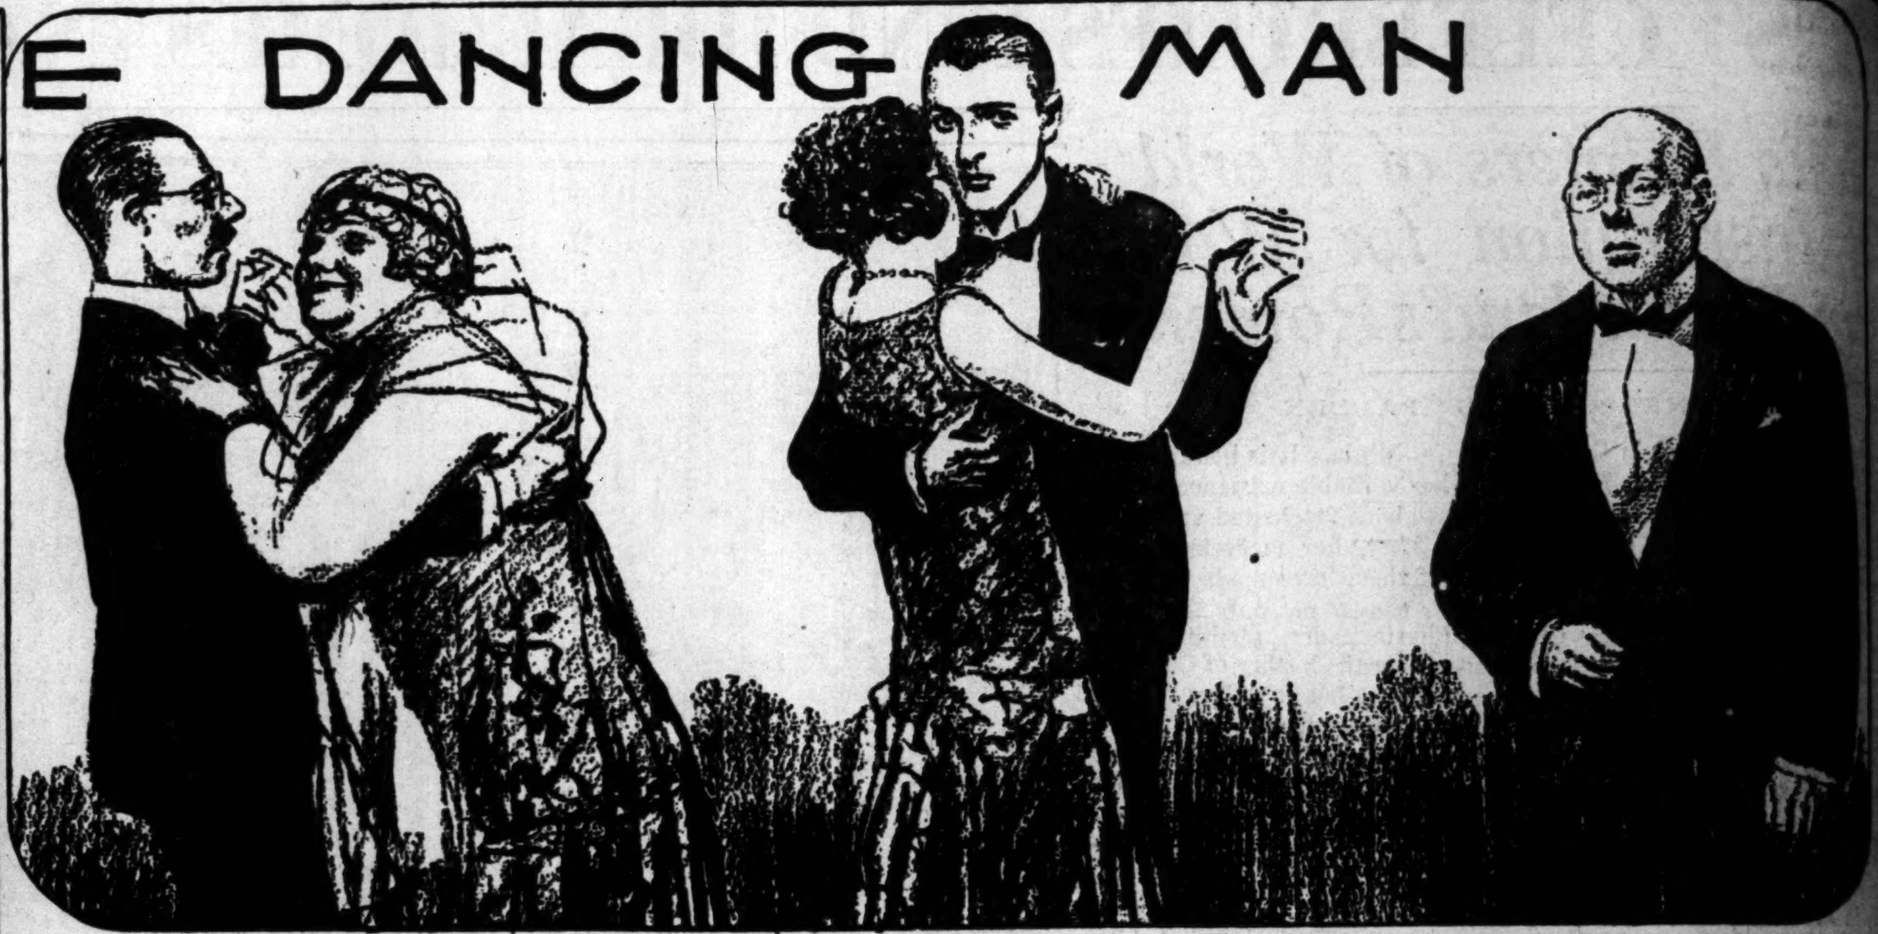
THE DANCING MAN

By W. E. HILL.

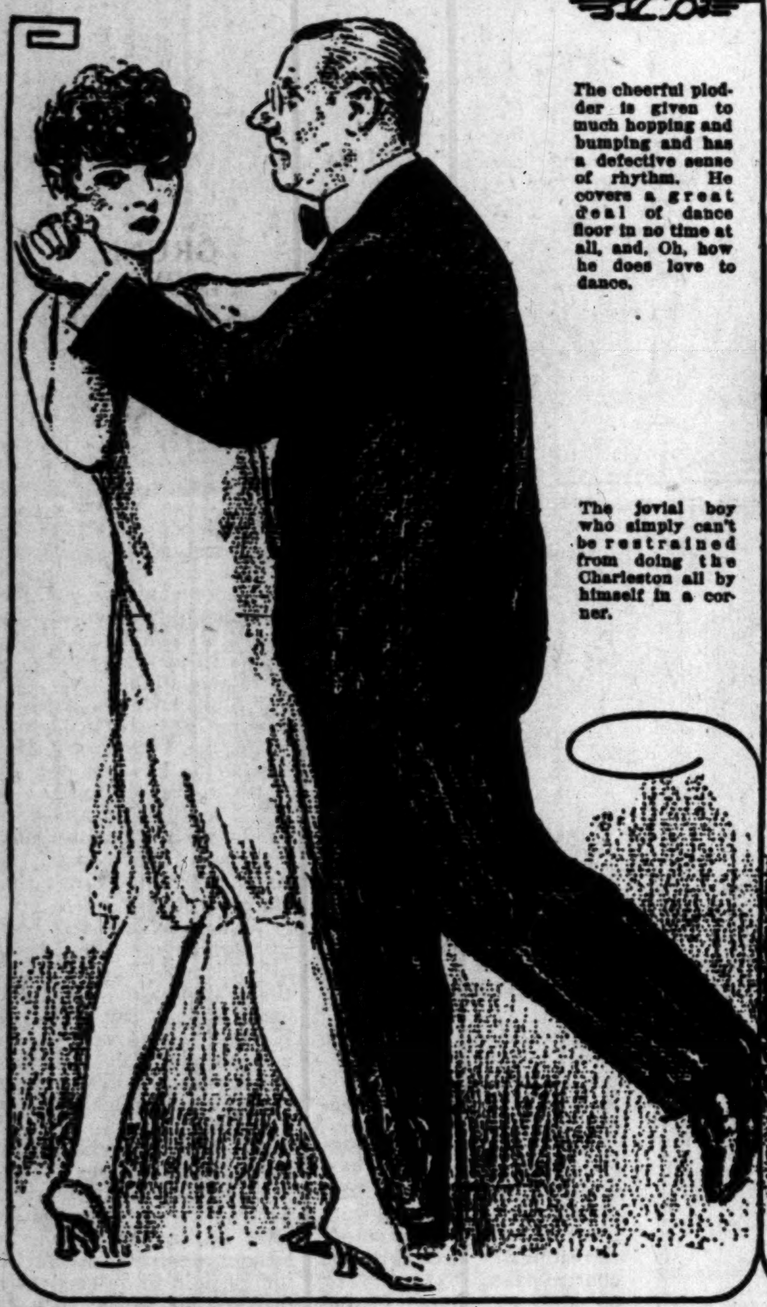
Copyright 1926, Chicago Tribune Syndicate



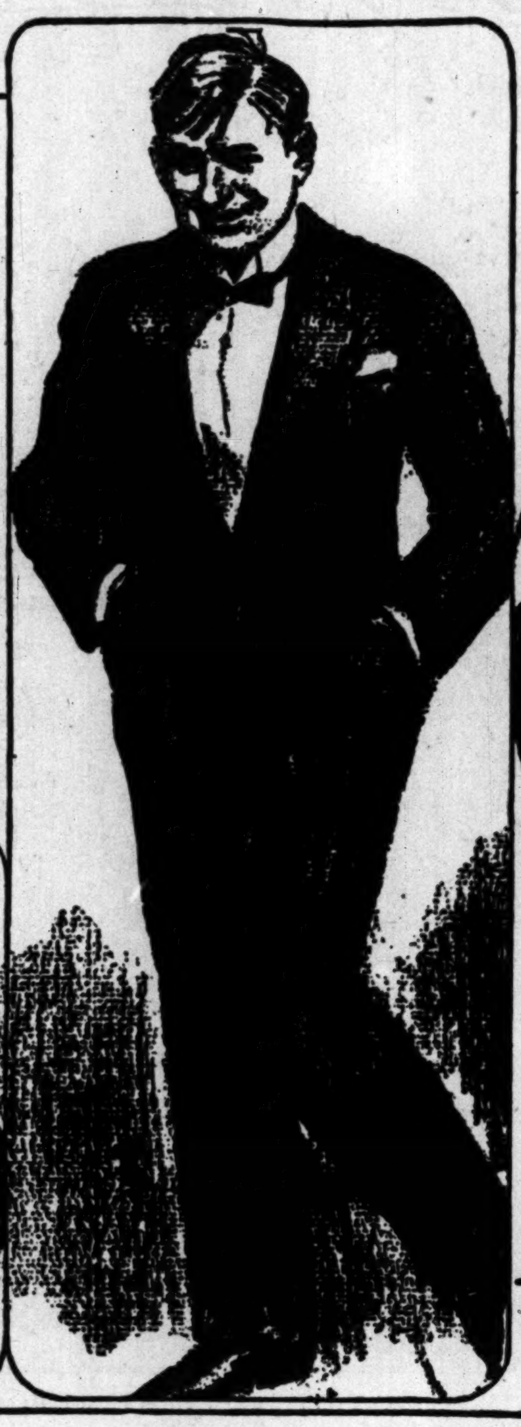
The young man with the intense feeling for grandeurs who has a lot to say about Palm Beach and Pinehurst and polo. Hopes the debutante he's dancing with won't find out he lives in the wrong part of town.



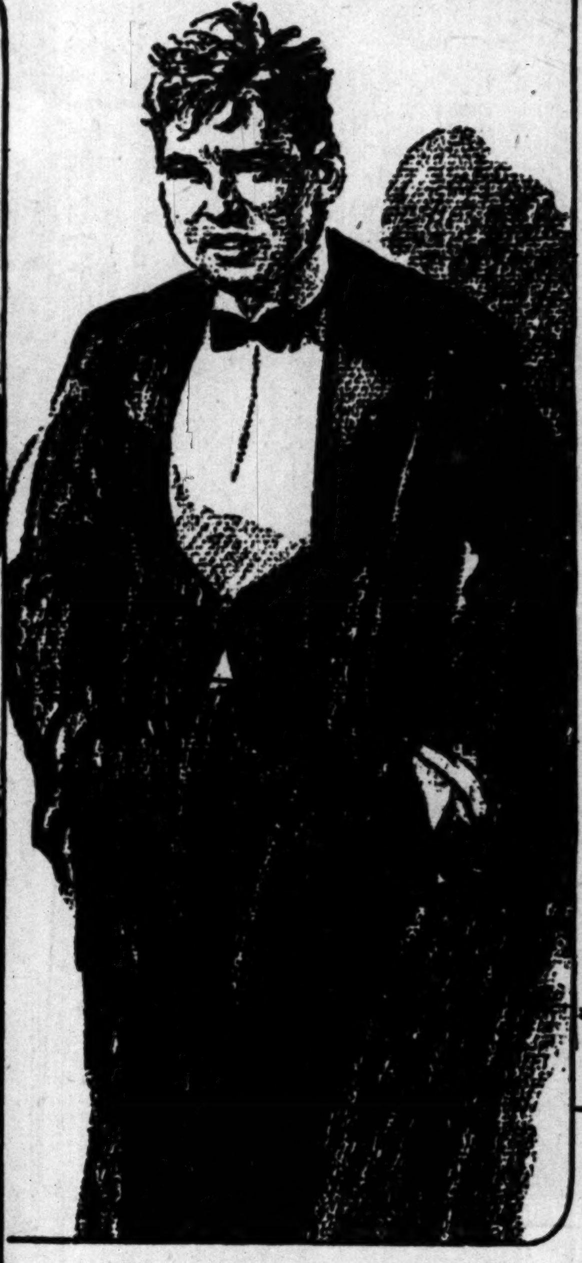
From left to right we have with us on the dance floor tonight: the kindly young man, known as the Florence Nightingale of the ballroom, who plays angel of mercy to the wall flowers; the willowy boy with the trick dance steps and the passionate glances, and the unlucky man who is always being cut in on.



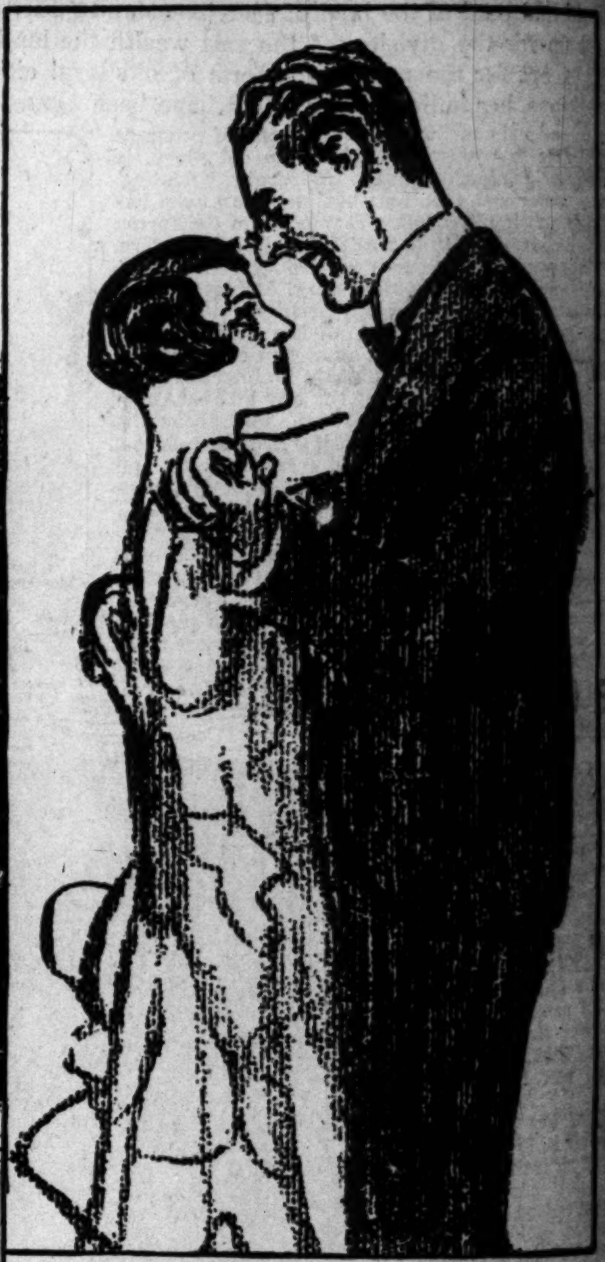
The cheerful plodder is given to much hopping and bumping and has a defective sense of rhythm. He covers a great deal of dance floor in no time at all, and, Oh, how he does love to dance.



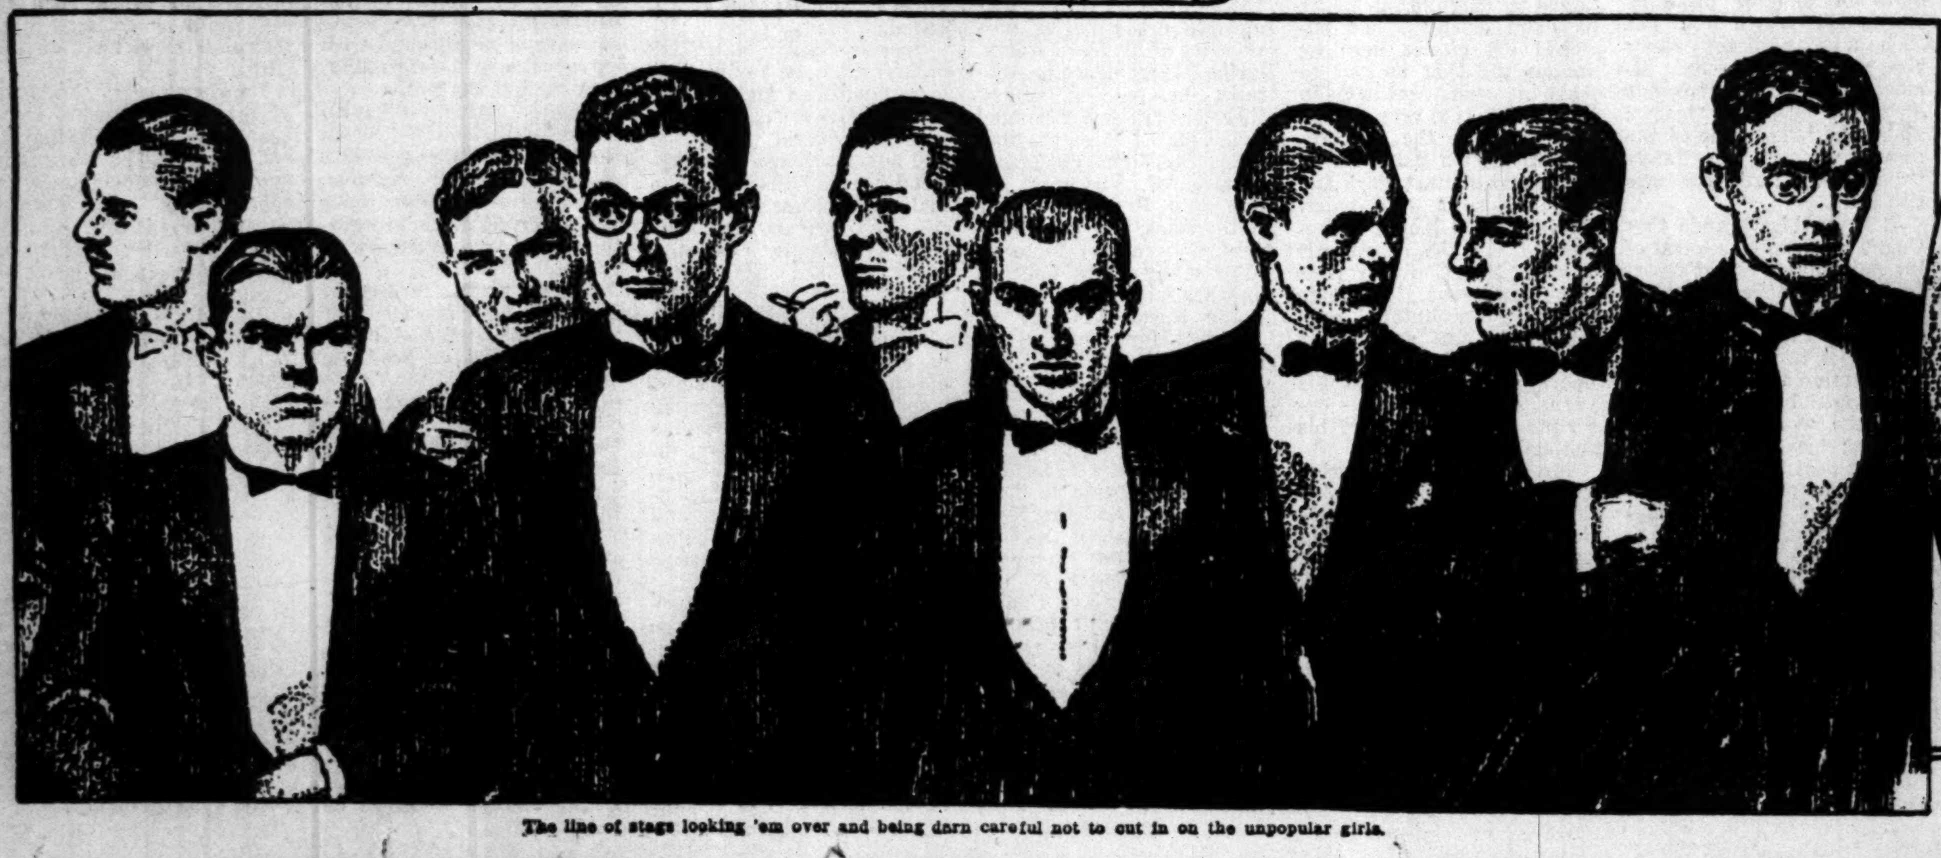
The jovial boy who simply can't be restrained from doing the Charleston all by himself in a corner.



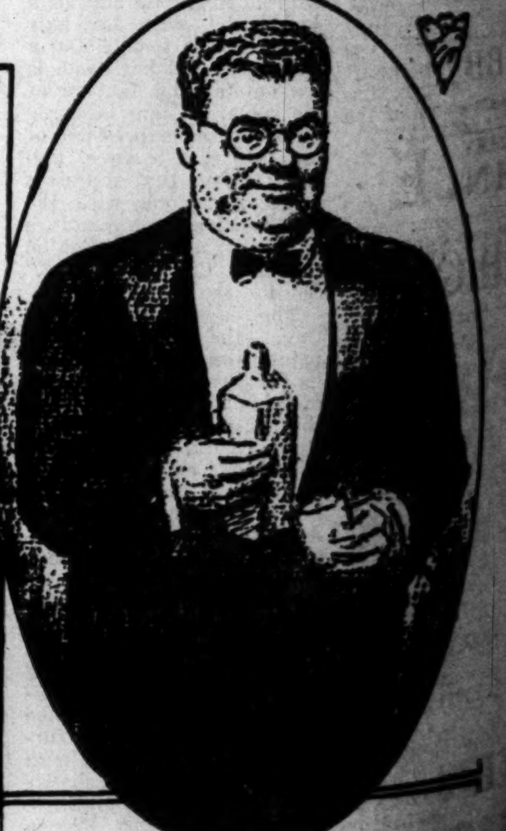
The half-seas-over young man, who began celebrating early in the evening, will have to be sent home soon. Tomorrow he will call up friends to find out what happened.



The entertaining boy loves to talk while tripping the so-called light fantastic. Never still a moment. He's telling her how he used to have the idea maybe she didn't like him and then he got thinking perhaps she did, and so tonight when she didn't look at him, why, he wasn't sure what to think!



The line of stags looking 'em over and being darn careful not to cut in on the unpopular girls.



The butter-and-egg dancing man has a goodly supply of liquors in the coat room.

If Mr. Tibbett succeeds in surviving the 'Falstaff' sensation—not of his own making—he should have a useful career. Only a Faure or a Maurel could live up to the hysterical gibberings of the newspapers last season."

The most vital sentence in the whole article, to my mind, is: "the very bottom of the foundation of singing is beautiful tone. It is also the bottom of the foundation of piano and violin and 'cello playing. So when people tell you that such and such is a great singer in spite of the fact that he has not technic and no tone, make up your mind that he is a singing actor or a clever elocutionist. On the other hand tone needs to be mixed with brains."

Some pertinent comments on New York concerts and the opera are mysteriously signed "Sotto Voce." It detracts a little not to have these frank and intelligent reviews signed personally, but no doubt the writer is saved much grief.

A very fine discussion of Robert Franz, who is spoken of as "an unregarded master," by Herbert F. Peyser brings to light the palpable neglect of this great song writer. Mr. Peyser says, "the burden of guilt for the fate of this master does not lie with the public, however—it rests squarely on the shoulders of the concert singer."

He touches in an interesting way upon the life of Franz and speaks tenderly of his being "as reticent as his music, about which there is nothing more sensational than perfection. Not a single passage that Franz designed for the voice could be properly conveyed through any other medium. It is no exaggeration to claim that his percentage of great songs is higher than that of any composer one may call to mind. He had an insatiable instinct for perfection and its concomitant self-criticism so when he put forth a piece of work it was the best he could do.

"He bequeathed to mankind a plenteous store of priceless song, wrung from him in illness, obscurity and disappointment. Mankind has no use for his proffer of jewels and goes on blissfully picking up pebbles."

An excellent article by Howard Barlow on the limitations of chorus singing and the possibilities of a "vocal symphony" opens up a fascinating new path for choral development in this country.

Arthur Billings Hunt has some interesting things to say about the "folk-song literature of the United States."

There is a department for church musicians and one of new books and music, the latter conducted by Frederick H Martens.

Thus is "the new idea in musical journalism" launched and it promises much in the way of valuable service to all interested in a "voice magazine."

Vaughn Student Gaining

It will be of interest to the friends of Bertha Vaughn and Ruth Shaffner to hear of the successful entry Miss Shaffner has made into the professional ranks of New York City. Miss Shaffner is a Los Angeles girl who has had her entire vocal training with Bertha Vaughn, having gone to New York City the last of September. On December 22 Miss Shaffner appeared at the Church of the Ascension as soloist in "The Messiah" with such well-known artists as John Barnes Wells, Frederick Baer, Dicie Howell and Jeanne Laval (Mrs Royal Dadmun.) Her performance was such a success that she was immediately engaged for two more oratorios, Saint-Saens' "Christmas Oratorio" and Caesar-Frank's Beatitudes."

MacDowell Program

The Los Angeles Music Teachers' Association will give a MacDowell program in honor of this great American composer tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock, Chickering Hall, 808 South Broadway, admission free to the public. The program is as follows: A talk on the life and work of Edward MacDowell, by Abbie Norton Jamison: "Sonata Tragica," Irene Mason, pianist; "To a Wild Rose," Clair de Lune; "With Sweet Lavender," Lorna Usher, violinist; Mrs. Erma Johnson, accompanist. "Long Ago, Sweetheart Mine," folk song; "The Sea," Z. Earl Meeker, baritone; Miss Gwendolyn Brain, accompanist. Concert Etude, "Preludium, Polonaise," Irene Mason, pianist.

Nature Music Class

Maud Meserne Falconer, director of the Nature Music School, announces an opening class for student teachers Wednesday morning. This class is unusually valuable for advanced students deserving to train themselves as teachers. This course includes teaching methods as well as repertoire and harmony. Mrs. Falconer has made a plan by which it is possible for students to partially pay for their course or earn some money while they are training.

Miss Louise Massey of the vocal department will present some pupils in recital next Friday evening. Several piano pupils of the intermediate department will appear on the same program. Miss Massey will give a short talk on her ideals in the teaching of voice.

Special Advantages

An outstanding feature of the dancing taught at the Marta Oatman School of the Theater by Wanda Grazer is the professional finesse, beauty of line and dramatic expressiveness which characterizes the student's work. Classes in dancing are held for not only professional dancing but for physical development as well. Poise and grace is acquired and the powers of concentration deepened and developed. Special classes for children and business women are held in connection with professional classes.

Contest Awards Made

Before an audience of 200 at the residence studio of Douglas Campbell, 4712 Oakwood, on Friday evening, January 8, the awards of his first biannual contest were presented. The awards were offered by Douglas Campbell to the students of his class making the highest percentages during a six month period. The first prize, a Kimball grand piano, was awarded Fred Leighton. The second prize, a six-month scholarship, went to Mrs. Barbara Borden. Third prize, a four-month scholarship, went to Elizabeth Knight, age 7. Fourth place, a two-month scholarship, went to Jane Herrimann, age 9. Another contest with a similar set of awards began the 11th inst. to run for six months.

Neblet Trio Tour Success

The Neblett Concert Trio, composed of Leona Neblett, violinist and founder; James Murray, baritone, and Raymond McFeeters, pianist, has recently returned from a most successful tour covering New Mexico, Colorado, Utah and Northern California. Evidence of the success of this splendid ensemble is the fact that practically every date played on this tour has been rebooked for next season, as well as a large number of additional dates.

On two of the Robert Slack Artists, series on which the trio appeared in Colorado, the next attraction will be the San Francisco Chamber Music Society, showing that western organizations are taking their place with those of the East.

The Neblett Concert Trio will remain in California during the spring months and will be heard this coming week before the Catholic Woman's Club, and the Covina and El Monte High Schools.

Study Italian in Class

Musicians have been especially helped by the course in the Italian language given at the University of California, extension division. Bank employees of exchange departments are also joining this class and others to whom a knowledge of Italian is of value. A new course in this subject starts Friday the 22nd inst., meeting from 7 to 9 in Room 803, Pacific Finance Building, and further information about it is given at 815 South Hill street. Courses in harmony and the history and appreciation of music are also given and are of value to musicians as well as the Italian class.

Recital at Ebell

John Smallman presented the Lotus Girls' Trio in recital at the Ebell Club last Saturday night to an extremely appreciative audience. The next recital will be given on March 6, when Mr. Smallman will present Blythe Taylor, soprano; Wesley Beans, baritone, and Evangeline Townsend, contralto. Miss Taylor is soprano soloist at the First Congregational Church of Los Angeles and has also been reengaged as the soprano in the Pacific Palisades Quartet for next summer. Wesley Beans is well known for his radio work and Eveline Townsend is the soloist with the Pomona Glee Club, besides being the contralto soloist at the First Church of Christ Scientist in Whittier.

Sonata Recital

So great has been the success of the SonataRecitals as presented by Miss Helena Lewyn and Sol Cohen that they are being urged to continue their series upon the conclusion of their present group of three concerts. The second recital takes place Tuesday evening the 26th inst., at the Friday Morning clubhouse, 940 South Figueroa street. The program follows: Kreutzer Sonata, L. Van Beethoven; Sonata in M major, Alexandre Tcherephnine; Sonata in D minor, Camille Saint-Saens.

Rosalyn Asner to Perform

Among the younger pianists already firmly established in Los Angeles is Rosalyn Asner, one of the best known of the artist pupils of Phillip Tronitz. Miss Asner won an enviable reputation as a pianist and teacher in the East, prior to her coming to this city. She already holds the degree of bachelor of music, attained at Chicago Musical College. She will be heard at the next open meeting of the Tronitz Club and in several other engagements during the current season.

Art Instructor Returns

Miss Sophie Harpe, instructor in arts and crafts at the Hollywood School for Girls, 1749 La Brea avenue, has just returned from a six months' sojourn in Paris, where she studied at the St. Julian Academy. Miss Harpe also attended the Beaux Arts and a number of art expositions in Paris and other French cities for the purpose of securing ideas for her work in Hollywood.

BILTMORE CONCERT TONIGHT

Little Symphony Orchestra to be Heard in Attractive Program in Ballroom

Tonight at 8:30 o'clock will mark the first Sunday evening concert of the Little Symphony and the Biltmore ballroom with its refined atmosphere and exquisite beauty, is the ideal setting for these concerts intime.

Tandler chose Sunday evening in order to give all those who are occupied and busy during the week and Saturday mornings an opportunity to enjoy good music and spend a pleasant evening at the Biltmore; in short, endeavoring to make the Sunday evenings at the Biltmore a regular habit of all lovers of good music.

The program for this first concert should be of double interest, one of the attractions being little Louise Leshkin, 8-year-old, appearing as soloist with the Little Symphony.

Investigation of the records reveal that she is the youngest child ever to appear in such a capacity in the United States. Louise has had all her training from Miss K. Montreville Cocke of Los Angeles, and will play the Mozart E flat piano concerto. Jean Sibelius, whose sixtieth birthday is celebrated all over the globe, is represented by his suite: "Pelleas and Melisande," a work of unfamiliar and exquisite beauty.

Another attractive number will be Percy Grainger's country-garden-like "Molly on the Shore," clever, joyful and interestingly harmonized.

Los Angeles Dancers Make Hit in Gotham

Following in the footsteps of Lina Basquette and Dorothy Dilley there is a new "crop" of Ernest Belcher dancers springing into prominence in the East. The most prominent of these artists is Gracella Claire, former premier danseuse of Harry Carroll's "Pickings" at the Orange Grove Theater, who is featured dancer in two Broadway productions, Earl Carroll's "Vanities" and "The Floradora Girl." Hazel Goodreau is the featured dancer in "I'll Say She Is," while Beth Beri has returned from the London production of "Kid Boots" to appear in another Broadway musical show.

Miss Dilley is at present playing in an Irving Berlin production.

Betty Roper and Jack Kinney, who have been appearing in Will Morrisey's Club Monte Carlo revue, are on their way to London to open at Ciro's, the exclusive English club.

New Belcher entrants into Broadway vaudeville are Phyllis Fayre, Carrie Smith and Dorothy Lambdin, all of whom are playing the leading eastern houses.

Miss Basquette, who while the prima ballerina of Ziegfeld's Follies was hailed as America's greatest dancer, has now retired from the stage.

Brown seems to be among the fashionable colors, especially for afternoon outfits.

DEFINITION OF ART OF DANCE WINS PRIZE

Elza Houda

There has been much commotion aroused among those interested in the dance by the prize offered by Leonard Sokoloff, director of the Sokoloff Ballet School, for the best definition of "The Art of Dancing."

The contest closed on the 2nd inst. The prize was won by Elza Houda of 4629 Lexington avenue, Hollywood.

Realizing in her great ambition something which many professionals do not see, Miss Houda believes that to be a great success one must be a mental dancer as well as a physical one.

Elza Houda's clear and beautiful definition of the "Art of Dancing" is: "The art of dancing embodies not only music art, and literature, but the rhythm of motion which is the medium of expression of the human soul."

Hosts to be "Absent" at Novel Party

In this fast-moving day and age it takes events out of the ordinary to attract even the slightest mite of public attention.

Back in New York Jules Brulatour of Eastman film fame and his beautiful actress-wife, Hope Hampton, sought a way to invite the leading lights of Hollywood's celluloid colony to see a specimen in technicolor photography.

The picture, a short two-reeler, opened at Loew's State yesterday as a part of the program. Business prevented Mr. and Mrs. Brulatour coming all the way to Los Angeles just to be hosts to their many friends during the showing, so the couple hit upon this idea:

Tomorrow 100 of the Hollywood prominent will receive a dispatch asking each to attend the theater Thursday evening as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Brulatour. Two of the seats reserved for the party will be left vacant—for the host and hostess who are far away in Gotham.

The picture is called "The Marionettes." It is a fantastic tale of fairyland, all done in colors, and features Miss Hampton.

HELEN OF TROY APPRAISES LIFE

John Erskine Adroitly Builds About Homer's Characters a Very Up-to-Date Novel in Which Helen is Wise, Ironical and Altogether Lovely

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

PRIVATE LIFE OF HELEN OF TROY. By John Erskine. Bobbs Merrill Company, Indianapolis.

"In the presence of great beauty all men seem to be inexperienced. There isn't enough of it, I suppose, to get used to it." This is one of the aphorisms of John Erskine's Helen, whom he turns out as worldly wise as Corra Harris, as sophisticated as Adela Rogers St. John, as complacently satisfied with her own conduct as Queen Mary of England, as philosophical as George Sand and as ironical as Anatole France.

Prof. Erskine adroitly lifts Homer's characters and upon the framework of events from the "Iliad" and the "Odyssey" builds his own story, which is as ageless as Cleopatra or as Helen herself.

After the briefest prelude, we have Menalaus finding his lost Helen in burning Troy. As befits the wronged husband, he makes his gesture of vengeance. Helen bares her breast for his sword. "He looked at her. The sword embarrassed him. 'Helen,' he said, 'it's time we went home.'" So home they went, after some delay.

In Sparta Helen finds that daughter Hermione, a prim young person of sound principles, has been busily assuring society that Helen had been carried off by Paris by force, but that she had, happily, escaped unscathed and taken refuge in Egypt, where she had virtuously awaited the coming of Menalaus to escort her home.

Helen, who was frank and courageous, was scandalized at Hermione's lying tales. She set vigorously to work to disseminate the truth. Paris, poor dead and gone gallant, had loved her; she had loved him. They had gone away together, had experienced their moments of beauty, and she was unashamed. With Paris dead and Troy burned, she had willingly enough returned to Sparta with her husband. But the love of life had not been denied. The moral question was negligible, said this pagan philosopher.

Helen is always wise and disillusioned, always worth hearing. Pertinent and wise are her comments on Menalaus, on Hermione, on Orestes and Achilles, Pyrrhus and Hector ("He was the finest example I shall ever meet of a temperament I don't like,") and on the others who enter into this ancient sounding, but very modern, tale. It is told mostly in dialogue, with an irritating lack of quotation marks and explanation. But it is the result of cerebration of an unusual order and is vastly amusing, providing you like irony and aphorism and sophistication in your fiction.

FRIENDS OF MR. SWEENEY. By Elmer Davis. John M. McBride Company, New York.

Elmer Davis is fast winning a reputation for amusing extravaganzas with a comic kick in them. Men enslaved by domesticity who by accident are suddenly hurled out of their accustomed humdrum and swirled into Bohemian night life or worse, to the horror of their dearest dears, is a favorite theme of his, which he uses effectively and with amusing variations.

In "Friends of Mr. Sweeney" Asaph Holliday, subeditor of a high-brow New York journal, is the patiently plodding male harnessed to the wheel. But to his old college chum, who looked him up after a lapse of a dozen years, he was still the "wild cat" of old campus days.

How he lived up to his chum's conception of him, gave his employers and his wife a series of shocks, and so obtained sudden freedom, is the tale, told with dash and vigor.

With all its seeming lightness, there is pungent criticism of life and manners in this sprightly story, and an inimitably good presentation of the literary angel, who, forsooth, does not wish to dictate the policy of the journal he backs. A good book for and about men, even if it carries in its pages the seeds of family readjustments.

GREENERY STREET. By Denis Mackail. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

"Greenery Street" is a street of little houses with drawing-rooms sufficiently imposing to suggest little parties and the other rooms very tiny, but having "cosy" possibilities.

Into its row of houses brides are constantly moving, with their new husbands and their new furniture, and a year or so later are moving out, as the house proves too small for the family, when a nursery and a nursemaid are required.

Felicity Hamilton and Jan Foster, married for love, found the house in Greenery street a lovely nest at first. But as expenses mounted, life there became less simple. Felicity had to pawn her pearls, Jan had to keep his own business secrets, things grew tense. But with the help of friends and relatives and a shrewd lawyer, all was put to rights.

A very light tale, palpably machine made, full of artifice and make-believe, to be read as a light romance when time threatens to drag.

NEGRO SONGS AND SPIRITUALS

Several books have appeared this year devoted to negro songs. The latest is "Mellows, a Chronicle of Unknown Singers," by R. Emmet Kennedy, with decorations by Simmons Persons, published by Albert and Charles Boni. It is a book of negro work songs, street cries and spirituals. "Mellows," the author explains in the foreword, is the negro word for melody, and by this term their devotional songs are called in Southern Louisiana. So redolent of this quality are they that they remind the author of the words of Renan, speaking of the Celtic melodies: "Like emanations from above they fall, drop by drop, upon the soul and pass through it like the memories of another world."

In each of the more than twenty chapters the author considers one or more negro songs, traces the history of each as far as it can be traced, and tells of hearing it sung by the negroes themselves. There is much reminiscence in the book, much human interest, much to cause the reader to ponder a little upon the negro in America. The book is quaintly and fittingly garbed in red calico sprigged with violets. Over this it wears a yellow apron splashed with black. The music for the songs is given in the book, which adds infinitely to its usefulness.

Another book about negro spirituals is called "On the Trail of Negro Folk-Songs." It is by Dorothy Scarborough and is sponsored by Harvard University Press. In it attention is turned to the simpler home songs of the negro, including lullabies, dance songs, reels, children's songs and a form of folk-song called "The Blues." These are love songs.

Still a third book of negro songs is "The Book of American Negro Spirituals," edited by James Weldon Johnson, and published by the Viking Press. It, too, supplies the music, which is arranged by A. Rosamond Johnson. There are over sixty songs, arranged for solo voice with piano accompaniment. The historical account of the negro melodies given in this volume is both interesting and important. Most of the well-known songs that were sung so effectively by the Jubilee singers are to be found here.

Another book on this subject is published by the University of North Carolina Press. It is called "The Negro and His Songs" and is by Howard W. Odum and Guy B. Johnson. This book has an account of many of the negro songs, but does not give the music. It gives, instead, much information about the songs and the singers.

Speaking of negro folk-songs brings to mind another book. This is "Folk-Songs of the South," collected and edited by John Harrington Cox and published by Harvard University Press. It offers a collection of over 180 songs and ballads, gathered in West Virginia, but many of them are representative of folk songs in the South in general. Some of the ballads are variations on the old English ballads. The collection was made under the direction of the West Virginia Folk-Lore Society. In the introduction the editor gives an interesting account of the work of the society and of the way in which the songs were collected, many of them from shy and reluctant mountaineers.

For comprehensiveness and excellence of editing the book stands supreme in its own field.

AMUNDSEN DECIDES

Whether he should set off in search of land in the region of the North Pole or attempt further to get the seaplane off the ice and return to Spitzbergen by air, was a decision which Roald Amundsen describes as the most difficult he had ever been called upon to make.

In his new volume, "Our Polar Flight," written from his diary and just published by Dodd, Mead & Co., in which he shares authorship with Lincoln Ellsworth and other members of his recent polar flight, the explorer has this to say regarding the presence of land in that region and the feasibility of discovering it:

"When we were 80 deg. north latitude, a lead sounding read 3750 meters. Adding to this fact that we had reached 88 deg., 30m., north latitude, when we landed, I believe that we confirmed Peary's observations that no land exists in the northern sector of the Arctic Ocean. But this cannot be absolutely decided until someone flies over."

The explorer makes it clear that he does not consider the North Pole his private hunting grounds by saying that "nothing stimulates like competition, the more the better."

A NEW BEST-SELLER

Martha Ostenso, whose novel, "Wild Geese," won the $13,500 prize with royalties additional, has retired to a farm somewhere in New Jersey, where she is at work on her next novel, the first draft of which is aleady completed. Miss Ostenso comes by her farming naturally, her childhood having been passed among the scenes of "Wild Geese," and her ancestors representing, as she says, "an immemorial line of tillers of the soil."

Dodd, Mead & Co., the publishers of "Wild Geese," report that it has been selling well over 1200 copies a day since its publication last October. At the same time four editions of the novel have also appeared in Canada. At this rate the book bids fair to break all sales records for a first novel and should continue to be a best seller all through the spring.

"Tom Sawyer" Acclaimed

"Tom Sawyer" is the book best loved by the school-children of America. Thirty-six thousand seven hundred and fifty children in thirty-four cities in seventeen States who balloted on the books they read during the year 1924-1925 voted "Tom Sawyer" the best of all. Mark Twain's classic received 2272 votes. "Heidi," Johanna Spyri's classic, which is the latest edition to the Louis Rhead series of illustrated juveniles, holds second place in the hearts of American school-children, receiving 1843 votes. The other books in the list of ten most popular books are: "Little Women," "Black Beauty," "Pinocchio," "Hans Brinker," "Story of Dr. Doolittle," "The Little Lame Prince," "Huckleberry Finn," "Call of the Wild" and "Dutch Twins." This study was made possible by a grant from the Carnegie Corporation and by the co-operation of the American Library Association and a volunteer group of some thirty teachers in Winnetka, Ill.

RECENT BOOKS

A LIFETIME WITH MARK TWAIN. The memories of Kate Leary, for thirty years his faithful and devoted servant. Written by Mary Lawton. Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.

An account of the home life of the Clemens family, told supposedly by Kate Leary to Mary Lawton. Kate, having been a faithful and devoted servant in the Clemens family, has much to say, but not much that is thrillingly new. Though the book is written in Miss Lawton's best "Katy" manner, with the "bad" grammar, the amusing asides, the Irish love of hyperbole, intact, one cannot help suspecting that some of its material is drawn from other books, rather than from Katy. The stock stories of Mark Twain's tempers and his drolleries, of his friendships and his visits, are most of them found here, along with some sweetened accounts of his happy family life. Katy loves Mark and his wife, that Olivia whom Van Wyck Brooks took a fling at, loves the children as happy young things and as young women, and finds no flaw in any of them.

It depends upon one's temperament as to whether or not this book proves worth while. Some of us tire quickly of honeyed biographical detail told in Irish dialect by an illiterate domestic. Others, more fond of flavor than of meat, take to it like a fish to water. Here is a fair sample: "Mr. Clemens always took part in everything and he helped everybody and he was so good to the children. He loved all children and they loved him and used to abuse him. They used to sit on his lap and pull his hair and pull him all over the house, and he was always ready to crawl on his hands and knees or lie on his back or do anything to make them laugh. He sang and played on the piano himself and the children would stand 'round just adoring him when they heard that! They had a lovely, happy time. 'Twas a home just like you'd make for yourself—like a dream house that you would like more than anything else in the world—a happy home, everybody always happy. Our life—it just rolled on like a smooth sea—wasn't a thing for eleven years—not a bit of sadness of any kind. There was always fun and excitement, especially when Mr. Clemens was around. He used to go on a rampage about his shirts, though. If he found a shirt in his drawer without a button on, he'd take every single shirt out of that drawer and throw them right out of the window, rain or shine—out the bathroom window they'd go. I used to lok out every morning to see the snowflakes — anything white. Out they'd go!"

Christopher Morley and Don Marquis have written introductions to the gallant and bibulous anthology published recently under the title, "Full and By." Cameron Rogers is the editor and the decorations are by Edward A. Wilson, whose illustrations of "Iron Men and Wooden Ships" won its selection by the Society of Graphic Arts as one of the fifty most beautiful books of the year.

With its hilarious wood cuts, many of them in four colors, its black and white sketches, end papers showing shadows through a tavern window and the silhouette of the innkeeper and the thirsty traveler on the board back, this companion volume to "Iron Men and Wooden Ships" is among the most decorative books of the season.

The drinking songs include many of the old fifteenth and sixteenth century favorites, records of the days of the whole-hearted potman, when scansion and rhythm were of minor importance if the mug appeared promptly and brimmingly upon the oak, as well as such modern hymns to Bacchus as those of Don Marquis and G. K. Chesterton.

And among them is a lyric to Catawba Wine by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, which is, in its way, a perfect drinking song. An eminent townsman of the poet condemned it with the phrase, "the old boy was singing about white grape juice," but the charge has been heatedly refuted by Christopher Morley, who knows Catawba at first hand.

Putnam's publications for the spring include several books which have been unavailable for some time, but for which there has been sufficient demand to warrant their being reprinted. Among these works are: Volume II of Jusserand's "Literary History of the English People," dealing with the period from the Renaissance to the Civil War and "Tennyson; His Art and Relation to Modern Life," by Stopford A. Brooke.

BIOGRAPHICAL AND CRITICAL

BY M. F. CUMMINGS

FROM PRESIDENT TO PRISON. By Ferdinand Ossendowski. In collaboration with Lewis Stanton Palwn. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

Ferdinand Ossendowski is already well known in America through his "Beasts, Men and Gods." A Polish chemist with an already brilliant reputation, he was appointed by the Russian government to co-operate with their army in Siberia during the Russo-Japanese War. He was given the title of chemical expert to the general staff, established his laboratory at Harbin and until the close of the war was immersed in various economic activities.

As the result of an unfortunate accident Dr. Ossendowski was obliged to visit St. Petersburg for medical treatment and from trustworthy sources learned of the intrigues against the commander in chief of the army, of the quarrels and struggles among the members of the general staff, and of the terrific waste and incompetence prevailing, all of which were making Russian defeat inevitable. On his return a committee of high civil officials was formed and a telegram sent to the central government informing it of the state of affairs. But no investigation was made, and strikes, revolution and riot followed. The Peace of Portsmouth liberated the soldiers, who, owing to the breakdown of transportation were unable to reach their former homes, and the Russian Far East was virtually in a state of civil war. In this emergency, a meeting was called and a committee of fifty-six members elected having Ossendowski as its president, with the declared object of "taking over the control and management of affairs in the Russian Far East." In taking these steps the committee was acting on the widely accepted theory that when an organized government refuses or neglects to perform the duties for which it was created its powers lapse, and the individuals composing a nation have a right to combine for the direct protection of their rights and interests, for the restoration of order and the protection of unoffending citizens. But of course, the "government by divine right" speedily convinced them of their error and Ossendowski and other leaders were sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The revolting details of life, as well as the psychological reactions created by existence in a Siberian prison, are interestingly detailed.

When liberated, Ossendowski speedily obtained employment with a private corporation, solved for his new employers a chemical problem which was militating against their success in business, was rewarded with a competence, and was temporarily at rest. He failed to foresee the great war, the consequent realignment in the scheme of things of his native land and the establishment of Bolshevism in Russia but he tells us that he has survived these changes "sound in mind and body and still believes that life is the beautiful gift of Almighty God."

CHANGING IRELAND. STUDIES IN THE LITERARY BACKGROUND OF THE IRISH FREE STATE. 1889-1922. By Borreys Jephson O'Conor. Harvard University Press, Cambridge.

A book of essays and reviews, all concerned with contemporary Irish writers and with their influence on Irish life and politics.

"Comparatively few people," says this author, "realize the ultimate connection between Irish political thought and the Erse literary revival." Beginning with Yeat's "The Wanderings of Oisin," published in 1889, this poet and his followers set themselves to the reproduction in English of ancient Gaelic literature. The patriotic enthusiasm thus aroused led to the formation by Douglas Hyde of the Gaelic League, dedicated to the preservation of the Irish language and the encouragement of the use of this ancient language as the every-day medium of expression in Ireland.

The next step was the study of the Erse political system which led a certain class to advocate its restoration as soon as complete social and political separation from Great Britain could by any means be effected, their theory being that "it would fit the Irish temperament as the glove the hand." The careful resume of this system given by this accurate and painstaking author is very interesting, and there is a reasonable presumption that if the so-called Irish Republicans ever come into power they will attempt to foist this out-worn governmental plan of organization upon their countrymen. But those who believe that the average Irish brain has remained static for the past 2000 years, and so has acquired no new convolutions during that period, do their own countrymen a fouler injustice than the most prejudiced "Sassenach" that ever mocked at Celtic intelligence and love of progress.

The essays and reviews, as well as the apt excerpts from ancient and modern Irish authors, are of assured excellence, the distinctive beauties of Celtic literature having never been better presented. No lover of good literature can afford to postpone the reading of this enjoyable volume.

PASSION AND GLORY. By William Cummings. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

The hero of this sordid tale is a Norwegian emigrant of peasant stock, named Lens Dietrichson, who, in his youth, had crossed the ocean to join an older brother, a bachelor already settled near a little fishing village on the Massachusetts coast. Here the newcomer supported himself as a cleaner and packer of fish. His brother died a few years later, leaving Lens a small acreage of American soil planted to fruit trees and a shanty in which the two men had lived.

Lens was a handsome blond man, industrious and passing honest, but dissolute and very conceited. It was this latter quality that emboldened him to propose marriage to a young woman of good character and more than average educational attainments, who taught the village school. Myra Clark was attracted by him, but was not inclined to marry beneath herself, and so refused Lens, to mate with an American named Capt. Whitney, the owner of a smart schooner and a comfortable house, who did not express his affection in terms of the slums.

Myra bore her husband two children, but in the end sickened of him, deserted her family, and secretly migrated to Pennsylvania, where she returned to school-teaching. The abandoned husband was soon after most opportunely drowned, and his widow then came back to his home and to the care of her children. Of course, she later married the Norwegian, and gave him a son, whose life was brief. Lens, who had a devouring desire to perpetuate his breed, was shocked and grieved at the child's death, which in a few years was followed by the passing of Myra.

Sometime afterward, he accidentally remet one of the "pretty ladies" whose acquaintance he had made during his bachelor days, who informed him that he was the father of a healthy 7-year-old son, to whom she had given birth shortly after Lens's marriage. Lens then made the obvious "amends," and thus at last found his level.

This novel is distinctly inferior to "An Island Chronicle," for that tale, though somewhat crude, was a valid and authentic production, while this is merely a passable imitation of other "strong" novels, and is therefore as refreshing and delightful as the odor of a well-stirred compost-heap on a sultry summer day.

A flower-bed clock with blossoms planted over the dial of a real timepiece, tipped up so that passers-by may see the hands, is one of the sights at Interlaken, Switzerland.

LITERARY GOSSIP

John Drinkwater, whose "Robert Burns" (Houghton Mifflin Company) has just been published, finds that both in England and America there are three classes of readers, quite unlike; the unlettered masses, hungry for anything and being fed mostly on bad literary fare; the minority critics and their following, and, most important, a group of "citizens who read for cultivated enjoyment and who are equally unaffected by the vulgarities of the crowd and the accomplished prejudices of the coteries. It is with them that the true prosperity of contemorary writers rests, and it is among them that the great writers of the past find, we suspect, their living audience."

"Contemporary American Fiction"—as an English critic sees it—is a feature of the January Harper's Magazine. The English critic in the case is J. B. Priestley, who writes frequently for the London Mercury. Mr. Priestley takes our authors to task because, he claims, their primary interest is in backgrounds of all kinds, with the result that they have only a secondary interest in human character.

A limited, autographed edition of "The Perennial Bachelor" has been issued by Harper's as well as a boxed, uniform edition of all four of Anne Parrish's novels. The publishers received so many requests for autographed copies of "The Perennial Bachelor" that they decided to box a special autographed edition to meet the demand.

The wide attention being given to the works of Stendahl these days brings from the Saturday Review of Literature the statement: "Though he is not so widely known as Balzac, Zola, Flaubert, or Anatole France, Stendahl's influence is deeper and will probably be more permanent. Indeed, it is not without reason that he is called the master and model of the contemporary novel."

More than once President Coolidge has emphasized the paramount importance of Christianity in nation, State and home. In "An Outline of Christianity," which is to be issued by Bethlehem Publishers and Dodd, Mead & Co., leading English and American scholars representing every type of Christian faith, from Roman Catholic to Quaker, have traced the story of the development of Christianity from the beginning to the present day.

But the editors of this "Outline" did not stop there. They invited thinkers whose religion was opposed to Christianity, to examine and analyze Christendom and, in particular, to tell Christians where they fell short in their application of the ideals enunciated by the Founder. Invitations to write in this vein of "outside" criticism were accepted by a prominent Jew, Hindu and Mohammedan, and the result promises to be unique, illuminating and good for the soul.

Mrs. Florence Ayscough, author of "A Chinese Mirror," just published by Houghton, Mifflin Company, has long been a resident of China, and is one of the best known of Chinese scholars. She writes: "If there is one thing more than another that the Chinese lay stress on, it is the importance of water. It represents the earth principle, and its presence in every scene is considered necessary to make beauty absolute." Of the many beautifully appropriate drawings by Lucille Douglass which illustrate the book Royal Cortissoz said: "We have never seen modern pictures of the East more convincing."

In connection with Frederick Pierce's forthcoming book, "Understanding Our Children," which E. P. Dutton & Co. will publish early in January, it is to be noted that both of Mr. Pierce's previous books, "Mobilizing the Mid-Brain" and "Our Unconscious Mind," both published by the Duttons, are included in the "Selected List of Books for Parents and Teachers," provided by the Child Study Association of America.

INSPIRATION FOR WRITERS

The new home of Rupert Hughes on Los Feliz Boulevard, Los Angeles, is an adaptation of Persian motives and details. It is built around a central patio which it completely surrounds with two-story walls. The building includes a studio for Mr. Hughes, a room nearly fifty feet long and two stories high with built-in cases for his library of 10,000 volumes. The flat roof is rimmed with growing flowers, which will hang over the walls. Back of the house the foothills rise to the mountains.

THE WORLD COURT. By Antonio Sanches de Bustamante. Presented by The American Foundation through The Macmillan Company, New York.

This is an authoritative and illuminating story of the World Court, by an international jurist of the first rank, a judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice, member of The Hague Court of Arbitration and vice-president of the Institute of International Law.

Judge Bustamante describes in detail what does and what does not come within the court's jurisdiction; the court's relation to the League of Nations; the manner of electing the judges; and, most important of all, he effectively and clearly demolishes the charge so often and so persistently put forward by the opponents of the court, that the judges represent national interests only. In fact, there is nothing that the most violent irreconcilable can ask in the way of a question about the court that this learned and frank jurist and scholar has not undertaken to answer clearly and dispassionately.

He traces the history of mankind's attempts to organize some such tribunal as the present World Court back to the days when Delphos and Thermopylae flourished. He shows how the first attempts were futile because of circumstances that the well-meaning statesmen who were promoting the idea were unable to overcome. But in this he uses but small space for he is primarily interested in setting before the world just what the present World Court is, what it aims to do and how it proposes doing it.

One of the questions often raised, usually by opponents of the court, is that of "sanctions." "How," it is asked, "is the court going to enforce its awards?" The answer to this question is found in the fact that the court has already rendered a number of important decisions, and they have been complied with by the nations against whom the decisions were rendered. As a matter of fact, the court has behind it a very vital and powerful force, namely, public opinion, as distinguished from force in a military sense. A recent writer in discussing the force behind an arbitral award says: "The distinction must be kept clear between force, which is the physical instrument of authority, and authority, which is the moral support of force." This writer points out that "authority may maintain itself without any great amount of force, as in the case of the priest, the father of a family, the apostle preaching his doctrine, or the master in his school; but, without a certain degree of authority, force immediately becomes unendurable tyranny, leading to revolution or reaction."

As at present constituted, this court possesses the maximum authority between the nations. This being true, Judge Bustamante feels that it will need only a minimum of force in order to secure respect and obedience for its decrees. That the adherence of the United States to the World Court will have a stimulating effect on the court's power, by adding to its already solid basis of authority, is, I believe, the conclusion of all who have studied the matter.

The World Court has in addition to this, the combined economic, social and military power of fifty-one sovereign nations back of its decisions. In view of this, it seems foolish to suppose that any nation, taking its case before the court, and after a fair and impartial hearing of the evidence and investigation of the facts by an unbiased tribunal, will undertake to defy the court and refuse to abide by the decision rendered.

As a matter of fact, though, the court has been functioning but a little over three years, some forty-seven treaties and international agreements have been before it for adjudication. These questions, ranging all the way from those arising under the Treaty of Versailles to the simplest of commercial matters, have all been decided and the authority of the court as final has not been questioned in a single instance.

In this very ably reasoned presentation of the potentialities of the World Court, Judge Bustamente does not claim for it that it is a cure-all or that it will make war impossible. What he does point out very clearly and very dispassionately is that it will settle many questions in such a way that their war-breeding potentialities will be greatly lessened.

He emphasizes the fact that the world is making progress. This must be clear to all thinking men, including many who seem to be incapable of thinking. It is just 300 years since Hugo Grotius, the great Dutch jurist, theologian and poet, gave to the world his great work: "On the Nature of War and Peace," published in Paris in 1625. Grotius was the father of international law and it is because international law has gained recognition—not always full recognition—among the nations, that a Permanent Court of International Justice is possible today.

If the World Court needs anything to emphasize its success it is the adherence of the United States. President Coolidge is ready for court adherence. In this he has the support of the majority of his party and of the majority of the opposition party. That the people at large are for the court seems evident. The opposition is now confined to a little handful of irreconcilables. I am sure that if these men, blind as they seem to be in this matter, would, or could be induced to read this book, many of the fears that trouble their too vivid imaginations would be dispelled.

There is an interesting foreword by Edward W. Bok which should make enlightened reading for those childish patriots who are forever shivering for fear the United States become entangled in foreign affairs. They are interested only in domestic affairs, such as taxation and agriculture. These broad-visioned, far-seeing statesmen think taxation in the United States is a

The truly great in the least for all this public gazing and staring and the others accept the homage as a sort of asinine stunt which on the whole is rather tiresome. That it persists year after year bears record to the low order of intelligence among us. If another George Washington or Abraham Lincoln should suddenly appear among us we might be pardoned for going out of our way to do them honor. Yet the real tribute to greatness is in the heart's devotion. That does not need a parade or a fiesta. The morbidly aurious who push and jostle to stare at some jailbird or some inconsequential person who happens to occupy the center of the stage for the time being, have nothing to offer and no reason for offering it. Their minds are aimless, their brains unemployed and they amuse themselves with curious dwelling upon the imaginary good fortune or ill fortune of the mannikins in the spotlight at the time. The stage is always occupied.

We wonder if, after all, these modern thinkers are right when they declare after careful investigation that the average brain power of the race is that of a child. If so, what is the remedy for this state of things? If it takes ages to evolve faculties from the caveman's status to the present advanced educators of the race, how long will it be before the masses will be able to think and reason intelligently and to have a clear idea of the part they are to play in life's drama? Also what form of teaching and training shall they have to secure the best results? Witness the faces and actions of any mob and you will realize the need for such training. One writer states that "Forces created by our manner of life are at work in our country today, which have dulled the fine edge of the intelligence that characterized the pioneers."

It does seem as though we have deteriorated when we look back a generation or two. When we consider the long line of distinguished heroes and statesmen and the great class of intelligent thinking people between we have reason to wonder if our boasted civilization of today shows results commensurate with our opportunities. Education was much more difficult to obtain in those other days. Many highly endowed men worked out their problems by the light of a fireplace or a tallow dip, with little help or encouragement from their teachers. Schools were few and far between in the countrysides and education seemed a prize worth attaining at all cost and hardship. The very hardships endured in order to acquire knowledge developed a certain heroic quality of character that is wholly wanting under our present system of easy education. The "Forces created by our manner of life" today probably refer not merely to the jazzy age, but to the mad rush for easy money which has created false standards. A superficial smattering of knowledge has resulted, with little real thinking.

In our Americanism of yesterday, as today, there were many unknown great ones standing just outside the limelight of public recognition. Then, as now, there were characters grandly simple, noble in self-sacrifice, never invested with the halo of public adoration. But the masses between seemed more purposeful, more rooted and grounded in all the virtues which make for good citizenship than the masses today. Is our melting pot responsible for the doubtful product?

Sometimes it is good to get a perspective in our hero-worship. Not alone a perspective of distance where heroes of other ages stand out as a background of our modern era, but one bounded by our ultra-modern life. Popular idols are always in the foreground. In the outer fringe, standing in the shadows of obscurity are many of earth's nobility. A successful life is not marked alone by its achievements, but by certain forces of character, certain ideals transmuted into character. The celebrity in the limelight may or may not possess any of the qualifications which make for greatness. Popular plaudits may rest upon a very insecure and flimsy foundation. Mere celebrity-worship is a tiresome and stupid performance. It is a morbid streak in human nature, akin to the curiosity manifested in notorious criminals. When it affects great masses of people it is a reflection on our general intelligence.

Psychologist is to Lecture at Women's Home

A series of lectures on psychology is to be given by Albert de Quevedo, Ph.D., this month, at the homes of several prominent Los Angeles women. The lectures will be given on Thursday mornings beginning the 21st inst., and continuing each Thursday until February 11.

The first will be given at the home of Mrs. Lucien N. Brunswig, the 21st inst., on the subject, "Background of Psychology." "The Ego" will be the subject of the talk given the 28th inst., at the home of Mrs. William Henry Brophy. The third of the series is to be held at the home of Mrs. Michael F. Regan and the subject, "Personality." The series will close with the lecture at the home of Mrs. Chester Wallace Brown, February 11, when the subject will be "Psycho-Analysis."

The Glory of Spring

I think one could remain within the walls of this great store and, walking through the aisles and among the departments, know always the season of the year without. And he would need no calendar, for styles are calendars within themselves.

Spring prepares for its gorgeous Southland bow. And all its colors and gaiety are already putting in an appearance in merchandise. From all over the world pour in shipments that fairly shout: "Spring is coming! Spring with its gladness, its greenness, its freshness!"

From our buyers in the East, and in Europe come word of lovely new creations they are sending here, and their messages are laden with enthusiasm for what they have found and purchased.

Surely nowhere, so much as in sunny Southern California, is springtime seen at its best! And that The May Company can play a part in dressing the men and women of Los Angeles in perfect tune with the season is a responsibility that we do not lightly regard.

Interesting little coincidence that Benno Moiseiwitsch, the Russian pianist, should have come to Los Angeles for his recital about the same time that John Drinkwater came with his lectures. For Mrs. Drinkwater was once Mrs. Moiseiwitsch—and there were heartaches.

John Drinkwater, at the little dinner given him by the Empire Club at whch Moresby White coaxed him into an after-dinner speech, was quite delightful, and much more happy than at his public lecture.

But one thing he said was that "a sense of deep tragedy was essential to art, that no country which lived for externals, pleasures, prosperity and happy endings could produce artistic geniuses. Life is essentially a tragic thing."

In a preliminary speech he had been accused of being a great British patriot. So he smiled naughtily as he confessed that when he was abroad that was perhaps true, but when he was at home in England he could see all England's faults and went up and down the country grouching about them.

"But this," he maintained, "is the right sort of patriotism. It would be well if American patriotism sometimes took that form."

He loves some of our American words, and considered "bonehead" a particular gem.

The Empire Club made John an honorary member. It is an infant organization in which one man provides all the enthusiasm and does most of the work and the rest consent to be enthused and urged and persuaded. I hope John will find it still alive when he comes next time.

Shakespeare is having quite a vogue, what with those monthly recitals given by Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Shepherd, with Frederick Warde back and appearing at the clubs and the Pasadena Community Players staging ten days of "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

It is all leading up to a Shakespeare festival week in April at the Philharmonic. The Shepherds' venture has outgrown private-house affairs and spread over into the Biltmore. Last Tuesday evening proved a joyous success with "Othello." And once again Mrs. Shepherd, the utterly lovely little Bess Tyler of years ago, amazing her friends as a heart-tearing Desdemona. She and her distinguished husband, without scenery, in modern clothes, kept their audience taut with emotion.

A large and stylish company graced the occasion, and I don't believe the enticing supper party given afterward by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Simons had anything on Shakespeare in bringing them out, either.

Carrie Jacobs Bond made her first public appearance there after her illness. She was feeling very sad, however, for her beloved pet dog, Michael, had been poisoned that morning. Several pet dogs have been poisoned in Hollywood recently and feeling is running very high about it.

Dear little Mrs. Florence Handyside is getting around again after that accident in which she was run down in a safety zone. She has resigned her regency of the Alexandria Chapter of the British Daughters and is succeeded in that office by Mrs. Vera Brooks.

Elinor Glyn's secretary bears the name of Winne. His Christmas cards this year were adorned with a crest which resembles a Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Morner hat, and bore the motto "Win and Retain." A euphonious transcription of "What I have I hold."

There was some anxiety about the empty table for ten which had been reserved for Mme. Glyn's party at the Sixty Club's New Year party at the Biltmore. Should some less glamourful souls be permitted to occupy it, or must it be held? And—er—will the club be out the $200?

The growing custom anent super-kisses at midnight on New Year's Eve was surely never more superlatively demonstrated than at that Sixty Club affair, as the lights were lowered. Not often can one see several score famous lovers thus embracing in a personal appearance.

Lilyan Tashman, in a white-blond wig, was exquisitely kissed by Edmund Lowe. The fair Claire Windsor, in a new straight bob, was entrancingly kissed by Bert Lytell. Cutey Colleen Moore was preciously kissed by John McCormick. Norma Shearer . . . but no, I could not be sure whether she was kissed by John Gilbert—in sideburns. I was getting a trifle boggled by that time. I am not sure who was kissing Carmel Myers (who, by the way, John Drinkwater admired and escorted whilst here,) or Gertrude Olmstead, or who was kissed by Warner Baxter and Bob Leonard, or whether Agnes Johnstone was being kissed by the right person. One does hope that everyone received the kisses they were entitled to—quite horrid if there were any glaring omissions.

I wish Mme. Glyn's party had turned up. I should have liked to see who kissed who.

Two persons arrived who insisted they were Warner Baxter's guests, and so were seated at his table. Warner repudiated them, said he'd never seen 'em in his life before. Worried head waiter trying to find them another host . . .

Dorothy Cummings was quite dashingly radiant in a white gown and lovely flame-colored shawl, with which the paper tri-color cap of festive design, went extremely well. No wonder Frank Elliott, in spite of his master-of-ceremonies woes, hastened over and planted a firm spousical kiss on her lips as we drifted into 1926.

Dorothy's babies, both boys, are 3 and 1 year of age, respectively. She rushed off to fill a New Year engagement when that newest one was only four weeks of age. What price movie motherhood?

We read that 235 sons of ministers celebrated New Year's Eve together in New York—all successful business men. Los Angeles was represented by Paul H. Helms, son of Dr. E. E. Helms of our First Methodist Church. He recently purchased the August Belmont box in the famous Metropolitan Operahouse for $200,000. He is president of the General Baking Company now—a $400,000,000 combine. And he used to drive a bakery wagon in Cleveland.

IN STORES AND HOMES

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS

By Olive Gray

From Here to There

If you have been inclined to think disparagingly of Los Angeles coutural creations, take another think. Such a think will be stimulated by the recently exhibited products of our garment factories, no doubt; and possibly you may remark to yourself, rather indulgently: "Very good—for us." But, let me tell you! We send here-made garments to New York and to other eastern cities, where their par-excellence instantly is recognized. One manufacturer, a true creator of gowns, tells me that her entire output goes directly to the eastern market, upon order; and I will add—upon merit.

Silk Translations

Was there ever a time when all weaves, colors and kinds of fabric found themselves so ably translated into silk as at present? Heavy weaves, plain and brocaded; weaves thistledown in lightness; weaves plain, jacquard and basketted; weaves surfaced satinly, creplly, embroideredly. Colors and patterns simulating everything loomed in any material. Plain colors, checkers bold, checkers dim, checkers broken; plaids outvieing those of the Highlands and the Lowlands; brocades brought down from the reigns of the Louis's and their court mesdames. If human mind can devise anything more varied, more wondrous, than the silken weaves of now, that mind should seek Elysian fields for its inventiveness.

Gladys writes that, owing to the unprecedentedly cold winter, Paris is endeavoring to high-up her modish shoes and low-down her knee-high skirts, looking toward a peace conference between the two—a conference for health. In her extremity, feminine Paris has, temporarily, adopted Russian and Wellington boots and her hard-driven physicians are advising elongation of skirts. But, regardless of advices, when has fashion been known to accommodate herself to either health or comfort? And, anyhow, what concern of ours the Parisian rigors? The climate is ours for incalculable loveliness in footwear, or any other.

That Riddle

If, in the interest of that interstice between boots and skirts, someone would invent a really fetching kneecap, the accessory might interest both health and beauty. Of course, you know the riddle—but I mean a knee-chapeau of fabric, knitted, silken or otherwise, warmth-giving and protective.

Cape Transition

After all, fashion is an evolutionist. Mark the come-about of the bolero, just peeking above the mode's horizon. The Spanish vogue: the short shoulder-capes; the bolero. A still later insert—the cape-wide loosely hanging sleeve, completing the all-around line that strikes just above the normal waistline. I hope you have not forgotten where that one-time line belongs—so long has it been absent from coutural use.

Aunt Jane Says:

And exemplifies it occasionally in our menu: After cooking the prunes for breakfast, add a few cut-up dates to the dish. Both fruits are wholesome and each enhances the flavor of the other.

Hose Deckment

Now it may seem like painting the lily or gilding fine gold, that new mode in hosiery embellishment, but yet—all limb-backs are not so perfect as could be wished, and somewhat to distract the eye of the onlooker might not be amiss—or a mister! Not to far digress, the fad is to embroider up the back of the stocking a sprig of lovely flowers and buds. Or possibly, it is but a tailorish arrow which is traced there. As I walk, observingly, along the downtown streets, I sometimes wish this passing mode would become universal. Many need enhancement.

Trig Little Hats

Like the one-time habit of wearing black, that of the small hat simply will not let go. Once embark upon the close-hat mode and you just cannot see yourself in a wide-brimmed affair. I suppose that is the how with those whom we elect to call our country cousins, although there is no "country" now, in the sense of being "countrified." Women who seldom venture forth into crowded ways are prone to cover themselves well with wraps—whereas, those greatly in the know, wear little, less and almost nothing. The same, in a way, applies to the hat, small and large. Only it is the reverse. Habit holds strong for the trig little, tight little chapeau, despite however potent an appeal from her wide-brimmed sister.

In Fashion's Class

A novel black velvet frock has sleeves, collar and underskirt of white lingerie.

Black velvet and cream lace is one of the winter's fashionable combinations.

Wide sleeves finished at the hand with deep lace frills make a plain gown rich.

There are many frocks with side drapery dropping below the hem on both sides.

To be truly fashionable the entire costume should be in accord in color and line.

Large pearl earrings are almost an essential when dressed for afternoon occasions.

Stockings worn in the evening are so sheer that they are a mere suggestion of covering.

Fashion allows great freedom with the skirt. It may flare, be perfectly straight, even or uneven at the bottom, trimmed or untrimmed, but it must be short.

ONE of the most unexpectedly difficult jobs under taken in pictures is the filming of "The Bat." This is the production of the famous stage mystery play, and it has taken almost as long to produce as a big costume feature. The time consumed will approach three months.

When you come to analyze it, the troubles of filming a mystery feature of this character are not so hard to understand. The real reason is that there have been no mystery plays ever put on the screen that are worth a second consideration.

The effort is being made in this particular picture to imbue the plot with the suspense that the original play had, and if painstaking care is going to help, "The Bat" in its film version should really be a big winner.

For investigation discovers that she is not the only picture player who dispenses with stockings when appearing before the public gaze.

Indeed, it seems to be the popular fad—at least, for screen appearances.

Esther Ralston the other day practiced a neat deception on the set of "The Blind Goddess" by using make-up so adroitly as entirely to conceal the fact she was not wearing silken hose, but was acting in the scene barelegged.

The very efficacious reason that Miss Ralston gave for the deception was that the scheme saves runners in stockings, due to the threads being cut by the beaded gown which she was wearing.

Which is evidence not only of ingenuity, we would say, but also of a new economy.

WHATEVER ERNST LUBITSCH does with "The Door Mat," which has been purchased as his next film comedy, it is a certainty that it will be radically different from the stage play. The production was given some time ago here, and could hardly be considered as a high success.

Sketched at the Rehearsal

BY GRACE KINGSLEY

EXIT the dear old thin revue, fast moving, but about nothing.

Enter the operetta, with its gorgeous harmonies, its lovely music, its engaging story.

We theatergoers are tired to death of the ancient gags, the tinpanny jazz songs, and even legs are no treat to anybody any more. We are educated beyond this sort of drivel. We yearn for real music, real stories, real acting. We like music with our songs, stories with our plots, smart lines other than the chorus girls', and the come-here-is-a-piano-in-the-forest-let-us-sing plotlets no longer amuse.

A revue to get by must be bright with sparkling new ideas, must have depth as well as color.

Louis Macloon and Lillian Albertson saw this, and so they are giving us the first real operetta ever produced in this city, Franz Lehar's "The Love Call," which opens Tuesday night at the Playhouse. In the meantime, over at the Biltmore, "The Student Prince" is being mobbed by the theatergoers hungry for worth-while music.

COSTLY AND LAVISH

"The Love Call," will be the most costly, spectacular and gorgeous production ever born in this city, without any doubt. The costumes and scenery alone, being from the original production, in which Geraldine Farrar sang just one night, after which the records have it, that she was taken ill, cost $73,000.

The truth of the matter is, of course, that Miss Farrar just didn't understand light opera, was dreaming of "Carmen" all the time, refused to take the advice of those who did know light opera.

"CATCHY" MUSIC

Never has this city heard more enchanting music than that of Lehar. It is real music, yet it is easy to remember, easy to whistle, easy to hum, easy to dance by.

Grace LaRue, who is a great favorite here in vaudeville, having headlined at the Orpheum several times, has a voice the real beauty of which has never been heard until you hear her sing "The Love Call." She has acting technique as well as singing technique, all gained from a former experience in Shubert and other musical comedies.

She plays the romantic role of a gypsy girl who has succeeded in the world of song, but who, once a year, strays back to the old gypsy comrades and becomes one of them. Miss LaRue's grace, dramatic gift, voice, beauty and charm pre-eminently fit her for the part.

NEW IDOL

All the little matinee girls are going to have a treat. Robert Rhodes is going to become their idol, or I miss my guess. He is handsome and engaging, and has a valvety voice which whirls you

NEW YORK REVIVES IBSEN

Four Productions by Scandinavian Playwright are to be Staged in February With Notable Casts

BY ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT

(Copyright, 1926, by New York World.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Ever since the late Clyde Fitch bedazzled his contemporaries twenty years ago by having six plays of his running at one time in New York many playwrights have toiled at their desks with that astounding record standing unconfessed in the back of their minds as a mark to shoot at.

When this season was new, it looked as though young Noel Coward of London would come nearest to it, with the hot breath of Michael Arlen making his neck uneasy. But after "The Vortex" was launched, Coward's brilliant "Hay Fever" was done to death in a side street before ever Jane Cowl could get to town with "Easy Virtue." After giving us "The Green Hat," and "These Charming People," Mr. Arlen decided to call it a season and went back to England.

The Fitch record, however, will be more nearly approached by another dramatist and this challenge comes from the most unexpected quarter in all the world. Unless certain works now in rehearsal are abruptly abandoned, it looks as though the month of February would see four plays by Henrik Ibsen running in New York at one time. It would be my guess that this never happened in the history of the English-speaking theater. And if the spirit of the late William Winter is still capable of his old time annoyance at the caprices of public taste he will, I am sure, greet this phenomenon by turning in his grave.

It is not a quarter of a century ago that Mr. Winter stood in the lobby of the old Manhattan Theater on the first night of Mrs. Fiske's production of "Hedda Gabler," audibly commenting on the hair-length, the bust-measure and the moral putrescence of the women who would so far forget themselves as to attend such foul balderdash.

That little memory comes back across the intervening years as a

New McGroarty Peace Play, 'Jan' Opens Tomorrow

John Steven McGroarty's great peace play, "Jan," will be given its world premiere by the Alhambra-San Gabriel Community Players, who will produce it at the Alhambra Art Center beginning tomorrow.

This play which comes at an opportune time, carrying as it does the message of universal peace, is the latest work from the pen of the author of "The Mission Play" and "La Golondrina." "Jan" is being costumed under the direction of the author's wife, Mrs. Ida L. McGroarty.

Richard Sterling, director of the players' organization and a principal actor in both "La Golondrina" and "The Mission Play," will interpret the title role. He will be supported by a capable cast of amateurs and professionals.

The cast includes Elsie Janssen, Bert Sprotte and Kurt Herrenfeld of the German Theater of Los Angeles, James De Vore, who has been playing in "What Price Glory?" Dorothy Jo Welch, Joe Hamm, Edgar S. Willard and Evelyn Shotwell.

Pasadenans to Produce Shaw's 'Major Barbara'

Turning from Shakespeare which has just been a triumph for them, to Shaw, with whom they are always dexterous, the Pasadena Community Players will next offer "Major Barbara," by the great Irishman, from the 21st to the 30th inst.

It has since the inception of the Community Playhouse in Pasadena eight years ago been the custom to offer at least one thing by Shakespeare and one by Shaw each season, not as a matter of duty, be it understood, nor solely because of the vital appeal of both but because, scoffers to the contrary opinion, they are among the most popular things that the Pasadena institution presents. "Merry Wives of Windsor," which was running last week, played to bigger average houses than for two months and "Major Barbara" is expected to do even better.

The presentation of Shaw always offers a difficult problem to any company, amateur or professional, for the playwright makes exacting demands upon his mouthpiece. For this reason particular pains have been taken in the casting of "Major Barbara" and the excellent company assembled includes Helen Jerome Eddy, Gilmor Brown, Maurice Wells, Lurene Tuttle, Cloyde Duval Balzell, Curtis C. Arnall, Helen Brooks, William Evans, Douglas Graham, J. N. Hawks and Wallace Deffett, among others.

There will be the usual Saturday matinees of "Major Barbara," which will run for eleven performances, opening next Thursday evening.

COMES HOME TO RESUME WORK

Irene Rich Will Play Just Normal Woman Again

Leaves Daughters With Her Mother in Europe

Tells Women to Keep Their Girls Out of Movies

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Irene Rich has arrived home from Europe after six weeks' "leave."

And "leave" is exactly the right word, for she had to leave Frances, 15 years of age, and Jane, 9, and their gradma, behind in Switzerland. But it was a wonderful, utterly thrilling trip, during which Irene was very much a mother first and a starry motion-picture actress a long way after. You see, the children are to spend two years in school over there, and, in the meantime, Irene will have to live on lovey code cables and tri-weekly letters—when she is not trying to commute between Hollywood and Switzerland between pictures.

But just before that emotional leave began, Irene had her very first taste of personal appearances. And she loved it, thrilled to it, and made a joyous success of it. And, she says, audiences in New York, Baltimore, Pittsburgh and Charlotte, N. C., are all "just darlings" and as easy and friendly as those of little country towns.

Incidentally, Irene has saved scores of ambitious maidens from flitting to Hollywood. But most of all has she saved scores of blue-eyed, fairy babies from being Baby Peggys and Jackie Coogans.

HOLDS RECEPTIONS

You see, after making her speeches, Irene held receptions in theater lobbies. And fond mammas with angel babies flocked. Irene would tell them to shelter, work for, protect those precious babies, and keep them at home until they were quite sure the babies themselves yearned for motion-picture fame.

Irene, you know, was once an amitious maiden herself. And just before she married, her husband-to-be gave a dinner at which Blanche Ring was guest of honor. So Irene sidled up to Blanche and inquired about stage careers. Blanche opined that matrimony babies were best—so Irene obediently tried them.

And, anyway, Irene has never regretted the babies. But . . . well, when nine years ago the matrimony failed, it was Blanche who gave Irene letters of introduction to people like Charlie Chaplin and Frances Marion in Hollywood. But some divine instinct, some precious good judgment, prevented Irene presenting those letters. She has since come to realize what an infernal nuisance letters of introduction can be, and even the disadvantage that can accrue through being pushed into pictures by a too-generous introducee.

WAS AN EXTRA GIRL

So Irene stood on her own feet and extra-girled with the rest of them, "atmosphere" in Mary Pickford's "Stella Dallas" being her first break-in. It was ages before she got a "part" and $50 a week. It took more years to become Will Rogers's gingham country girl for seven pictures—and, gosh, how she longed to wear real clothes. Irene says that selling herself for clothes roles was a matter of brilliant persistence. Then came the queen in "Rosita" — thanks to Lubitsch. Dear, dear Lubitsch, beams Irene, who has rescued her once or twice now.

Because it was after that that she became submerged in neglected-wife roles. Directors adored her capacity for tears. Irene says she really cries—and wore herself out thinking up unhappy experiences to inspire dire weeping. "The Lost Lady" was a role she loved, however, and being deserted in "Cytherea" by Lewis Stone was a worth-while experience.

But Lubitsch to the rescue once more. Hence Irene's appearance in the sophisticated role of Mrs. Erlynne in "Lady Windermere's Fan"—which has won her such joyous plaudits.

"Of course, audiences vary," confided Irene, "so that some approved the sophisticated role—even while bemoaning the bobbed hair. But most of them lovingly, earnestly implored me to be a neglected wife forever!"

ENJOYED ROLE

Oh, yes, Irene enjoyed being the naughty, but well-bred, clever, dauntless Mrs. Erlynne—but she is afraid Americans prefer 'em "sweet."

Irene was able to assure her admirers that she hasn't really bobbed her hair, it was only a wig. (Humph—long hair sort of goes with that neglected-wife stuff, you see!)

But now she is to appear as something uterly different yet again. And Walter Morosco, who owns Corinne Griffith (who once told me she was so glad dear Walter wasn't in pictures but making superlative hot-water heaters instead,) wrote the story and will direct Irene in it. It isn't officially titled yet, but Irene says it bristles with cute little touches, sly humor, and has a charming plot. She is a bit sophisticated, quite a lot sweet, fairly sensible—in fact, quite a nice normal woman in this role.

Irene has nearly two years of contract to run with Warner Brothers. But she is so happily confident about her screen future—since each step in her success has been so slow but assured. And she can go on playing her sorts of role until she is a dear little gray-haired old lady. She looks about 25 in spite of that long hair now.

I am desperately curious about a handsome Cadillac birthday present that was awaiting Irene's return—to help console her for her lonesomeness without Frances and Jane. But she would not divulge the thoughtful, generous donor. Yes, the charming home in Hollywood is going to seem very empty without Irene's mother and the two girls.

FILMLAND FROLICS

by HERBERT MOULTON

A WAR comedy de luxe! What promises to be hilariously funny entertainment of this type has just been filmed at Lasky's.

It is called "Behind the Front," and features Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, as the laugh-generating doughboys, and little Mary Brian as the heroine.

Hatton, who recently returned to town with his companion-in-khaki, otherwise known as "Wally," writes me the following description of his adventures on the "shooting" lines:

"Dear Herb:

"Wally said 'Fine la guerre' and I said 'Wee,' and that ended our famous battle in the trenches of San Fernando Valley.

"It is indeed interesting to recall the dreary days and nights we spent in the trenches expecting at any moment to be blown to pieces by the wind which whipped down the valley.

"Luckily, I was never bothered with the cooties, but Wally scratched quite a bit. He said it was the heavy underwear he was wearing. The nights were cold and dismal, and by means of the searchlights we could observe Hill No. 23, which marked the entrance to Cahuenga Pass—our ultimate objective.

SCRATCH SCRATCH

"HOWEVER, the war was not without its humorous sidelights.

I distinctly remember the shell-hole incident.

Our captain, Eddie Sutherland, who happened to be our director, ordered us to fall into a shell-hole filled with water. As we approached the hole our nostrils were filled with a terrible stench.

"We were sure there was something in the shell-hole besides Los Angeles aqueduct water.

A fake bomb exploded near Wally and we fell on our stomachs at the edge of the hole. Behind us we could hear the raucous voice of Eddie above the spluttering of the sun-arcs.

"'Get in that hole!' he shouted. 'Wassa matta with you dumb actors?'

"WE signalled back that we smelt something very decayed in the shell-hole.

"'Will you flatheads jump in that water?' screamed Eddie. 'The odor you smell is coming from that hog pen,' and he pointed in the direction of a farmer's back yard.

"So we gallantly flopped into the water-filled shell-hole.

"AFTER a week in the trenches we were sent back to our billets on the Lasky ranch, where more scenes were taken.

"One day a youth approached and asked us if he could enlist in the great movie army.

"He said he had six expressions, but understood five were enough.

"He asked Wally how many he had.

"Wally replied that he could give several variations of one expression, and asked the recruit to stand up in front of the still camera. We took pictures of all six expressions.

"Then the recruit thought we were trying to kid him, and he left.

"WHEN the war ended, Wally and I each had a bad cold and a couple of worn-out uniforms.

"'Well,' says Wally, 'what'll we do in our next picture?'

"'Next!' says I, somewhat taken back at Wally's assurance that there would be another picture. 'Better wait and see how many laughs there are in this one. If there aren't about a half a million dollars' worth, we might just as well enlist in a real army.'

"Militarily yours,
"RAY HATTON."

Eight-Year-Old Actor Carries Two Revolvers

Buck Black is toting about two six-shooters these days on the set of "Born to Battle" at the F.B.O. studio. The 8-year-old actor is playing his first heavy role in the picture and, although he is not called upon to do any shooting with his new weapons, Buck feels they add a certain atmosphere to his new part.

The happy smile is caused by Director Bob DeLacy's promise to make Master Buck a present of the two guns when the picture is completed.

CLEVER ACTOR WINS SUCCESS

Robert Ober Gains Unique Distinction on Screen

Plays Most Thankless Part in "Big Parade"

Prefers Farce-Comedy But Awaits Developments

BY FRANCES DEANER

Robert Ober

Yesterday Robert Ober was hissed as his celluloid self walked across the silver sheet at the Egyptian Theater. This sort of thing, more or less, has been going on out there in Hollywood for nearly three months—since November 5, to be exact. And Sid Grauman has not done anything about it. Neither has Ober, himself. They like it.

The hissing is a flareback to the old days of the ten-twenty-thirty-cent melodramas. For the villain to be hissed by the garrulous gods of the gallery was indicative of success. Fine. He was going over with a wow, or whatever they said then to express a hit. Hisses were the coin of the realm to him.

In the same ratio the contempt, expressed in one form or another by Egyptian audiences for Conrad Apperson, the boy who did not ship over and march in the Flanders processional of 1918 is an unadulterated compliment to Robert Ober. It is an American testimonial to the artistry of the actor who was brave enough to permit his name to go down in the annals of the motion-picture industry as having delineated the most thankless role of the present decade.

NOT A VILLAIN

Conrad Apperson is not hissed because he is a villain. He is just a harmless boy, handicapped by the necessity of wearing thick-lensed spectacles and by parents who never for a moment think of permit him to think he should get into the fight in the sense of donning the olive drab. In "The Big Parade" he is the brother of John Gilbert, who portrays Jim Apperson.

A boy such as Conrad Apperson probably never could have made the grade in the physical contest for identification discs. But the fact remains, he stayed at home and in staying at home he makes love to and wins the girl Gilbert left behind him. It is the unsportsmanship of this episode and the reaction on the part of the spectator more than any other phase of the character that brings forth the derision, spontaneously.

Robert Ober is a quiet-mannered, sympathetic actor, who naturally has the ability to forget himself and become transfused into the character he conceives. He knew exactly what he was doing when he gave life to Conrad Apperson.

"King Vidor talked the part over with me when he was preparing to direct 'The Big Parade,'" said Ober recently. "King told me without reservation just exactly what kind of a role it was—a negative character. But I was pleased to have the opportunity and we went ahead with the work. And, now—well—I cannot express how pleased I am to have had a part in the great classic. It was an interesting experience to work with Vidor and Jack Gilbert, both of them real, regular fellows."

FORMER STAGE FAVORITE

The pictures won Robert Ober away from the stage and in the year he has been before the camera he has appeared in nine widely different characters. He was portraying Cousin Henry in "White Collars" at the Egan Theater when he left to play with Douglas McLean in "Excuse Me." Among other productions in which he appears are "Time, the Comedian," "The Mystic," "Souls for Sables," "Morals for Men" and "The Checkered Flag," which he recently completed under the direction of John Adolphe. He has just signed for a part in the Louis Gasnier production, "Pleasures of the Rich," which will give him another opportunity for character portrayal, and he is to delineate the colorful role of Donals Mont-Allen in the screen version of "The Whole Town's Talking," in which Edward Everett Horton is to play the lead.

And, yet, all the time Ober prefers to play comedy. He prefers farce-comedy and has definite views on the type of comedian he would delineate.

"I would play him straight—once the premise of the farce had been established I would go ahead and play him for straight comedy. No one has yet done this consistently for the screen and I believe there is a place for such an exposition of character," Ober said. "Some time I hope to have the opportunity to put on the screen the type of comedian I have in mind."

PLAYED AT BELASCO

Comedy was for a long time the medium for Ober's artistry. For three years, 1907 to 1910, he played the lead in "Brewster's Millions," all over the United States. In December, 1911, he came to Los Angeles as leading man at the old Belasco Theater down on Main street, opening in the same comedy. "I came for a ten weeks' engagement," said the actor; "And I remained for seventy weeks." So it will be seen he readily won favor with the patrons of what was then the leading stock company house in the city.

After leaving here Ober returned to New York and for some time gave his attention to producing the plays of Maude Fulton, who is his wife. He not only produced, but also appeared in them, their most notable achievement being "The Humming Bird." Later they produced and played with success in Oakland at the Fulton Theater and in one of his business trips to Los Angeles, Ober was commandeered for a part in Valentino's film, "The Young Rajah."

Hollywood beckoned and Frank Egan induced Ober to appear in some of the Little Theater productions previous to "White Collars," in which he played for eight months. Meanwhile, he produced Miss Fulton's latest opus, "The Big Top," at the Majestic Theater. His most recent activity in connection with the spoken stage was the directing and producing of "Private Jones," a one-act, German war-zon play, in which he also played a role.

BANNER YEAR FOR SEITER

New Contract and Picture at Metropolitan Augur Well for 1926, but It's up to Laura Now

There's nothing bromidic in the statement that 1926 will be a banner year for William A. Seiter.

He already has two achievements to his credit—and both of them took place during the first two weeks of this year.

The first is the distinction of being the first Universal director to have his picture run at the Metropolitan Theater here.

The other is the signing of a new five-year contract with Carl Laemmle—at what is reputed to be twice the salary obtained from his former one.

There is one thing more, but it isn't an achievement as yet. If and when it does come to pass, Seiter is authority for the statement that it will be greater than anything he can ever hope to do along directorial lines. For it deals, you see, with the charming young person of Laura La Plante.

DIRECTS REGINALD

Seiter has directed Reginald Denny in four of that popular comique's best pictures. One of them is "What Happened to "Jones," which smashes a precedent by running in the Metropolitan, a Paramount house. Tradition is due for a further disintegration by the fact that two more Denny features are scheduled for this same theater. One of them is "Skinner's Dress Suit," and the other "Rolling Home," now in production.

The latter is an adaptation of the play in which Edward Everett Horton starred at the Majestic. Seiter believes it to be far better suited to the screen than the stage. The screen version permits a greater range of latitude in the treatment and furnishes opportunities for situations which were impossible to accomplish behind the footlights.

LIKES COMEDY-DRAMA

Ever since Seiter directed Carter de Haven in some two-reelers for the Goldwyn studios in 1919 he has been devoting his abilities largely to comedy-drama. He made two of Douglas MacLean's first feature comedies and later was responsible for a couple of Sol Lesser's Baby Peggy features. Perhaps, the most famous of all Seiter's efforts was "Daddies," which he did for Warner Brothers and which is said to be one of that firm's best money-makers to date.

When Carl Laemmle signed him a few years ago, Seiter was assigned the direction of two of Laura La Plante's first starring vehicles. They were "Dangerous Innocence" and "The Teaser" and it wasn't long after the filming of these that rumors began to circulate that the director-star team might become a permanent association.

When questioned recently about his reported engagement to Miss La Plante Seiter said he was not in a position to affirm or deny it.

"I'd be the happiest man in the world to be able to say that we are," he declared, "but I can't."

But 1926 is still extremely young.

It may turn out to be the biggest "banner year" in Bill Seiter's personal history.

WILKES TO STAGE NEW YORK HITS

Producer Plans to Bring Many New Dramas and Well-Known Players Here

Ten months of plays ranging from drama to musical comedy, and including some of the nation's biggest hits of the last year, will be the program of Thomas Wilkes, noted Los Angeles producer.

Wilkes, who will arrive here from New York shortly, made known his plans in a wire to his local managers.

Following "The Fall Guy," the current Orange Grove attraction, Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms," will make its bow to local audiences, Wilkes announced. Of particular interest is this play which has caused so much criticism both here and abroad.

Chief among the plays scheduled for Wilkes's coming season will be "Success," with Frances Star in the leading role, and Leo Carrillo in "El Supremo." Carrillo will arrive here for the opening of "Desire Under the Elms," and will go into rehearsals under Dickson Morgan's direction.

During 1926 Wilkes will premiere a number of new plays and, as has been his policy in the past, will continue to give new playwrights opportunities to gain success.

Following the termination of its run here, James Gleason's and George Abbott's comedy sensation, "The Fall Guy," with Ralph Sipperly, Marjorie Bennett, Franklyn Farnum and James Phillips heading an all-star cast, will be sent on the road to tour Wilkes's circuit, it was announced.

WAMPAS TO PRESENT NOVELTY

Will Present Replica of River Scene in De Mille's Latest Production

C. B. De Mille's latest photoplay production is to play a prominent part in the Wampas frolic and ball to be held on February 4 in the Shrine Civic Auditorium.

The first spectacular act to be announced will be a replica of the river scene in "The Volga Boatman,' which will culminate in "The Song of the Volga Boatman," sung by a male chorus of 100 voices. William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Theodore Kosloff, Victor Varconi and Julia Faye, the principal players in this production, will also be presented.

C. B. De Mille will personally direct this portion of the gala function given by the association of publicity men, while the remainder of the entertainment is in the hands of Sid Grauman.

The Wampas frolic is to be held on February 4 in the Shrine Civic Auditorium. For the first time in Wampas history, it is possible to have all seats reserved, and the tickets are going fast. All prominent stars and feature players have purchased their seats and reservations have been made whereby every studio will be represented.

The auditorium, which has the largest stage in the world, even larger than that in the New York Hippodrome, has a seating capacity of 6400 and the spacious ballroom permits 6000 couples to dance comfortably.

This entertainment will be the most elaborate in theatrical history and includes more celebrities than any other presentation of its kind. The money involved would be far in excess of $100,000, if individual salaries were taken into consideration.

All the stars will be there and the motion-picture fans will also have an opportunity to see the famous men and women who write and direct their favorite photoplays.

IN FRANCES MARION OPUS

After completing a role in Priscilla Dean's new picture, "Forbidden Waters," Malcolm Denny is remaining at the Metropolitan studios to do the part of Maxime in the Frances Marion production of "Paris at Midnight," adapted by Miss Marion from the Balzac classic "Pere Goriot." Malcolm Denny is no relation to Reginald Denny, although he has played in many of his pictures.

OPERETTA TO MAKE DEBUT

right off into the land of romance.

Rhodes is the singer who created such a sensation in the "Music Box Revue" in New York, a couple of seasons ago. Before coming west, he was scheduled to sing in "Madame Butterfly," but gave it up for the western trip. He sang "Rose Marie" and "Blossom Time" in New York and also on the road.

And he got into the business of singing because, when a boy, he was sickly!

HORSE DID IT

"I used to ride horseback as a child," he said, "until I fell off one day, and the horse rolled over me and flattened out my chest. I started deep breathing exercises, and from that took to singing. I was always crazy about music, but, oddly enough, never could even carry a tune until after I was 14 years of age."

You all know Rose Rolanda. Maybe you don't know her under that name. She is really Rose Cowan, who began her career as one of Marion Morgan's dancers. Since then she has danced in the Music Box Revue and other productions. She has studied and danced in Europe since we saw her last. She was severely injured in a fall during her Music Box engagement, and went to a water cure in the Pyrenees, where she recovered. Then she went to Spain and studied, and her Spanish dance, which she does in "The Love Call" is the result of her work with a wonderful gypsy teacher of Seville, La Macarona.

And Miss Rolanda says it isn't true at all that she was ever engaged to Avery Hopwood, the playwright.

"We are great friends," she said, "but Mr. Hopwood told the reporters that we were engaged, just as a joke, when he was leaving for Europe, when I went down to the pier to see him off. He is going to live in Italy, and Carl Van Vechten, Fania Marinoff, Van Vechten's wife, and I do expect to visit him there next year."

You remember Alice Cavanaugh, who was such a dainty Nellie in "Little Nellie Kelly." She has a charming comedy role in "The Love Call," and as before, plays opposite the beautiful voiced Lester Cole.

FEATURED COMIQUE

Roy Atwell, famous musical comedy farceur, remembered especially for his singing of "Some Little Bug Will Get You," carries the big comedy role. His latest appearance was in "Helen of Troy, New York," written by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby.

Kalmar and Ruby, who also have several Greenwich Village Follies and Music Box Revue numbers and acts to their credit, are here, and have written a couple of special numbers for Atwell, as well as a song for Miss LaRue.

The dancing chorus is the same as that which lured the Jonnies in "Little Nellie Kelly," but in addition there is a large chorus of singers, both men and women, and the volume of harmony promises to be glorious.

In the meantime, Arthur Kay, who is conducting the operetta, is dashing about in an old sweater, behind a set of bushy whiskers, both of which he promises to discard in favor of more conventional raiment before next Tuesday night.

CRITIC REVIEWS NEW TRENDS

probably transform it into an interesting and amusing study of the mother who revolts against too much staid convention, and the demands of family and home. The theme is not exactly a new one, but it will be all the more intriguing on that account to see how Lubitsch treats it.

O'BRIEN WITH UNIVERSAL

Tom O'Brien has just completed "Poker Faces," his first picture for Universal since his big success, "The Big Parade," now showing at Grauman's Egyptian Theater in Hollywood. He will immediately start on his second. O'Brien is under contract to Universal to make three productions.

GIRLS FORM CLUB

Upon learning of Dorothy Phillips's return to the screen, a large group of girls representing the best families of Baltimore, have organized the Dorothy Phillips Club. Upon being notified of her nomination, Miss Phillips set about to assist the club in every way possible to make it a success.

ESTHER RALSTON CHARMING GIRL

Mrs. Darling of "Peter Pan" Expresses Dulcet Name

Paramount Player Married to Her First Love

Has Been Before Camera for Eight Busy Years

When a slip of a girl, with "sweet" manners, fairy blond hair, hazel eyes, with long black lashes, and a large, mobile, expressive mouth filled with pretty teeth, is coralled for eleven pictures in one year by Lasky's, you may assume that they have a marked faith in her charms and talents.

That is what has happened to the youthful Esther Ralston, for whom 1925 proved a hectic, exciting, glamorful year. It concluded for her with a honeymoon—for she was married to George Webb Frey on Christmas Day. And George is in the business end of picture-making, which can prove advantageous both romantically and commercially.

Esther was one of the three now-famous girls who made their real screen debut in "Peter Pan"—Betty Bronson, Mary Brian and Esther Ralston. She played the enticing role of Mrs. Darling, the young and completely fascinating mamma of the Darling children.

FAMILY OF ACTORS

But with a quite delicious, childlike air of tremendous seriousness, Esther assured me that she was an old campaigner—oh, frightfully old. For, coming of a theatrical family in which mamma, papa and four brothers were all on the stage, Esther feels she has been a professional since the day she was born twenty-three years ago.

And she certainly considers she has been in pictures for eight years—for did she not play a small part in "The Deep Purple" way back in history—1914 to be exact? And not so long after that did not William D. Taylor of tragic memory, choose her for the "lead" in "Huckleberry Finn"? So we shall have to admit that Esther was no inexperienced find whose luck came overnight, even if we had not heard much about her before "Peter Pan."

Esther is a thoroughly sweet, sentimental little person. Even with theatrical parents, traveling around with them on tour all her summers, going to school wherever they were during the winters, with no settled home ever anywhere, Esther must have been peculiarly well brought up, carefully, charmingly protected.

"Is Mr. Frey your first love?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," breathed Esther. "I have always waited for my ideal. I have always cherished sentimental visions of marriage and motherhood and decided I would surely wait for the very right man." She reached for a little leather bag and fetched her platinum wedding ring, studded all round with tiny diamonds, from its depths. You see, she must not wear it for her role in the picture.

"That is my most precious possession," she said solemnly, with dramatic reverence. "And that is why I loved the role of Mrs. Darling, you know. I—I have very special ideas of motherhood."

"But motherhood, if they are going to keep up this pace of eleven pictures a year . . ." I demurred.

"Oh, I have just signed a new contract for five years, to play only six pictures a year," she explained. "I could wait for my love and now I can wait for my babies," she smiled tenderly. "But we are going to build a real home—it will be the first I ever had—and be all ready when the time comes. I just know I shall be a good housekeeper," she bubbled, "because even now my husband teases me and wonders if we ever could have visitors without me mopping up the bathroom floor."

SERIOUS MATTER

"I take my parts so seriously, so thoroughly," she told me, "that my husband says he always knows what sort of a role I am playing. When it was Mrs. Darling, I mothered him and bossed him around. When it is a sophisticated girl part, he says I ritz him. When it is a hoydenish-girl role, I jump over the furniture at home. So he will have a different kind of a wife for every picture I play in—and he wont have a chance to get tired of me," she beamed.

Esther says that settling down in a real home—they are going to build on Bryn Mawr—will be the most wonderful experience for her. She always seems to have been traveling, living in trunks. Last year her picture work took her to Florida, Texas, Bermuda, New York.

After "Peter Pan," she appeared in "The Goose Hangs High," "The Beggar on Horseback," "The Little French Girl," "The Lucky Devil," "The Trouble with Wives," "The Best People," "A Kiss for Cinderella," "Womanhandled," and the "American Venus," which has not yet been released, but in which she is starred, and which she considers one of the best parts she ever had. "My first real chance to show what I could do," she says, with shining eyes.

WILL NOT RETIRE

They are making "The Blind Goddess," now in which she plays with Ernest Torrence and Jack Holt.

"Do you intend retiring at the end of your five-year contract?" I asked.

"Well, it would not be fair for me to do so, if this company has made me a big star, would it? I should have to consider them. But I don't want to wait too long for those babies," she said wistfully. "And I certainly think it is a mistake to go on after one's popularity begins to wane in pictures."

She was wearing a very chic imported gown for her role in "The Blind Goddess"—which, you see, is designed to be the height of style three months hence. It was of black silk, cleverly embroidered round the skirt, which was very short and narrow, wherein a sort of boiled cabbage green was the dominating color. From her shoulders hung a cape which hung just below the waist, lined with the same green, and embroidered to match the skirt. On her head was a green hat—that same boiled-cabbage green that is so drastic on most of our complexions—with a brush of brown aigrette poked in on the right side. But, otherwise, the same type of close-fitting little felt that prevails now. Black patent slippers and oyster white silk stockings completed this Frenchy rig-out. So there's the summer styles for you.

Gloria Swanson Given Welcome by Entire Town

All work stopped when Gloria's special train arrived and most of the town's 4600 souls were at the station to extend a welcome. Mayor Clark and a band were there, too. Hundreds of automobiles blocked the roads.

Miss Swanson was visibly affected by the wonderful welcome accorded her, being especially pleased with her temporary home, the Noll mansion, located on the bank of the Ohio River and commanding an excellent view of the surrounding country.

During the Paramount company's stay in New Martinsville, a local printer published a four-page daily paper giving all up-to-date news of production activities.

"Stage Struck" is an original screen story by Frank R. Adams, adapted by Sylvia La Varre. Lawrence Gray is Gloria's leading man in the production. Ford Sterling has a fine comedy role. Forrest Halsey wrote the scenario.

WRITES FOR ROACH

Richard Wallace is at present writing his next story, which he will direct for Hal Roach. This young megaphone wielder recently completed the direction of Theda Bara's first picture since her announced retirement from the screen.

'GOLD' TO BE PRESENTED THURSDAY

Literary Theater Will Give O'Neill Greed Play at Gamut Clubhouse

The Literary Theater of Los Angeles is giving its second play, "Gold" at the Gamut Club on the 21st and 22nd inst. with a familiar caste including Frayne Williams, George Fortier, Mrs. H. C. Bender, Henry Price and Jean Harvey, all of whom are well known and liked by Los Angeles theater-goers.

This theater has given its plays successfully in Los Angeles for the last four years. "Gold" is one of Eugene O'Neill's earlier plays and has a melodramatic story of the passion for gold and its fatal consequences.

Frayne Williams as Capt. Isaiah Bartlett is the direct antithesis of the Charles Surface which he so charmingly portrayed in "The School for Scandal."

His Capt. Bartlett will show a directly opposed personality — a bluff and hearty whaler who suddenly is overcome by greed for gold. The transformation in his character and the fatal effects upon all those with whom he is most deeply concerned give a striking significance to this drama of the sea.

Mrs. Bender as Mrs. Bartlett is at her best in this sort of play. She will be remembered as Mrs. Dudgeon in "The Devil's Disciple."

Madame Behave in Second Week at the Figueroa

Julian Eltinge has returned to the screen after a prolonged absence in "Madam Behave," Al Christie's new comedy, which smashed attendance records at the new Figueroa Theater last week to such an extent that the engagement has been continued for another week. This has meant that the feminine portion of Los Angeles has been set in a whirl by the famous impersonator. For where Julian Eltinge is, there generally the most bewitching dresses are on view. In this comedy, however, he not only wears skirts, but trousers as well.

Having made an exhaustive study of everything pertaining to woman's wardrobe, Mr. Eltinge's word is that of a recognized authority. He has solved such problems as where skirts end and waists begin, where sleeves hesitate and the direction necks shall curve.

Eltinge is a unique figure in the dramatic world, where for a score of years he held the foremost place as the impersonator of feminine fads and fancies. In "Madam Behave" he is seen as a young architect who is forced to disguise himself as a woman and thereby provokes many amusing situations. Ann Pennington is his sweetheart in the story. The cast includes such favorites as Tom Wilson, Lionel Belmore, Jack Duffy, Evelyn Francisco, David James and Stanhope Wheatcroft.

H. B. Warner, star of the original New York stage presentation of "Silence," is to be featured by Cecil B. De Mille in the screen version of the play. He will start work on the picture early in January, under Rupert Julian's direction.

ON THE WEEK'S SHOW MENU

WORLD PREMIERE OF FRANZ LEHAR OPERA

Much interest centers in the world premiere of "The Love Call," Franz Lehar's new operetta, starring Grace La Rue, which is to be produced Tuesday evening at the Playhouse. This event is one of the highlights of the current theatrical season and it will be a significant social affair also.

Other attractions at the theaters are those which are enjoying long runs, although this is the last week of Bert Lytell in "Silence" at the Mason. "The Student Prince," with Roy Cropper continues at the Biltmore; "Kiki," with Charlotte Treadway at the Morosco; "Weak Sisters," with Franklyn Pangborn, at the Majestic; "White Collars" at the Egan; "The Fall Guy," with Ralph Sipperly at the Orange Grove, and "The Man Who Ate the Popomack" at the Potboiler.

Theatrical attractions in suburban cities which are of much interest here, include the world premiere of John Steven McGroarty's new peace play, "Jan," in Alhambra tomorrow night, and "Major Barbara," the Shaw opus, to be presented by the Pasadena Community Players next Thursday night.

Theodore Roberts, beloved of all playgoers, tops the new Orpheum bill and Grette Ardine and Gerald Griffin are stellar attractions at the Hillstreet. The Hippodrome offers a varied program and the Burbank a program of music and comedy.

Operatic World Premiere

With all the brilliance attendant upon gala premieres in this city, "The Love Call" will have its initial American showing at the Playhouse next Tuesday evening. Louis O. Macloon will surround the tuneful music of Franz Lehar's composition with settings and costumes which promise to enhance the beauty of the musical score. The company of seventy-five will be headed by the international star Grace LaRue and Arthur Kay will conduct the thirty-piece orchestra.

Theodore Roberts at Orpheum

The return to the speaking stage of Theodore Roberts, America's foremost character actor, is the sensational announcement that the Orpheum is permitted to make for tomorrow's matinee. Mr. Roberts has been long at the head of his profession both on stage and screen, and through the courtesy of Jesse L. Lasky he will return again to his own forte in the William C. De Mille play, "The Man Higher Up," with Kirkland Hardee as his companion. Eddie Leonard stays over for a third week. Frank Davis and Adele Darnell will return in "Caterpillars." Fortunello and Cirillino will be seen and heard in a series of funny evolutions. William Brack and his family appear in a series of sensational trampoline and aerial work. Murray and Alan will act in the jesting line. Lillian Zuegler and partner will exhibit some new feats of sensational aerialism, and Meehan and Newman will offer some "Broken Promises." Pathe news will be installed as a regular Orpheum feature, and topics of the day will run as usual.

Potboilers' Drama Continues

W. J. Turner's "tragi-comedy of love," "The Man Who Ate the Popomack," which has been creating quite a sensation at the Potboiler Art Theater, 930 South Grand avenue, will continue for an-

The cinema houses offer five new and interesting features this week. "Clothes Make the Pirate," starring Leon Errol, is to be seen at Loew's State; the Forum offers Monte Blue in "Red Hot Tires;" "The Great Love," with Viola Dana, is on the Criterion silver sheet, and Reginald Denny is the star of "What Happened to Jones," showing at the Metropolitan.

On Tuesday the Rialto offers Griffith's latest production, "That Royle Girl," with Carol Dempster, Harrison Ford and W. C. Fields.

Holdovers at first-run houses include "Madam Behave" at the Figueroa; "The Big Parade" at the Egyptian, and "The Merry Widow" at the Million.

At the second-run houses may be seen "Why Women Love," at the Boulevard; Gloria Swanson in "Stage Struck," at the Uptown; Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney," at the Alhambra, and "The Verdict" at Tally's.

On Wednesday night the West Coast Theaters will open their newest picture house, the Manchester, with a gala celebration.

Leon Errol at Loew's State

"Clothes Make the Pirate" is the First National attraction at Loew's State, with Leon Errol and Dorothy Gish featured. The cast includes Tully Marshall, George Marion, Nita Naldi, James Rennie, Edna Murphy and Walter Law. Fanchon and Marco's atmospheric presentation to the picture will be "A Pirate Idea."

Mary Pickford at Alhambra

Mary Pickford in "Little Annie Rooney," now at the Alhambra, has stepped out of the costume drama role, and back into the ragamuffin, hoydenish comedy characterization that so endeared her to the public, and won her the title "The World's Sweetheart." The supporting cast includes William Haines, Spec O'Donnell, Vola Vale, Eugene Jackson, Carlo Schipa, Gordon Griffith, Walter James and Hugh Fay.

"The Verdict" at Tally's

"The Verdict," a Truart production, opened for a week's run at Tally's Broadway Theater Saturday. This is said to be one of the best mystery plays ever screened at this theater, containing an entirely new idea in camera story telling. The capable cast is headed by no less a personage than Lou Tellegen. Opposite him is Louise Lorraine, and the list includes Taylor Holmes, Elliott Dexter, William Collier, Jr., George Fawcett, Gertrude Astor, Josephone Swickard and Gaston Glass.

"Big Parade" to Celebrate

The one hundred and fiftieth consecutive performance of "The Big Parade" and Sid Grauman's patriotic prologue will be marked by the celebration of one-hundred and fiftieth presentation night on Monday in Grauman's Egyptian Theater. Sid Grauman has invited members of the cast of the war drama as honored guests and souvenirs will be distributed to those attending the gala perfordmance. The classic production of romance, comedy and thrills, starring John Gilbert with Renee Adoree, is entering the twelfth week of its run in the Hollywood playhouse, and it will be the attraction there for only a few weeks more.

HARRY CARR EDITOR FOR PARAMOUNT

Newspaper Man Chosen to Act as Critic of Films Being Made

Harry Carr, Los Angeles newspaper man, has been appointed by Hector Turnbull and B. P. Schulberg, associate producers, t ofill the newly-created position of managing editor of production at the Paramount Studio.

Carr is a writer of national repute and a dramatic critic who ranks among the first in the country. He is an authority on motion pictures, having been chief adviser to D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and other producers.

He is co-author with Walter Woods of the story of "Old Ironsides," which James Cruze will film this spring as a super-epic for Paramount.

"Managing editor of production is a new department in motion pictures," said Schulberg. "It is designed to provide a critical viewpoint on continuities of screen plays. The critic's viewpoint in the past has been obtainable only after the completion of a picture, hereafter the attitude and reaction of the critic, acting as the voice of the public, will be given before a picture is made."

ATTENDANCE AT MAJESTIC GRATIFYING

"Weak Sisters" Playing to Crowded House at Every Performance

If the attendance at the Majestic Theater the past week is any criterion, then Lynn Starling's latest comedy, "Weak Sisters," is due for a long run at this theater.

While the play is rather daring in conception, the lines and situations are skillfully handled both by the author and players, with the result audiences are kept keenly amused as the situations develop.

In the role of the clergyman reformer, Franklin Pangborn is a mirth-provoker. The role is one that is made to order for this actor and he takes full advantage of his opportunities.

As the grandmother, Alma Powell, a new player at the Majestic, is making a decided hit with her audiences. Barbara Brown and Allen Connor make an ideal pair of lovers while Florence Oberle, Henry Hall, Genevieve Blinn and Ruth Stewart fit in splendidly in the other important roles. The balance of the cast includes Alice Keating, Jessie Glover, Aime Glover, Beth Hazelton, Billie Baxter, Viola McEwen and Ann Wenner.

Gang Fights in "Annie Rooney" Lively Humor

From the sweeping trains and velvets of costume drama, with stilted phraseology and stately mien, to the ragamuffin clothes of "Little Annie Rooney" and the fighting, biting, shin-kicking, roystering of New York's East Side slums—this is the screen transition Mary Pickford, foremost screen artiste, has encompassed in her new photoplay, now at the Alhambra.

Miss Pickford is perfectly at home in this story of New York's tenement district and the characterization of little Annie Rooney fits her as the proverbial glove. She takes the role of a 12-year-old daughter of a popular policeman, and leads a group of dirty-faced youngsters in rough and tumble battles against a rival gang, and has a secret infatuation for Joe Kelly, a strapping big truck driver, and pal of her brother, Tim Rooney.

The gang-fights in "Little Annie Rooney" are described by those who have been associated with Miss Pickford in the studio as screamingly funny scenes.

Three little flaring flounces set just on the back of the skirt of a crepe dress will give an air of difference to the remodeled garment.

kind of cartoon of utility, exceeded in its poignance only by the somewhat earlier episode of King Canute sitting on the beach and ordering the waves to withdraw.

Now, twenty-three years later, "Hedda Gabler" is in rehearsal and the central role is to be played by the first Hedda's cousin, that brilliant and eventful actress, Emily Stevens. There has been no production announced this season to which I have looked forward with greater interest than this one. There is only one other production, even dimly contemplated, to which I look forward with as much interest and that is just an aspiration, which may never work out at all.

In the back of George Tyler's mind there is the notion that in the spring he may be able to bring together for special matinees of "Ghosts" two stars at present under his management. He hopes (as I do) to see the role of Mrs. Alving played by Mrs. Fiske and the role of Oswald played by Glenn Hunter.

This consummation is threatened, of course, by several factors. For one thing, "The Rivals," in which Mrs. Fiske has been gallivanting about the land since some time in 1924, can absorb her energies indefinitely; then Mr. Hunter himself is considerably preoccupied with "Young Woodley," the rueful comedy of adolescent love, which has never known a vacant seat since its engagement began at the Belmont here in the fall.

At the end of "The Rivals" tour Mrs. Fiske might come into town for some special matinees, which would make "Ghosts" possible without interrupting the run of "Young Woodley." But she might easily feel, I should think, that she has brooded over "Ghosts" too long to play it lightly for mere matinees. I do intend, however, to serve on whatever committee of playgoers will make a scene if she ever announces her retirement without having once played "Ghosts."

"Hedda Gabler" is to be given by the Actors' Theater with a notable cast that includes Frank Conroy, Louis Cathern, Dudley Digges, Patricia Collinge and Beverly Sitgreaves. It should be ready week after next.

"The Master Builder" has been jogging along for some weeks past, produced by the dauntless Eva Le Gallienne with herself in the role first played in New York by Nazimova who was an inscrutable member of Miss Le Gallienne's first audience. Miss Le Gallienne, who was not afraid to go to Paris last summer and play Jeanne d'Arc for the astonished French at their own expense, would, of course, be unabashed by the mere prospect of tackling two Ibsen heroines at once, so, for matinee performances during the run of "The Master Builder" she is calmly rehearsing "John Gabriel Borkman," a magnificent tragedy almost unknown to the playgoers of this country.

Finally an interesting group of actors is furtively rehearsing "Little Eyolf," an Ibsen play which has not been seen in this town since the opening of a playhouse then known boldly as Nazimova's Thirty-Ninth-Street Theater. That was in the spring of 1910. Long ago the name of Nazimova faded from the title of the theater and the other day the theater itself began to crumble under the hammer blows of the wreckers. For an unborn office building is panting with impatience to assault the stars from that lot.

The impending "Little Eyolf" will enlist the services of Clare Eames, John Cromwell, Margalo Gillmore and Uspenskaya. Uspenskaya is one of the members of the Moscow Art Theater, who cast in her lot with America when that magnificent troupe sailed back to Russia a year ago. Those who saw her as the governess in "The Cherry Orchard" will guess what an inspired stroke of casting was her selection to play the alarming rat-woman in "Little Eyolf."

"The Master Builder," "John Gabriel Borkman," "Little Eyolf" and "Hedda Gabler"—these four, then, are likely to compete with one another in February. And, perhaps, "Ghosts" will follow in the spring. If the Tyler plan falls through I could bear up splendidly if only I were consoled by the news that it would be staged well with another cast. For the purpose, I nominate Margaret Anglin and Richard Bird— both members of this club.

In the meantime I appeal for information as to where and when the first performance in English of an Ibsen play took place in this country. Not so long ago, in an article in Collier's Weekly, I boldly asserted the conviction that it was the performance of "A Doll's House" given by Mrs. Fiske and William Faversham one night in Minneapolis.

It was a tentative production staged after the regular performance of "Caprice" and the date must have been either in 1888 or 1889.

upon gala premieres in this city. "The Love Call" will have its initial American showing at the Playhouse next Tuesday evening. Louis O. Macloon will surround the tuneful music of Franz Lehar's composition with settings and costumes which promise to enhance the beauty of the musical score. The company of seventy-five will be headed by the international star Grace LaRue and Arthur Kay will conduct the thirty-piece orchestra.

"Pony Express" Closing

"The Pony Express," James Cruze's great love epic, closes at the Rialto Theater tomorrow to make room for "That Royle Girl," D. W. Griffith's new Paramount production, which opens on Tuesday. "That Royle Girl" is based on Edwin Balmer's novel by the same name, which ran serially in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Feature roles are taken by Carol Dempster, W. C. Fields, Harrison Ford and James Kirkwood.

Denny at Metropolitan

Los Angeles is learning and laughing at "What Happened to Jones," this week, and Reginald Denny is portraying with his usual breeziness the rather startling adventures of the nice young man at the Metropolitan this week, where the screen version of George Broadhurst's famous stage comedy hit is holding forth. Marion Nixon, Melbourne MacDowell, Frances Raymond, Otis Harlan, Emily Fitzroy, Margaret Quimby, ZaSu Pitts and others of note are in the cast.

Monte Blue at Forum

Monte Blue in his latest Warner Brothers production, "Red Hot Tires," a fast-moving comedy scream with thrills aplenty added, is at the Forum, supported by Patsy Ruth Miller, Fred Esmelton, Lincoln Stedman, Charles Conklin and others; also Ted Henkel and his orchestra with special stage acts. A notable offering is the short subject gem produced by Craig Hutchinson and entitled "A Romance in Color."

Gloria Swanson at Uptown

"Stage Struck," with Gloria Swanson, is the attraction at the West Coast Uptown Theater, which opens today. It is a broad comedy with Miss Swanson as a waitress in a small factory town. Lawrence Gray is Miss Swanson's new leading man in "Stage Struck." Others in the cast are Ford Sterling, Gertrude Astor and Carrie Scott. On the Uptown stage Charlie Melson and his Play Boys add zest and pep in the way of musical numbers and specialities.

Sea Drama at Boulevard

"Why Women Love," the attraction which opens at the West Coast Boulevard Theater today, is a thrilling drama of rum runners and a battle for love in a lighthouse. The cast includes Blanche Sweet, Robert Frazer, Dorothy Sebastian, Russel Simpson and Charles Murray. Rube Wolf and his band will be seen and heard on the stage, and Herbert Kern will preside at the console of the mighty organ.

"Merry Widow" Remains

"The Merry Widow," Erich Von Stroheim's spectacular screen adaptation of the famous stage play by the name, is entering its seventh record-breaking week at the Million Dollar Theater. Mae Murray portrays the hole of "The Merry Widow," while John Gilbert enacts the part of Prince Danilo. One of Frank L. Newman's famous prologues, "Midnight at Maxims," is also on the program.

BIZARRE SETS DISCONCERTING

logues in his theaters in the West and since our own Maj. Bowes continues to offer programs for the fastidious in our own Capitol Theater here.

The picture at the Rialto this week which follows as long and painful a recital of musical acts as I have ever seen is, to be truthful, hardly worthy of anything better. It is "The Splendid Road," made by Frank Lloyd.

ZASU PITTS IN IT

But "The Mannequin" is being shown at the Rivoli and that is a picture which is more than moderately good. The story hardly seems worth the $50,000 prize which it won, but any story has some merit which gives a role to Zasu Pitts which brings out her talent for characterizing strange, misfit human beings, and which introduces anyone so deliciously lovely as Dolores Costello. This girl is so exquisitely beautiful and natural that it is a joy to watch her.

Of course, there were surprised souls in the theater who happened to know a little about newspapers—having read them or worked on them—who gasped audibly at the editorial which won favor for the young hero. A canvass of New York editors elicited the verdict that they would have fired him for anything so bromidic.

"Mannequin" is not one of James Cruze's best pictures, but it is considerably better than the pictures made by most directors.

Incidentally, James Cruze and Betty Compson returned from Tripoli on Wednesday on the same boat which brought a heavy cargo of film executives. Mae Murray returned from Germany without making any pictures there and it is reported that she will probably sign with Metro-Goldwyn again at a salary of $10,000 a week. Harry Rapf, of Metro-Goldwyn, was on the same boat, as was Sidney Kent, of Famous Players, who had been negotiating with U.F.A. abroad and the big three of British pictures —George Eaton, Herbert Willcox and J. D. Williams.

BRINGS ENGLISH FILM

Herbert Willcox brought with him prints of "The Only Thing" and "Nell Gwynne," the latter starring Dorothy Gish. It is expected that United Artists will release one or both of them.

Samuel Goldwyn skipped to Boston the first of this week to launch "Stella Dallas" there and on his return reported that its reception was as gratifying as that given the picture in New York. Last week, its eighth in New York, "Stella Dallas" took in almost $14,000. This is extraordinarily good for one of our small, legitimate theaters. "The Big Parade" and "Ben Hur" each took in over $20,000, "Ben Hur" leading by a few hundred dollars. These figures show that both pictures played to standing room at many showings.

The other pictures in Broadway theaters this week are Marshall Neilan's "Mike" at the Capitol, and D. W. Griffith's "That Royle Girl" at the Strand. "Mike" is one of those things that only Neilan could do. It has little story but an unusual setting and many delightful human touches. It is delightful and irritating by turns, delightful in the ingenious housekeeping of "Mike" and her brood of children and animals, and irritating when drunks, castor oil, and skunks are introduced. Sally O'Neil is not nearly so good in this picture as she was in "Sally," Irene and Mary." She shows a strong tendency to imitate. At times she is an imitation Normand; at others, it is the saucy, piquant Prevost whom she emulates. She had not yet found herself, apparently, when she made this picture. William Haines had. Never has he been so natural and charming.

With Mary Pickford or Colleen Moore in the leading role and with a strong, restraining hand guiding, Mr. Neilan's "Mike" might have been a wonderfully entertaining and memorable picture.

GRIFFITH MELODRAMA

"That Royle Girl" is rousing old-fashioned melodrama mighty well done. Carol Dempster gives an excellent performance and lends sly humor to every scene, even those typically Griffith ones, where the malevolent villain pursues her slender form. I dare say that this picture will make a greater box-office record than Mr. Griffith's epics, but it will add nothing to his artistic reputation.

Leatrice Joy in "The Wedding Song" is at the Broadway. This is my favorite crook picture and if I knew where to gather laurel I would hang it on the brow of Alan Hale, who directed the picture. It is one of those old, old stories that almost any director would have done in the approved, established manner and made thoroughly dull. But Mr. Hale brought a keen sense of humor to the goings-on and permitted Miss Joy to be herself, which is all anyone could ask. I would recommend "The Wedding Song" to almost anyone as entertainment.

All our studios are working full blast, and doing some promising things, too. Herbert Brenon, having struck a snag in the production of "Beau Geste," is making his first scenes in the studio here instead of in the Foreign Legion headquarters at Sidi Bel Abdes in Algeria. He had planned to use the Legionnaires in his film but, unfortunately, they had a pressing engagement to fight the Riffs in Morocco and simply could not respond to his call.

One of the leading roles is being played by Norman Trevor, who has abandoned the stage and signed a contract to appear exclusively in motion pictures for the next few years.

Pauline Frederick will soon start work in "The Nest," one of the big stage successes of a few years ago. Charles Whittaker is adapting it with great gusto and Daniel Carson Goodman will be in charge of making it. A small, new company is making it, but, even so, it ought to be good.

other week at that modest little playhouse. Riza Royce, Dan Freeman, Mique Spooner, Arthur Turner Foster, Irving Victor, Lavin Morse and others are putting over the two-edged periods of the play, which is smartly set.

"Kiki" at Morosco

"Kiki" is a play of the heart, if hearts do play at comedy, adapted from the French by David Belasco and exhibits what is enviously known as th "Belasco touch."

It contains all the Morosco favorites, skillfully directed by Augustin Glassmire, including Charlotte Treadway, Gavin Gordon, Richard La Salle, J. Morris Foster, Glenda Farrell, Joseph Eggenton, Jane Morgan, Will H. Gregory, Thomas Miller, Harry Hoyt and the chorus "Folies Montplaisir.

"Weak Sisters" at Majestic

At the Majestic Theater this afternoon, Lynn Starling's daring comedy, "Weak Sisters," will begin the second week of its engagement. "Weak Sisters" is a play for sophisticated audiences and is perhaps the spiciest comedy seen here this season. In the role of a reformer, Franklin Pangborn has a part that affords him splendid opportunity for his excellent comedy talent and takes first honors in capturing both laughs and applause. Barbara Brown and Allen Connor as a pair of lovers, Alma Powell as the modern grandmother, Henry Hall, Florence Oberle, Genevieve Blinn and Ruth Stewart are the other principals.

"White Collars" at Egan

Frank Egan's production of the Edith Ellis comedy triumph, "White Collars," goes serenely on its way at the Egan Theater, where it is about to enter its third year. Leslie Gage has replaced Betty Sinclair in the role of Sally Van Lyun, and has made a distinct hit. Craig Ward, Diane Esmonde, Marvel Quivey, Stuart Erwin, Blanche Douglas, Zellah Covington, Gordon White and Paul Kruger complete the cast.

All-Star Bill at Hillstreet

An all-star bill is being presented by the Hillstreet again tomorrow where many features are to be seen. Grette Ardine, the dainty dancer who returns with John Tyrell and Dave Kaye in a new offering is but one of the features, Gerald Griffin, renowned tenor and late star of grand opera will offer a selection of the classic and popular melodies. Ed Lowry has a new act called "Keep Smiling." Willie, West and McGinty, a trio from abroad, comes in a skit trio from abroad, comes in skit called "House Builders." Bert Yorke and Ed Lord are back with their comedy duo while the Nagfys, offer a mystery of fire and weird wondemments. Then scree features Johny Hines in a First National Picture entitled "The Live Wire." A newsreel comedy and a cortoon conclude.

"The Fall Guy" Remains

New York's favorite comedy hit, "The Fall Guy" enters its second triumphant week at the Wilkes Orange Grove tonight. "The Fall Guy" is a comedy in three acts by James Gleason and George Abbott. It deals with the characteristic denizens of the New York slums. Ralph Sipperly, who played the title role in the play in New York, is scoring heavily in the same role picture "Peter the Great," which called Jesse Lasky's attention to the potentialities of the budding director. Taking only short contracts for two or three pictures at a time he successfully directed "Danton," "All for a Woman," "Graustark," "Sappho," and "The Midnight Sun."

He recently signed a new contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and is now engaged in a superproduction with Pola Negri starring on a theme written by Ernest Vajda, the Hungarian playwright. Another big production is to follow to lend more speed to his meteoric flight.

His direction of "Graustark" indicates a thorough familiarity with court life of which the young man disclaims any participation except from observation at the Moscow Grand Opera and theaters where he watched imperial ceremonials and occasional appearances of royalty. His sightseeing glimpses of palatial interiors were all the training he had in royal atmospheres and local color of which his pictures are such expressive imitations. Imagination furnished the balance.

DEPLORES DECADENCE

Like many other Russian artists who have come to this country in the last seven years, Buckowetzki deplores the decadence of Russian court splendor. Even if he disapproved of it from an economical standpoint he regrets the passing of Russian contribution to art in his home country to other spheres of action. Not because of unkindly feeling to the United States, but for the reason that proper representation could have been effected to so much better advantage in the natural surroundings.

But there is a compensation for every misfortune. Thus he finds that the business end of the motion-picture industry gives the producer a wider scope to create better masterpieces. The American organization genius is mostly responsible for the stupendous improvements which the production of classic plays has inaugurated. American inventive ingenuity of mechanical devices has adapted itself to the requirements of the producer's art to an extent which could not have been matched in Europe, even in Germany.

That appears the most impressive accomplishment of the young director. The fact that he, as a stranger in a strange land, was capable in so short a time to assimilate American methods of direction to the point where he stands in line with such masters as Cecil De Mille, Griffith and Rex Ingram is a tribute to his genius in itself.

REQUIRES DIPLOMAT

For it must not be forgotten that negotiations with such incongruous elements as managers of corporations, stars, mechanics, photographers, scenarists, art directors, caption writers and property managers require diplomacy of no mean order.

Artistic impulse is one thing executive ability to satisfy administrative experts is another. The combination in a recent immigrant is little short of a prodigy. The blending of these requisites with a proper sense of savior faire requires the temperament of a philosopher, the intuition of an artist, commercial instinct of a business man and the acumen of an industrialist.

However, the personal assets of courteous approach, gentility of character and a pleasing personality will go far to make him as popular with the stars whom he directs as he seems to be with the employers who appear to court his talents. And with it all his achievements will conduce to a more equitable distribution of credit between the actors, actresses and stellar grandees in favor of the hard-working and hard-thinking director.

DENNY GIVES THRILLS TO GIRL LEAD

Marian Nixon Three Times Has Wild Rides for Films, and Says "Never Again"

Marian Nixon has three pet aversions—airplanes, racing cars and fast motor boats.

It's all the fault of Reginald Denny, with whom she has acted as leading woman for three successive pictures, the latest being "What Happened to Jones," screened from George Broadhurst's stage farce, and showing this week at the Metropolitan.

In her first picture with the Universal star, he promised her a ride in his airplane. When the flight was over, poor Marian, disheveled and forlorn, raised her right hand high in the air and promised never again.

During the making of the second picture, she accompanied the star on a ride in his racing automobile. When he finally released the throttle and rolled to a stop in the home stretch, she raised both her hands and repeated her vow.

However, when they were filming "What Happened to Jones" she again succumbed to the blandishments of the star. This time it was in Denny's motor boat. Now Marian will not even go for a walk with Reginald.

In addition to Miss Nixon, the cast of the new picture is peopled with ZaSu Pitts, Melbourne MacDowell, Frances Raymond, Otis Harlan and Margaret Quimby.

CORINNE GRIFFITH'S LATEST IS UNDER WAY

Casting Betty Noon to play an important part opposite Willard Louis in "Mlle. Modiste," filming is under way on Corinne Griffith's latest First National picture, adapted from the celebrated Fritzi Scheff stage success by Victor Herbert. Production of "Mlle. Modiste" was begun last week at Metropolitan studios under the direction of Robert Z. Leonard and preparations have been made to make this play not only as vivacious as "Classified," Miss Griffith's current release, but her most elaborate vehicle thus far. Miss Noon also has a role in "Classified."

Miss Griffith to Have Atmosphere in Mlle. Modiste

If there is anything in getting atmosphere for motion pictures, Corinne Griffith is getting it in the filming of her latest First National picture, "Mlle. Modiste," which has been adapted from Fritzi Scheff's famous musical comedy. "Mlle. Modiste" is French and Miss Griffith is seeing to it that there is as little pseudo-French in it as possible.

Rose Dione, former French stage star, and Paulette Duval, also of the French stage and screen, are among the principal characters of the play. Several of the technical staff are French as well as two of her musicians. French music prevails during the filming of all scenes. A number of chic French models display the latest creations of French designers in the French modiste's shoppe and among the most active 'bit' players are such local French girls as Andreva Nunes, Bettye Noon, Peggy Blake, Sherry Adams, Evelyn Campbell, former Follies featured dancer and of English-French descent, Countess Stella de Lanti, Rita Carita, Nina Raymonde and Nadia Faro. A real French gendarme is used in the exteriors and even the street cleaner, outside of Mme. Claire's French shoppe is a real Frenchman.

New Collegiate Waltz Rapidly Gaining Favor

Popular fads and fancys in the modern dances are like pendulums, says Harvey H. Carroll, dancing master at the Hollywood Roof Ballroom. He says that the college students, always "first with the latest" have taken to the "Collegiate Waltz."

The Charleston first leaped into instant popularity as danced by the younger college set because the students demanded something exhilarating and full of exercise.

But the collegiate waltz does that too, says Carroll, one of its most ardent supporters, and Miss Duane Thompson, of the Christie Comedies, who is his dancing partner in the seductive glide.

BEAUTY AND POISE WIN, SAYS ROACH

Producer Who Signs Vivien Oakland Asserts Flapper Type on Wane

"The public today will pay more attention to beautiful women who can act than pretty flappers who can't. The day of the flapper is decidedly waning on the screen, both in comedies and features, and really good opportunity presents itself for the girl who has acquired the poise and charm of maturity. If a girl can fascinate through real beauty and cleverness she will advance far above the flapper types who rely on 'cuteness' for their appeal."

That statement from Hal Roach, whose revolutionary production activities in the comedy field have attracted wide attention, and who just recently returned from a conference with executives of Pathe exchanges, the Keith-Albee vaudeville circuit and other organizations centering in New York, has considerable value beyond the worth of an opinion because one important item of news backs it up.

He has signed Vivien Oakland, the fascinating feminine half of the vaudeville team of "Murray and Oakland," on a long term contract. She will play leading roles in Hal Roach comedies.

John T. Murray, the masculine half of the team which in private life is a highly successful marital team also, is making rapid progress in pictures in comedy and comedy heavy portrayals.

Miss Oakland was born in Oakland and began her career on the stage as a child in the Alcazar Theater of San Francisco. She has been several years in vaudeville and played several important engagements on Broadway in New York.

LEARNING THE GAME

The difficulties which beset a director are now fully appreciated by James O. Spearing. Aside from writing the adaptation and continuity in conjunction with Gladys Lehman, this former picture critic is encountering many obstacles in the selection of the type of cast he desires for the first picture he will direct for Universal.

CUTTING BARA FILM

Richard Wallace is at present cutting and titling the recent picture in which he directed Theda Bara.

HIDES BEAUTY UNDER JEWELS

More Effective Than Cambric Model

Conrad Nagel and Claire Windsor

A JEWELED mask, one for instance made of pearls, is far more entrancing for a beautiful blonde like Claire Windsor to hide behind than ever one made of colored cambric could be, thinks Andre-Ani, head costume designer at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who included this new pearl one in his many surprises when designing the costumes and unique jewelry for Claire's latest vehicle, "Dance Madness."

Together with a brunette wig, which Claire here wears, the star of the picture seems to have Conrad Nagel, her husband in "Dance Madness," in the unique position of making love to his own wife whom he supposes to be "Valentina," his favorite French dancer, of whom he is enamored.

BOYS PIRATE COSTUMES IN ERROL FILM

Decide to Emulate Bold Sea Rovers Witnessed at Work in Picture

When is a pirate not a pirate?

That is the question which arose during the filming of "Clothes Make the Pirate," produced in New York with Leon Errol and Dorothy Gish in the starring roles, and now at Loew's State.

The story begins at the Cosmopolitan studios. Most interested among the spectators of the filming were the urchins of the neighborhood, who perched upon the fence to snatch glimpses.

For their special amusement Errol staged some of his drollest antics. The youngsters came to the conclusion that if pirate life were so diverting pirate life for them.

So one morning they slipped over the fence, and pilfered a newly laundered set of pirates' costumes which had been delivered. When Director Tourneour called his cast together he found them bemoaning the loss of their pirate habiliments.

Mike Brody was put on the track. It was easy to follow, for through the neighborhood was a trail of crying youngsters who had been attacked by the invading pirates. These pointed out the path of the mischief makers and it was not long before Brody caught up with them and recovered the loot.

The culprits were then handed over to their mothers, whose toil-worn hands impressed upon them the folly of piracy

Director Rogell Busy Editing of Three Films

Al Rogell, the young director who has been making action stories of the outdoors at Universal, is busy editing and cutting the last three pictures he directed for this organization. He has been working on such a speedy production schedule that he has continued his shooting without stopping to edit the film after actual photographing was completed on any production. His last three pictures for Universal include "Raleigh of the Range," "The Desperate Game" and "Grinning Guns," all starring Jack Hoxie.

Last week Rogell held a preview on "The Overland Trail," which was made in Deadwood, S. D., with the aid of the dwellers in the Black Hills and which attained such a high standard that Universal executives have announced its distribution as a special for the coming season.

Far West Builds New Theater at Carthay Circle

Out in the exclusive Wilshire district the Far West Theater Corporation, under the direction of Fred A. Miller, is having a magnificent new theater structure built, to be known as the Carthay Circle Theater.

More than $500,000 is being spent on this enterprise, which is to have many unique and novel features in construction. The building is to be Spanish in design, with a tower which will give it a commanding position in the entire Wilshire and Beverly Hills section.

Beautiful boulevards lead to this spot from all sections of the city and suburbs and it is only a short distance from the center of Hollywood. The Pacific Electric cars pass within a block of the entrance and situated in this very accessible spot it is predicted that the Carthay Circle Theater will take a commanding position among the amusement palaces in Southern California.

Three crews of artisans are working on the building, which is scheduled to open about the middle of March.

STARS IN PERSON AT EGYPTIAN

Sid Grauman to be Host to "Big Parade" Principals at Presentation Festivities

With stars of the cast invited to attend as guests of honor, extensive preparations are being made for the observance of "150th Presentation Night," Monday evening to celebrate the 150th consecutive performance of "The Big Parade," with Sid Grauman's patriotic prologue, in Grauman's Egyptian Theater.

Renee Adoree, who plays opposite John Gilbert as his French sweetheart; Rosita Marstini, who appears as the French mother; Claire Adams, who portrays the American sweetheart; Claire McDowell, in the role of the American mother; Hobart Bosworth, as the American father, and Robert Cher, who is seen as the brother who stays at home, are invited to attend as Sid Grauman's guests.

To commemorate the occasion, dainty souvenirs have been prepared and will be distributed at the presentation. Film celebrities and leaders in the civic, social and business life of the city are planning to attend the celebration.

"The Big Parade," directed by King Vidor for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, now is in its twelfth week at the Egyptian, following its world premiere on November 5, which was attended by every celebrity of pretensions in screenland.

At the end of the run of the classic war drama in the Hollywood playhouse, Grauman's colorful prologue will pass into history, as he has refused offers to permit his stage spectacle to be taken elsewhere.

Universal Buys 'Das Opern Glas' to Star Kerry

"Das Opern Glas," a German novel by Gabrielle Reuter, has been purchased by Universal and will be used as a starring vehicle for Norman Kerry, instead of Reginald Denny, as originally announced.

The story has been adapted by Don Cobb, of Universal's eastern scenario department, under the title of "Three Women and A Man." It is a highly sophisticated comedy, with Kerry as a dashing Don Juan, and the three women, all of whom are in love with him. One is an American girl, one a temperamental Italian beauty, and the third, a little Dutch girl.

Universal also has purchased Frank O. Spearman's collection of ten short stories called "The Nerve of Foley." Five of the stories have been grouped together and adapted by Cobb into a big railroad melodrama, to be directed by Edward Sedgwick.

Spanish Dancer Wins Place in Screen Colony

Old Spain again has contributed its seasonal offering of art to Hollywood. And this time the offering comes in the petite form of Armida Vendrell, 17-year-old dancing sensation of two continents.

Armida, who already has gained a large Los Angeles following with her whirlwind dancing in West Coast and Grauman prologues, is a native of Barcelona. The daughter of many generations of stage people, she was trained to dance in Spain, where she became a theater favorite in early childhood. Several successful seasons in Mexico City followed before Armida made her bow to California.

And now the films have found her! Armida has been engaged to fill a half-dozen screen roles, which promise to carry her fascinating pantomime and twinkling feet into the favor of the whole American nation.

CAMERAMAN GETS NEW PART AS FILM ACTOR

Maurice Kains, the cameraman who became an actor when Louis B. Mayer saw him in a test film, and who recently played his most important role in the Cosmopolitan production of Ibanez's "Torrent," with Ricardo Cortez and Greta Garbo, has been placed under a new contract at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios.

Kains, who lost track of his mother while in the Navy, sought to be an actor that his mother might see him on the screen and thus locate him. Failing to get on the screen he became a cameraman; then Mayer saw him in a test scene taken to try out a new lens, saw the possibilities in the youth, and gave him his chance as an actor. The new contract shows that he made good.

The big event of the current week will be the picnic of the "Buckeyes" of Southern California. Capt. Frank M. Bering, secretary of the Federation of Ohio Societies, is in charge of the plans and will prepare to care for 15,000 guests.

There is considerable confusion over several picnics owing to announcement of local rallies. These are Illinois, Wisconsin and Colorado.

This is the first event of many which, in connection with the liberal prize offer, will make a big addition to the membership of the order here and make a backing for the Order's hospital that is to be built in the near future.

Reports at the meeting Tuesday evening showed an unusually large number of patients in the hospital and surgical department.

concerts and it is hoped that next year a series may be offered especially designed for school children.

Pomona College

One of the unusual events of the year recently conducted on Pomono College campus, sponsored by Alpha Kappa literary society, featured the work of Carlisle Tupper, former student of Pomona College, who, for two years, has been appearing on the California stage. Two years ago she was seen in productions of the Theater of the Golden Bough at Carmel-by-the-Sea, and last year she played on the legitimate stage in Bakersfield and Los Angeles.

Her program was delightfully varied, including a one-act play, which was given without any other assistance, several monologues, modern poetry reading, children's poems and two pianologues.

The Business Woman's Club will present Mrs. Guy F. Bush, well known in club circles, at its midwinter picnic meeting tomorrow evening, in her lecture-recital on "Hymnology," musicall interpreted, when members will be privileged to bring guests. Many years ago a group of women in Lincoln Heights decided to form a little club and study Shakespeare. At first they met at the homes of members, then in one of the church parlors. Wednesday this club, now the Wednesday Morning Club, will celebrate its twenty-eighth birthday when nearly 200 women will gather in the large clubhouse. Among them will be a few of those who formed the little Shakespeare Club so long ago. A fine musical program has been arranged for presentation by the Orpheus Four, male quartet, Sam Glass, tenor and manager. Tea will be served after the program and a birthday cake will be cut in honor of the occasion. Luncheon hostess, Mrs. Fred Heller.

Woman's Press Club

Donald Ogden Stewart, genial author of "Perfect Behavior" and "A Parody Outline of History," is scheduled to appear at the open program meeting of the Southern California Woman's Press Club next Tuesday. Mr. Stewart, one of America's best-known and most-popular humorists, will speak on "Modern American Humor." Other interesting names that go to make up a promising program for the Press Club are Nancy M. Schoonmaker, lecturer and author, who will give a dramatic talk, "The Dreams of Peace," and Archer Morseby White, English orator and barrister, who will discuss "Criminal Justice and Its Needed Reform." Mr. White has made a study of criminal law and legal procedure both in Europe and America.

Music lovers are anticipating a delightful musical program with the appearance of Alexander Kisselburg, baritone, who has many enthusiastic admirers in Southern California. Mr. Kisselburg will be accompanied by Ivy Mae Travis at the piano. Following the program Mary Clough Watson and Myra Caine Grant will preside at tea.

HERE'S MEANING OF REAL THRIFT

Miss Whitaker Denudes Soul to Explain Week

Doing Without, She Asserts Real Economy

But Errors of Conservation Terror for Her

BY ALMA WHITAKER

It is really very swanky of the United States to institute a National Thrift Week. We seem to be the only country that needs one. Other countries have to learn to be thrifty before they learn to spell. A jolly national extravagance week would be more in their line.

It is so sumptuously glamorful of us to coyly admit that we are a nation of dashing reckless spenders, large generous souls, who just chuck our money about. Nothing niggardly and pettifogging about us. Nothing but the best is good enough for us. None of your genteel poverty grubbing for us. Easy come, easy go, that's our motto.

And, of course, this National Thrift Week is no end of a joke. Why, dash it all, we don't know how to be thrifty. Speakers all over the country have to explain what it means and how it's done. It seems to involve the gentle art of doing without. Doing without! Doing without! How interesting, how novel, how frightfully amusing!

ELIMINATE WASTE

It also seems to involve the elimination of waste, being careful, economical, skimping . . . ugh. Fifty-one weeks in the year we call this stinginess, parsimony, miserliness, close . . .

Thrift, of course, places it on a higher plane. Hence, it is only during a National Thrift Week that I would dare confess to being a naturally thrifty person. And not until those exciting war days when conservation had such jolly innings, did I dare divulge my shame. Then, of course, providing I restricted it to sugar, bread, meat, and cereals—oh, yes, and paper—I was quite comme il faut.

Ordinarily, however, I have to practice my thrift on the sly. Put it over with artful tact. Or, when caught in the act, laugh it off with brazen insouciance.

Saving matches by lighting a dead one from a lighted gas jet is one of my pet thrifts. I usually burn my fingers and waste an extra minute, and I know my housekeeper is gazing at me with the contempt I deserve, and I feel foolishly explanatory—but there it is. I simply can not waste a new match if an old one will do the trick.

Another nasty habit I have is turning the gas down directly the pots boil. I am, however, careful to explain that this is not to save the gas bill, but to prevent the maid's lovely clean pots from getting blackened. I hope she believes me.

DARN HOSE!

If I had any pride, I should, of course, see that the family hosiery was magnificently discarded at a stage far short of senile decay. But, instead, in spite of my better judgment, I mend the darned things until they are all darns and no hose. Not content with wearing such disreputable things myself, I brutally expect the family to wear 'em, too. One of my pet—and most objectionable—remarks is that "If I can take the trouble to darn them, it certainly won't hurt you to wear 'em." That is my stingy English coming out—to the infinite sorrow of my American family.

I can also prove most unpleasant about stale bread. The sight of a pile of stale bread in people's garbage cans makes me positively furious. And as for any in my own . . . phew!

But in order to justify this attitude against that insidious "Fancy making such a fuss over a nickel's worth of stale bread," I have to practice infinite self-sacrifice and deceit. With fine diplomacy, I confer the ends of the bread on the children as a reward of special virtue. I insist that this is the piece de resistance of the whole loaf. But, as I also train my lambkins in self-denial and generosity, they usually insist upon foregoing this epicurean morsel for mother....! Oh, yes, thrift has its snares.

Turning out the lights in places where they are not actually needed is another thrifty habit of mine. What I go through when we have company and lights are left flaunting their glitter all over the house, few will ever know. Only half of my mind is attending to being a gracious hostess, and the other half is scheming up excuses for slipping out of the room and turning off the lights.

"But, gosh, it only means a few cents," my family reminds me contemptuously. Whereupon I am quite apt to become statistical and remark that a few cents a day means enough to cover the house insurance at the end of the year ...oh, you can't imagine the pitiful arguments we cheap thrifty souls can conjure up.

That's the trouble with a thrift complex. I can always see all the things the money wasted on superfluities would have bought.

"Well," I am apt to gloat triumphantly, "I dyed two old waists and three pairs of stockings and two ties with a ten cent packet of dye today. Now that represents at least $15 if I had had to get new ones. That $15 will cover the light, gas and telephone for this month." My family exhibits a cold lack of enthusiasm over these ebulliences of mine, especially if I didn't strike a good color with the dye, and dyed my hands a ghastly purple as well, and mussed up the kitchen.... Only we thrifty ones know our own sorrows.

WEARS ERRORS

But I think my most heart-tearing economies are my stern sense of duty in wearing my mistakes. Yes, the dress may be all wrong, the hat most unsuitable, the shoes a bad fit, the scarf the wrong blue, and my artistic eye infuriated whenever I gaze in the mirror, but my duty stands out clear and compelling. Thrift demands that I wear the dratted things. Something stronger than I insists that I must be thrifty first and sartorially correct a long way afterward. And when one considers that woman's first duty is to be beautiful....!

But there's this to be said for it. Nothing makes me feel so self-consciously righteous as thrift. And it is so jolly to have "something laid by" so one's flaunting extravagant friends can borrow a trifle in a crisis, or know you for a darned old skin-flint, fair-weather friend.

OF ART AND ARTISTS

By Antony Anderson

Leisure

What is this life if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare.

No time to stand beneath the boughs
And stare as long as sheep or cows.

No time to see, when woods we pass,
Where squirrels hide their nuts in grass.

No time to see, in broad daylight,
Streams full of stars, like stars at night.

No time to turn at Beauty's glance,
And watch her feet, how they can dance.

No time to wait til her mouth can
Enrich that smile her eyes began.

A poor life this if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare.

"My Wife," by Francesc Cugat

One of the five portraits by Cugat now being shown at the Stendahl Galleries, Ambassador Hotel.

THE HIGH SCHOOL BOY LOOKS AT PICTURES

Much has been written on art in Los Angeles during the past week. For the pupils of our high schools have been delegated to write theses on this simple subject, and have haunted the galleries with sharpened pencils and eager intelligences. Their "impressions" will make far more interesting reading than mine, and I have jotted down some of them for you.

Let us follow in the footsteps of these bright young critics, who were much in evidence at the Biltmore Salon, where the Painters of the West are giving their fourth show. We will listen, but discreetly, to their naive and sometimes acute comment. We will hide our own notebooks and peep at theirs. Then they will consider us nothing but harmless "earnest seekers"—which, of course, we are.

One thing we will say on our own hook, however. The Painters of the West have no particular cause for pride in this exhibition. Not a few of them appear to have been very careless as to what they sent in. Any old canvas did duty—when, as a matter of fact, only the latest and best should have done it. Reputations don't grow big in this haphazard way. They are builded laboriously, conscientiously, and by the taking of much thought.

And now let us listen to the chief among us. We may not hear everything he says, and much of it we may forget, but some of it will stick.

"The Rose," by Jean Mannheim. Pretty and pinky, isn't it, and hasn't the girl got a smile, though! Lot o' light in the picture, too. My teacher says Mr. Mannheim is a fluent craftsman. "Portrait of Jay B. Millard" by Max Wieczorek. Gee, but it's a good likeness. (Note by the editor: Wieczorek's portrait of Mr. Millard was painted for the Virgil High School, where it is to have a permanent place of honor. Mr. Millard is principal emeritus of this school. He is one of our best known and best beloved educators, and has seen forty years of service in Los Angeles.)

"Desert Hills," by Charles P. Austin. Looks as if it was painted with a currycomb. But it's strong, it looks real. I like it as well as any picture in the whole show. I like Carl Oscar Borg's "Desert Home," too. It's got good color, and it's simple. Maurice Braun's "Mountain Road," looks just like California, and so does Arthur Hill Gilbert's "September Hills." But both of them are, sort o' woolly.

But there isn't any wool in Maynard Dixon's "Desert Hill," and there isn't any in Clyde Forsythe's "Liquid of Life," and none in George Townsend Cole's "Grand Canyon." All these pictures come from desert, and John Frost's "Chino Canyon," does, too—mountains that look dreamy and beautiful in the light. So does Frank Tenney Johnson's "The Rising of the Moon." That artist sure does know how to pain horses and Indians and moonlight.

I'd like to have Orrin White's "Sycamores El Capitan" on the wall of my room. It sure would make a fine decoration. And Alson Clark's "Still Life," where you can almost smell the roses. I think that picture has technique. Here's a pastel by William A. Griffith—lots of nice, bright color, beach umbrellas and bathers. Look at that gorgeous peacock by Karl Yens. That fellow sure can paint. It's a water color, too, the biggest and best I ever saw. It must have been a tough job to cover so much paper.

I like William Wendt's landscapes. They're great. But I think this one is kind o' spotty, too many little trees in the middle. But it's fine, for all that. John Cotton's "Desert Homestead" is nice. So is Aaron Kilpatrick's "Late Afternoon, Lone Pine." You feel California in 'em. Hanson Puthuff's "Twilight's Peaceful Hour" is California, too. And Jack Wilkinson Smith's "Passing Showers," though I think the shower shouldn't have fallen just on top of the tree, but a little more to the left. The picture lacks what they call balance, I think.

Let's look at some mountain scenes. Edgar Payne has a good one, nice and gray, called "Towering Peaks." I guess it's from Switzerland, where the artist was last year. Benjamin Brown has one that is all snowy peaks, with a cold lake in the middle, "Christmas Morn, Yosemite." I like it. I wish that place wasn't so far away—I'd go there right now.

There's a few good sea pictures scattered about. Let's hunt 'em up. Here's one, "Blue Hour," by Armin Hansen. It's got mystery, and it's what Antony Anderson on The Times calls "broad and simple." That critic likes Hansen, and I guess he's sized him up just about right. Here's one by Jack Wilkinson Smith. "Golden Hour," that's a corker—real rocks and real sea and real light. It's alive. Douglas Parshall's "Sun Reflections, Monterey," is alive, too. The water sparkles like a lot of jewels thrown around. It's a fine picture. So is Edgar Payne's "Boat at Anchor"—lots o' color—and William A. Griffith's 'Diver's Cove."

John Hubbard Rich sure does know how to paint a Chinaman. Look at "Wo Hoy in American Clothes," by him. And isn't his little Mexican boy. "Frederico," a dandy piece of work. Alive and laughing, that's what that kid is. I think Mr. Rich is a fine painter. Edouard A. Vysekal, too, is some humdinger with his brush—sort o' free and easy, but he gets there. If you don't believe me, look at "Man with Turban." Arthur M. Hazard's pretty girl out walking with a big Newfoundland dog is in the English style, isn't it. Anyhow, it reminds me of some of those old masters, it is so golden brown and pleasing in color. Mr. Hazard's boy with the porcupine hair looks as though he was alive and ready to talk to you any minute. I think he's well painted.

Down there on the opposite wall is the last of the figure pieces on the catalog, "Arabs in the Market Place," by Douglas Parshall. It's almost as good as his marine piece—color that is beautiful, but not gay, sort o' subdued. I like it.

Our art teacher says that we should never say, "I don't know much about art, but I know what I like"—but how can you help it sometimes?

THE FIVE PORTRAITS OF FRANCESC CUGAT

Though Francesc Cugat's exhibition at the Stendahl consists of no less than seventy-six pictures big and little, and is grouped as portraits, paintings, Spanish impressions and decorative motifs (these last being in opaque water color,) I shall dwell, in this brief review of it, almost entirely on the five portraits.

My reasons for this segregation and exclusion are several, the chief one being that portraiture is an entirely new departure for Cugat, though we have seen his symbolistic paintings and his decorative fantasies more than once at the same galleries.

Cugat's portraits are, it seems to me, far ahead of anything he has hitherto done, and at least three of them, "Pitirrie," "My Wife," and "Self Portrait," are remarkable for their vitality, their originality and the brilliant quality of their color. The other two, "Thoroughbreds," and "Little Girl in Blue," though as vital as the first named, are smaller and less important, not on the same high plane of imagination.

With his strong predilection for symbolism in painting, Cugat does not quite escape it even in some of his portraits, though here you make it as negligible as you please, for it does not obtrude itself above the esthetic.

Now, to me at any rate, and, I think, to most lovers of art for art's sake, symbolism is not pertinent to painting. A canvas, to be a thing of joy forever, should be a thing of beauty—only this, and nothing more. The story, the sermon, and even the symbol are all very well in their place, but none of them can do much—if anything—to help a picture. The story and the sermon are absolutely verboten. The symbol is sometimes permissible, but unless its meaning can be caught at a glance, it tends to vex and perplex the beholder, who is interested in paint, not piety.

Francesc Cugat's symbolism is abstruse and esoteric. But it is always expressed in vivid color and beautiful line, and for the sake of these we forgive the artist, and proceed to take much pleasure in the color and the line, the esthetic of the work, quite obvious of its various complex and hidden "meanings."

For instance, in "Ecstasy" we are enthralled by the drawing of the central figure and the Hindoo woman to the left, and we are fascinated by the energy of Cugat's technique, though we may—and probably will—decline to probe into the exact significance of the whirl of blue sky and the lotus in the Hindoo's hand. So with "Power" and "Paradise" and others of the canvases in the group assembled under the head of "Paintings." I defy any man to understand "Power" without elaborate explanation.

But Cugat's seventeen "Spanish Impressions," small canvases of a jewel-like clarity of color, all undoubtedly painted at a white heat of enthusiasm, speak for themselves and need no outside interpreter. They tell us of many aspects of life seen by a man of keen sensibility and a well-trained hand. The gallery in which they hang seems to sparkle and glow—to be itself alive. Not the sign of a symbol in any one of them.

"The Spaniards"—and Cugat, though now an American, came from Barcelona—love an amplitude of landscape even in their portraits and figure studies. In pose, "Pitirrie" reminds us of a Goya, though its plangent color is Cugat's own. And the modeling of one bare shoulder and the rhythmic curves of the loosely hanging arm and hand are reminiscent of the loveliness of Sargent's "Madame X." Like Madame X. the charming Pitirrie is gowned in black. The painting of the black chiffon is a triumph of virtuosity. Yet I am sure that Cugat was thinking of neither Goya nor Sargent when he painted this really distinguished portrait, but only of the subject and problems before him.

"My Wife" is entirely different in theme and scheme. The gown of striped gray and red silk that the sitter wears spreads as proudly and innocently as the tail of a peacock—or the flag of our country. The picture is instinct with life and youth and beauty. And with all its vitality, it presents still-life accessories painted with extreme delicacy. In the background, to the right, we glimpse a sunlit hacienda of—Hollywood.

"Self Portrait" is as successful—or unsuccessful—in representation as most self portraits, for few artists see themselves quite as others see them. They look into a glass darkly, and as soon as their eyes travel back to the canvas they forget what manner of men they were. So they paint an ideal—what they would like to be. Robust in color and drawing, direct and honest in expression, simple and unaffected in pose, Françesc Cugat's portrait of himself may be declared good.

PASADENA CRITIC ON JANUARY SHOW

Water colors, delicate and brilliant, representative of a trip through the Hawaiian Islands, form an interesting group on view at Carmelita Gardens this month. They are by Anna Marvell, an artist who has already shown her art and scope in studies of the Orient and who has a decided flair for fixing certain phases of foreign life with a clever artistry. A wide range of pictorial topics is dwelt upon in the collection, which is bright with the lure of the Pacific isles and blithe with the art of an appreciative observer.

Harold A. Streator has a room at Carmelita this month. There are five portraits in the collection. The study of Claire Eames is an aristocratic portrait. The artist also shows a series of landscapes, both of home and overseas scenes. Of the former, the study of the Arroyo Seco is unusually beautiful; of the foreign studies the picture of "Chesiere, Switzerland," is a thing of loveliness.

Aaron Kilpatrick is represented with a roomful of landscapes. There is a vague beauty about the canvas, "Gray Day, Morro Bay," and there is great dignity in the study of "The White Sycamore." The sentient significance of this barren tree is indicative of a subtle appreciation of natural things.

About the paintings of Nona L. White there is a gentle loveliness. "An Opal Day" has delicate beauty. There is a uniformity in tone and color in all the studies, which are pleasing withal.

Mrs. H. A. Everett has loaned an interesting collection for the January display. Among the pictures are three by the late Guy Rose. These are among his best, revealing the soft and dreamy beauties he so capably exploited. There is a Benjamin Brown picture in the loan collection, as well as other artists' work.

This month's display by Pasadena artists is up to the customary standard. Herbert Van Blarcom Acker shows a portrait of Miss Agnes Clark which has all the characteristic traits of his style. Jane McDuffie Thurston shows a rugged stretch in the canvas which she exhibits. John Frost is in a typical mood in his study of "Clouds and Shadows." "Sunshine and Flocks" is a picture by Frederick Zimmerman which shows the fine artistic qualities of this artist, and Benjamin Brown, in his "Monterey Dunes," reveals that rare character, that fine finish which marks his best work.

Other Pasadena artists with works on view are Wallace L. De Wolf, Ada Belle Champlin, Orrin White, Louis Hovey Sharp, Antoinette De Forest Merwin, Carl Moon, Frances Clark, F. Carl Smith and E. B. Butler.

Considerable interest attaches to a canvas, recently discovered in Pasadena, and which is claimed to be an original by Anton Mirou, a painter of the Flemish school, who lived and worked between the years 1614-1653. If the claim of its being a Mirou is correct, the Pasadena gallery is showing a choice piece of work, for other canvases by this painter are in museums in Vienna, Madrid and Petrograd, as well as in other European cities.

Mirou was essentially a painter of biblical landscapes, but in the Pasadena picture, a scene of outdoor life is picturized. The canvas has all the characteristics of a genuine old painting; indeed, its colors and tones are deepened with that beauty which age brings to oils—[Alexander Inglis.

Portraits by Soper

Five very attractive portraits by Gardner Soper have been showing in the music room at the Biltmore Hotel. Unfortunately, their stay there was very brief. An unusually beautiful piece of painting is the portrait of Mrs. Walter Simons, beautiful in color, excellent in arrangement. The portrait of Frank Elliot, is also a fine work, subtly true in character. So with the portraits of Mrs. Will Flint and child, the portrait of Mrs. Soper and the portrait of Maj-Gen. Bailey.

Panels by Holmes

The series of decorative panels that Ralph Holmes is exhibiting at the MacDowell Club will be given further notice in this column next week.

New Art Gallery

The Wilshire Galleries, 3309 Wilshire Boulevard, were formally opened to the public on the evening of Tuesday last. This gallery will exhibit modern paintings and etchings.

All right, here's your chance. The owner and builder of 133 NO. FLORIDA — CALIFORNIA
"I cannot dignify Florida by comparing it with California."
$25 DOWN. $25 A MONTH.

Am Chicago lawyer, and for quarter of century on frequent visits here have bought real estate. Last summer I motored over Florida for the purpose of selling my property here and investing in Florida and advising my eastern clients as to advisability investing in Florida. After motoring from Jacksonville to West Coast south to Ft. Myers and then again across the State to Miami, I was asked, "how does Florida compare with California from an investment standpoint?" My reply was, "I cannot dignify Florida by comparing it with California. There is no basis for comparison. I shall not invest in Florida and shall advise my clients to the same effect." I, therefore concluded to keep my 29 lots here (12 corners) and build bungalows on them this winter. However, I became ill, was in a hospital and under doctors care for 3 months in Chicago, was sent out here to convalesce with strict injunction to engage in no business. Am still under doctors care and consequently instead of building I am compelled to sell my lots, fully improved, with every advantage, schools, churches, &c transportation, restricted. To sell quickly I am making unusual price and terms.
Price $1400 to $1800.
$25 a month and only $25 down. Everybody can own a lot. See my brother today, 3901 SOUTH PARK AVE., or telephone him, VAndike 7232. Anyone desiring a number of lots or all can see owner, Louis Henry, temporarily 1763 W. 50th st.

A
TO THE MEN OF
LOS ANGELES COUNTY

THIS AD MAY SOUND EGOTISTICAL, BUT IN ORDER THAT I MAY GET MY MESSAGE OVER, AND TO ENLIGHTEN THOSE WHO OFTEN WONDER "CAN IT BE DONE" I HAVE GOT TO.

TALK

I HAVE BEEN IN THIS COUNTRY LESS THAN FIVE YEARS. UPON MY ARRIVAL IN CHICAGO, I ANSWERED AN AD SIMILAR TO THIS AND STARTED TO WORK AS A REAL ESTATE SALESMAN THE SECOND DAY. EVERY DIFFICULTY, EVERY OBSTACLE, EVERY HARDSHIP THAT ANY SALESMAN IS CONFRONTED WITH.

I

AND I WOULD NOT ASK ANY MAN TO DO SOMETHING I WOULD NOT DO MYSELF.

I

MY EDUCATION WAS NO BETTER THAN THE AVERAGE.

MY
WERE GREATER POSITIVELY

I KNEW NOTHING OF THE REAL ESTATE PROFESSION—I DID NOT KNOW THE CITY, NOR DID I KNOW ONE LIVING SOUL IN THAT CITY. IT WAS UP TO ME TO WORK, AND

I
WORK.

SIX MONTHS AFTER I WAS APPOINTED DIVISIONAL MANAGER, AND IN LESS THAN ONE YEAR I WAS GEN. SALES DIRECTOR OF ONE OF THE WORLD'S LARGEST REAL ESTATE ORGANIZATIONS.

ABOUT MYSELF

IT IS PURELY TO SELL YOU TO YOURSELF. EVERY MAN POSSESSES THE ABILITY TO SUCCEED IF HE WILL BUT WORK

LOYALLY
HONESTLY

ON MONDAY MORNING AT 9:30 I AM GOING TO TALK COLLECTIVELY TO TWENTY

WHO WANT TO GET OUT OF THE RUT. I AM GOING TO BE HONEST WITH THEM, AND WILL PUT THE FACTS SQUARELY BEFORE THOSE WHO ARE ANXIOUS TO SUCCEED. HARRY H. CULVER & CO. DO NOT RUN EXCURSIONS, NOR DO WE MAKE A CIRCUS OF THE WORLD'S HIGHEST PAID PROFESSION. OUR METHODS ARE CLEAN. OUR DISCIPLINE STRICT AND OUR MEN ARE MAKING MONEY.

SALESMANSHIP

IS A DECIDED SUCCESS. OWING TO OUR LACK OF SPACE WE HAVE HAD TO TURN AWAY HUNDREDS, BUT WE ARE NOW LOCATED IN OUR

AUDITORIUM

WHERE WE CAN ACCOMMODATE FULLY ONE THOUSAND STUDENTS

MEN

MAY TAKE THIS COURSE, AND ENROLLMENT NIGHT IS

MONDAY,
JANUARY 18TH
AT 7:45 P.M. SHARP.

THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO EXPENSE WHATEVER ATTACHED TO THIS COURSE. OUR FUTURE DEVELOPMENT DEMANDS SALESMEN TRAINED OUR WAY. SUCCESSFUL STUDENTS WILL BE GIVEN AN OPPORTUNITY TO WORK FOR US, EITHER FULL OR PART TIME. AS OUR CLASS WILL FILL RAPIDLY IT IS ADVISABLE TO COME EARLY.

FOR RENT OR LEASE—Furnished house, 5 bedrooms on 2nd floor, 2 and attic on 3rd floor. Large closets, large bathroom, would build others, living room 23x40 ft., separate entrance hall, den, back hall and stairs, breakfast room, cabinet kitchen, just the right size. Oak floors, downstairs, hardwood floors upstairs. So many windows there can be as much sun and light as desired, furnace, big fireplace that does not smoke, but heats all downstairs, sun porch, garage, shower rooms, gas stoves, when desired, in bedrooms, for temporary heat. Built for a home, plain beach style, but very substantial and good looking. Tenants always enthusiastic about its comfortableness. ½ blk. from ocean on one side. On the other a natural lagoon, rising and falling with ocean tides, fine for still water bathing, small launches, boats and canoes. When tide is low, lots of clams.

It is in the loveliest south residence district, short auto run to town on delightful Washington Blv. or in cars. Has gorgeous sea and mountain view. Is never as cold in winter nor hot in summer as adjacent inland, nor as much fog as other locations. In all the world, no other air and climate so fine—eternally sweet and lovely, just mild enough never to be harsh, but never too warm not to be refreshing. Rent reasonable to careful tenants. OWNER. 1640 W. 11th. Street.
